'Old West' To Open In Spring Of 1978

A page out of history will soon spring to life in the desert of Southern Nevada when "Old Vegas", a family oriented western theme park and motion picture studio opens Phase I along the Boulder Highway in the Spring of

The development is being constructed by Old West Corporation, which is managed by Old Tucson, the world famous Arizona tourist attraction. Heading Old West Corp., is Robert Shelton, president of Old West Corp., and Old Tucson. Shelton officially announced the start of "Old Vegas" at a Sahara Hotel press conference Friday.

Located near the junctions of U.S. Highways 93, 95, and 466 in Henderson, "Old Vegas" will be comprised of 55 of the company's total of 124 acres. Phase I of the park will. cost $2.5 million.

"Old Vegas" was designed by Shelton and masterplanned by LARC of Dallas, Texas. Principal architects for the development are Wells, Tate and Kennedy with general contracting by Robert L. Smith Construction.

"Old Vegas" will re - create the vivid and colorful past of Southern Nevada while providing fun, excitement and entertainment for entire families.

Great care is being taken to insure the authenticity of the colorful history of the area while capturing the spirit of the old west. The western streets of the park were layed out by noted Hollywood art directors to accommodate motion picture production companies. Plans call for a 12,800 square foot motion picture sound stage similar to Old Tucson's where dozens of motion pictures and television shows have been pro-

Notable among the TV programs were Bonanza, Death Valley Days, Gunsmoke, How The West Was Won and Little House On The Prairie. The motion picture studio will have complete wardrobe and production facilities.

Dominating the park from the highway will be the high adobe walls of the "Mormon Fort". Visitors will enter by crossing over a wooden plank bridge which pans the waters of Las Vegas "stream". Once inside tourists will begin a journey of historic fantasy.

The fort will house a historical museum, sutlers store, rip roaring Hondo Cantina and other glimpses of life in the old west. Outside, gunfighters will shoot it out right before your eyes on the dusty streets of this frontier town.

In a quieter part of the park visitors can walk down old Block 16, the street where lots were auctioned off by the railroad in 1905 to lure settlers and stimulate travel to the Wooden boardwalks lead out of town to a rough and tumble mining camp with sour doughs and claim jumpers. There a guest can board a mine train for a ride through the desert.

Nearby are the tree - lined streets of "Charleston Square". Here children can drive a Stutz Bearcat, watch a magic show, visit the Flying Jenny Airfield or thrill to a daring "roaring 20's" bank hold up staged by desperate gangsters.

Among the attractions in the park will be an antique train, old time cars, replicas of old frontier buildings and

Shannon Hearing Rescheduled For Jan. 25

A hearing on an appeal by Basic High School Special Education teacher John Shannon to resume teaching duties, has been rescheduled for January 25 to allow his attorney, George Foley, more time to prepare.

Charles Fleming, information officer for the Clark County School District, said a hearing convened on December 5 before Hearing Officer Attorney Mike Cherry, but it was postponed.

Shannon was arrested on charges of two counts of lewdness with a minor under the age of 14 about a year ago and has not taught since, pending action.

The case was later dismissed on a "technicality," and Shannon said at the time that he had every intention of returning to his teaching duties since he had done nothing wrong.

Fleming said that following the hearing on January 25, Cherry will make a recommendation to the school board for official action. How ever the determination is made, the case could be stalled longer by legal action on either

Federal anti-recessionary fiscal assistance funds, slated by the Henderson City Council to provide wheelchair ramps in downtown Henderson for disabled persons, cannot be used for that purpose. according to a directive received by the city this week.

The City Council had appropriated $8,000 of the funds for wheelchair ramps in downtown Henderson to make the sidewalk and buildings more accessable.

City Manager, Bob Campbell said, "I am very surprised they choose interpretation, for it is far from being in concert with federal directives on providing access to the handicapped."

A letter was received by the city from Maria C. Lameiro, Nevada Coordinator for intergovernmental relations for the office of Revenue Sharing, in which she said that the payments may not be used for new construction or renovations which are not repairs. Repairs, she explained are expenditures made to maintain a structure in ordinary, efficient operating condition.

The funds could be used for routine sidewalk maintenance expenses, such as patching, 'The construction of wheelchair ramps, however, involves expenditures beyond the scope of ordinary repairs, and therefore, is not a

The driving forces behind the development of "Old Vegas" has been the Board of Directors of Old Tucson in collaboration with Johnny Mitchell, founder of Mitchell Energies of Houston, Texas; Cecil Simmons, former executive with the Desert Inn Hotel and Casino, Las Vegas; and Ellison Miles, Dallas, Texas oil producer and owner of Hollywood Studios General, Inc.

Also attending the press conference and touring construction of "Old Vegas" were Old Tucson and "Old Vegas" board members Jerry Blackwell of Tucson and Henry Plitt, president of Plitt Theatres, Los Angeles. misjudged the market on that type of talent," Campbell said.

Prior to going to Pullman in 1973, Anselmo was Director of Administration for the Chief of Police in Menlo Park, California. He was with Menlo Park from 1964 to 1973, and was noted for bringing participatory management to the department, along with an improved public image through stressing the "service" aspect.

BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION Anselmo has a Bachelor of Science degree in business administration, and is completing a master of arts degree through Washington State University. He is a member of the International Association of Fire Chiefs, the International Association of Chiefs of Police, the Washington Association of Sheriffs and Police Chiefs, and the Washington State Association of Fire Chiefs. He is a member of the State Advisory Committee on Safety Standards for Fire Fighters, and Vice Chairman of Region 13, Washington State Law and Justice Advisory Committee.

As Public Safety Director for Henderson he will be administratively responsible for fire, police, civil defense, animal control and emergency medical services. These services involve 100 people and a total budget of $1.3 million.

Anselmo and his wife, Dorothy, will be moving to Henderson shortly after the first of the year. Campbell said the appointment will be on the January City Council agenda for ratification.

In coming to Henderson, Anselmo said he sees Pullman without the potential of growth in Henderson. He said he faces challenges with the new position here but said he dealt with the same number of unions in the Puliman job. He said there may be a shuffling of records to one department, that will be decided when he takes over duties here. He has already met with police and fire officials and the unions of both groups. He said he hopes to win the confidence of both groups.

Campbell said the city will still save about $20,000 a year from the two salaries of the department

"I'm looking forward to getting down here and getting started," Anselmo said. "Right now we're looking for a house."

perhaps the police are in the least enviable position, because we must often deal quickly with unanticipated crises which arise. Even when there are no crises, police still come in contact more frequently with people, than any other representative of government. As a consequence, many citizens know their government and its policies primarily through the practices of individual police officers whom they meet on a day to day basis. There seems little doubt that the way police conduct themselves will have a major impact upon social change and common good. Knowing this, what should the policy of police be?

It is sometimes said that all police need to do is remain neutral. But it may not be apparent that neutrality is, when confronted with a bulldozer moving ahead and a human being lying in its path to stop it. The objective of neutrality seems clearly to be a proper one, but not easy to define in particular circumstances. If, for example, certain types of assaults are viewed as less serious by one segment of the community than by another segment, does neutrality require equally strict enforcement throughout the entire community, or may enforcement remain neutral and at the same time refelct differences in group attitude? It is also said that all

police need to do is to enforce the law fully and fearlessly, leaving it to other governmental agencies to decide whether policies should be continued or changed. The objective the criminal law is one of the traditions of the American system of government. This is probably what is meant when we say, with pride, that ours is a government of law and not of men. But the objective of full enforcement, if taken literally, is not possible, and even if it were possible, it would result in a clearly intolerable situ-

of full enforcement of

Whatever was said about our traditions, we do not in fact want an automatic mechanical enforcement of our criminal law. Rather we want an intelligent and responsible exercise of discretion in the development and implemenation of a law enforcement policy which is effective and consistent with the requirements of law, and with the traditions of a democratic society.

These are objectives difficult to achieve. They are doubly difficult during a period of rapid social change. To some extent, responsibility for the development of law enforcement policy at the local level falls upon Mayors and other officials, trial courts and prosecutors.

But it is apparent that much is left to the police agency.

In a period of rapid social change, it is important to ask how an officer can steer a course of neutrality if he cannot rely upon the principle of full enforcement of the law against all citizens, regardless of social or racial status? The difficulty of the task makes pretend that the problem does not exist, or that the responsibility is not ours, a common and understandable public attitude of many police officials today. But I have been long convinced that police agencies have as important, perhaps more important social, ploicymaking responsibility as many local, state or federal administrative agencies. And the common denial by police of this fact has had an adverse effect upon police themselves. and upon the communities which we

They come in colors such as solid red of various shades; black with tan spots, black nose and nails; chocolate with tan spots and brown nose. Coming into popularity is the Dapple colored Dachshund (or spotted).

Dachshund is German for "Badger dog." First recognized in Germany in the seventeenth century, he was a good hunter for wild boars, foxes, wounded deer and his specialty, badgers. This dog was very much like our modern smooth and long - haired Dachs when he came to the attention of hunters. The Dachs, then as now, was bred for strength, stamina, and courage.

Owners of the Dapple smooth - coated standard Dachshund and miniatures are Mark and Linda Fields of Henderson, Nevada. The young couple acquired an interest for the breed in 1968 and after reading up on everything obtainable of the breed, they her good "friends"

Another up - and - coming "prize" dog for the Fields is the diminitive, sweet and lovable "Maxshon's Li'l Silver Doll" or "Molly!" Molly, a Dapple miniature, is starting on the show circuit with the hope of stashing up credits like

The little badger dog has a good deal of selfwill and as Linda told us, They take command of the house without you realizing it within a week or residence!" They adapt to climate, terrain and general change easily. They do not shed; are very clean and thrive on your love. If you have no love in your heart, not even for a helpless dog, don't get a Dachshund! They wouldn't be able to bear the "cold" hospitality.

Even with the crude reference of "hot - dog" the Dachs is a sophisticate. Men who usually wouldn't dream of owning a small dog, end up invariably with a Dachshund if he has to choose because of space restrictions. Dachshund "floats!" He doesn't walk; you will find him like a little legless "bug" with the mid air glide he has. His front legs are shorter than the back and you will not find a dog with the gait of the Dachs. He is to be found in country homes for the more discriminating, right to the plush apartment dwellers of New York's Park Avenue! He rivals the poodle in glamour prestige. He is a little dog you can be very proud to Linday laughingly tod us, "When ever I drive through town, people who know our little red station wagon point us out as the Fields Weeny Wagon!" Mark and Linda Fields love their dogs and all breeds. "It is just that we have found everytning we were looking for in this breed," Linda added, "and that is saying alot after owning and enjoying other breeds!"

So he is low; so he is long; so his is floppy eared; so he is the Dachshund! The world may have it's porblems; everyone may be hot and bothered, but the little Dachshund travels along with his floating gait, with his pretty little nose high in the air thinking, "I'm a little bit different, and a big long, but I am an aristocrat, that I am!"

PET TIP: Linda and Mark Fields find that the Dachshund, although hardy, may at times be prone to back problems such as slipped discs. They advise owners to please keep their Dachs thin. Also to clean out their ears with a cotton ball and rubbing alcohol, being careful not to penetrate the ear. Only clean what you can see. People who own Dachshund or are interested in the breed may join the Las Vegas Dachshund Club by phoning Linda Fields at: 565 - 0308.

If you own an interesting, different or champion pet and live in Henderson, phon the writer at 734 - 2390 for a possible write - up.

TODAY'S QUESTION: Do you think that the Holiday Season is overly commercialized? Explain. What is your ideal Christmas Holiday?

NOTE: Interviews were conducted at the SAFE-WAY STORE. Boulder Highway, Henderson Nevada.

JANET WAFFLE -Homemaker - I certainly do! It starts much too early and people invariably run themselves into debt and over - do physically. Christmas is not celebrated with the meaning it was intended. More of a religious thought instead of expensive gifts should be stressed. Children should be taught the original Christmas thought. The Holiday spirit should prevail all year long. Instead of purchasing gifts for people one hardly knows, the families should get together, attend church and pleasantly spend the day.

BELINDA REBER -Rainbow Club Employee -Yes! Christmas is a more spiritual holiday. Children are much too enthusiastic about the presents which is not their fault since it is caused by the adults. They should be taught the true meaning. It doesn't mean what it used to years ago. Christmas should become more family oriented and time should be set aside for spiritual reverence. The family dinner and gifts should follow the time for prayer and remembering the Nativity.

JUDY WATSON Homemaker - Yes! The advertising starts too early in many stores. I've attributed this to worry about sales competition. They wouldn't have to worry if they sold things lower in the first place. I do enjoy gift giving. Our family has always been "big" on Holidays. I enjoy the spirit of the Season and grew up in the happy atmosphere. Holidays should be festive with family and friends.

DRAPERIES

ADRIENNE PEASE (daughter, Jennifer) -Homemaker - Yes! It is very much overly - commercialized. I've seen advertisement start in some stores as early as October. That is just too much! About one week after Thanksgiving is time enough to start the Christmas Season. There is too much stress on "Santa" and expensive gifts. The stress should be on Christ's Birthday with a spiritual family - type celebration. I also think that homemade gifts hold more meaning. Things people make or create, even baking gifts. These type of gifts hold more meaning for me.

BESSIE HANKINS -Retired Nurse - Yes! It is a religious holiday. It happens to be the birthday of the Christ. There is just too much glitter and Santa Claus. I'm not overly religious but it is good for families to attend church together. The true meaning seems lost, it definitely is too commercialized.

VIOLA HEINLE Homemaker - Yes! There is just too quick of a start to the season. It has become too modern with emphasis on new fads of toys, jewelry, and all sorts of expensive gifts. Some of the toys turn out to be real "duds" and are simply a waste of money. The Christmas commercial build - up misrepresents what it is all about, the birth of the Christ!

SUMMARY: The people interviewed would love to return to the "Currier and Ives" description of an old fashioned holiday. They would like to capture the friendliness, spirituality, good - cheer and simplicity of the event.

What's This? Santini Votes Against Our B-1

WASHINGTON, D.C., December 7, -- Congressman Jim Santini (D-NV-AL) yesterday voted to remove funds which have been appropriated for research and development of the B-1, although no money will be saved by halting the project at the advanced stage which has reached. Henderson's TIMET plant would enlarge with B-1 work, if it were approved.

The Congressman's position was not supported in the final vote, however, and the House decided to appropriate the funds 166-191. The Senate had earlier deleted the monies at the request of President Carter. This is the third time the House has voted to keep the funds even though the President requested the bombers not be continued.

On June 30, President Carter had announced his intention not to build the B-1, but to rely instead on the aging B-52 to meet national defense needs. yesterday's debate, Congressman Thomas Luken (D-OH) argued for the funding of the B-1 saying: "We must recognize that we have made a promise to the American people to provide ample national defense systems. Without the B-1, this promise is impossible to keep." He later added: "We in Congress should not make this mistake. We cannot afford to jeopardize our defense efforts and our SALT talk efforts. A vote against the B-1 would create an even larger breach of trust between American people."

Because the research and development programs for the B-1 bomber have already been approved and are in operation, by cancelling the program at this late date, a large amount of money will need to be spent just to halt the project. Congressman Bill Chappell (D-FL) explained: "If we take the action proposed by the chairman of this committee, we will take out some $462 million and then go out and spend another $750 million in cancelling contracts. For a total of $990 million -- monies which have already been appropriated -- we can obtain aircrafts five and six and complete this vital research program."

Aircraft numbers five and six represent an essential link in the B-1 development cycle. Four

B-1 bombers have already been built for research, and two final aircraft are in the planning stages for final study. Congressman Alexander (D-AR) pleaded with his colleagues: "I ask the men and women of this body that, while the cruise missile is in the development stage, let us not gamble on defense, let us not play politics with national security. Let us continue the research and development that is necessary to produce a manned bomber should the cruise missile fail to produce the results that are desired."

The future of the B-1 now rests with the Senate, which will probably vote on the funding measure after the Christmas recess.

A Summons From St. Nick

by Dorothy A. Vondenbrink

I was brought to my feet by a tap, tap, tap, That came from my sliding glass door. As I pulled back the drape and looked outside There was a strange little elf sitting on the porch floor. He was playing a fife, or reed pipe of a sort And the tune was charming and slow. I opened the door, just a crack to hear But the music compelled me -- and so As the strange little man beckoned to me, Though he spoke not, nor uttered a sound, I followed him out through the desert a way Then I could not believe what I found For the moon had cast a path of light That led to the Milky Way; As I put out my foot to test the path I was suddenly wisked away. We traveled along on a wisp of a cloud That was soft as fine Angel hair And looking down at the valley below

It was morning, and yet there was no sunrise, For it was winter, the season of night; But the pale white light of the moon on the snow Made it sparkle, and the whiteness gave light. From the North Star came a shaft of light On which we slid to the ground, Then on to the home of Ole St. Nick, We followed the streets as they wound through town.

I just knew we would soon be there.

St. Nick greeted us at the door of his home And invited us to come in for hot tea I told him I was becoming a bit concerned At the delay of his summons for me We talked about his pre-Christmas calls Which he makes the night of the 5th of December And he said he was worried, because of reports That people are not very loving or tender. I agreed that things at times seem bad But it was time to act, not to falter For only by showing that to love is to care Can we hope, poor behavior to alter. St. Nick just smiled and then laughed his great laugh And said "HO! HO! what a time to be living, For we have the best opportunity now To prove LOVE is the key to good living."

He then went outside and climbed onto his sleigh. And as the reindeer leaped out through the sky. I heard him exclaim: "I'll see you next year, GOD BLESS YOU ALL WITH LOVE -- NOW GOODBYE.'
