

BUSINESS FIRMS ARE ASSIGNED STREET NUMBERS

Gigantic Parade Set for Saturday Afternoon at 2

Goblins, witches, ghosts and other Halloween characters will be portrayed by local children in a gigantic children's Halloween Parade to be held on Saturday, Oct. 29, at 2 p.m. The event is sponsored by the City Recreation Department and will be directed by the BPOE Lodge, 1956.

Costume prizes have been donated by local merchants and include such items as electric trains, wagons, dolls and "Dance With Me Henry" dolls, "Alice in Wonderland" tea party, chair, footballs, football headgear, musical instruments, and Davey Crockett moccasins and hat.

Merchants donating these prizes include California Pacific Utilities Company, Bank of Nevada, Rexall Drug, Rexall Fountain, Morrell Realty, Basic Management Inc., Ideal Appliance, La Porta Insurance Agency, Turner and Coleman, Jimmy's Shoes, Byrnes Grocery, Swanky Club, Lucy's Childrens Shop, Larkin Plumbing and Heating, Basic Auto Parts, Henderson Appliance, Richardson's Department Store, Van Valey Shoes, Foodland Market, Henderson Telephone Company, Baird's Service Station, and Victory Theater.

Prizes will be awarded in three age groups; pre-school children, First through Fourth grades and Fifth through Eighth grades. Prizes in each group will be given for boy's most original costume; girl's most original costume; boy's finest costume; and girl's finest costume.

Judges for the event will be Mrs. Darrell Pitts, Jimmy Shields, James Van Valey, Mrs. Ray Shutt and George Campbell. Judges will accompany winners to the stand, present the prizes and introduce the children.

The Basic High School Band and Henderson Elementary School Band will furnish music for the marchers in the parade. Children will assemble in the vacant lot between the Bank of Nevada and the post office at 2 p.m. They will be assembled by grades with teachers assigned to accompany the pupils. Each group will be provided with a sign designating its grade.

The line of march will be up Market Street to Ben Church Memorial football field and past the judges stand near the east end of the bleachers, where the winners will be selected.

This may come as a surprise to some Henderson businessmen, maybe all of them. For the first time in history, their business establishments all have street numbers. At the last council meeting, Mayor James French directed Herman Muehleisen, director of public works, to inaugurate the numbering program for business firms and the temporary numbers for the Townsite business district were released Monday.

Eventual goal is for all houses in Henderson to be numbered. That project will be instituted later when money is available for an extensive survey and compilation of a master plan.

It was emphasized the business firm numbers are to be considered only temporary, but it's possible they will remain the same when the master plan for numbering all buildings in Henderson has been approved.

Distinction of having the lowest number goes to Harve Perry's Shop, No. 1 West Pacific St. Highest is the Blue Ribbon Meat Market in the Miller Building, 152 Market St. The Fire and Police station has been designated as 120 West Atlantic Ave.

The list of numbers of all business establishments follows:

Rotary Club Turns Over $433 to Youth Center

The Rotary Club turned over a check for $433.22 to Hershel Trumbo, president of the Youth Center Building Committee, at its regular weekly meeting last Friday.

The check represented the net profit made by the club in its drive to sell tickets for the recent Community Fair in Las Vegas. $34 collected at the meeting was added to the donation to the Youth Center building program. Max Welling served as chairman of the Community Fair committee.

"FIVE FOR FIVE"

Five employees of Stauffer Chemical Company recently returned from Wilson Creek Range near Ely where they spent several days hunting. The men, Dean Carter, Lew Black, Lang Price, Walter Dancer, and Roy Hughes, each brought home a buck.

NEEDLES GUILTY OF 'QUESTIONABLE' TACTICS, BUT WOLVES WIN, 55 - 0

While Coach Charles Razmic didn't actually say so, talking to him you get the idea the Needles high school football team was guilty of some "dirty" tactics in the Basic game last Friday night at Needles. And worse still, you derive the impression that the officials (not southern Nevada) were even more guilty by permitting some of the Needles obvious flagrant fouls to go unpunished.

Coach Razmic isn't complaining, apologizing or alibing. He doesn't have to. The score tells the story. Basic 55 and Needles goose egg.

In reviewing the game, the Basic grid mentor reported his team was assessed a total of 155 yards in penalties. Needles lost only 30 yards the same route, "and the violations weren't that much one-sided," Coach Razmic emphatically states.

Despite the rugged battle, the Wolves came out of the fray in fairly good physical condition. L. C. Bolden lost three teeth, Bob Barker suffered a broken nose and Frank Porter has three prominent cleat marks in the vicinity of his ribs.

Because the game turned into such a donneybrooke, Coach Razmic kept his first stringers in for three-quarters of the game, which largely accounts for the top heavy score. The Basic headman said he kept some of his younger and inexperienced players out most of the game on purpose because he didn't want to take a chance on any of them receiving serious injuries.

He admitted that while some of the calls were questionable, "we hurt ourselves by evident penalties, too."

The Wolves jumped into a 21-0 first quarter lead, increased the margin to 28-0 at the intermission, upped the scoreboard to 48-0 at the three-quarter mark and added seven more points in the final period.

Leading the scoring parade was Porter and Barker with two touchdowns apiece, while Dave Anderson, Bob Peck, Jim Miller and Ray Ware chipped in with one TD each. Porter also made good on seven of eight conversion attempts.

Outstanding players singled out by Coach Razmic were Tackle Bernard Cannon, Fullback Anderson who chalked up a nine yard average in nine carries and Quarterback Peck who connected on five of six aerial attempts, two of his tosses being good for touchdowns.

The Basic coach also reported that tackling and blocking of all members of the team showed a big improvement.

As a reward for the victory, the Basic varsity took a well-earned respite from their grid-iron chores Monday and will be inactive again this afternoon. Then it's back to work again Wednesday to prepare for Blythe.

The Wolves are idle this weekend but buck headon into Blythe the evening of Nov. 4 at Henderson. After that, only the season's big finale remains, Nov. 11 against Boulder City at Basic.

By BILL GILLIS

That deer Mayor James French shot in the Ruby Mountains near Elko last week is going to cost him plenty, and he wasn't cited for any hunting violations. But wait until he gets the bill for the repair of his Ford station wagon.

The mayor, Health Officer James McKay and a friend, Frank Tiscareno, of Los Angeles, left for Elko last Wednesday night—and almost failed to reach their destination. The mayor's station wagon didn't.

The trio was about ten miles from Caliente when, according to McKay, a heavy semi-truck crowded them over to the extreme edge of the road. The mayor was driving and in order to avoid an accident, maneuvered the station wagon to the right. The vehicle hit a good-sized boulder, slithered off onto a soft shoulder and finally wound up against an embankment. Luckily, the three all escaped injury, but the front end of the station wagon was extensively damaged and the right front wheel broken.

That didn't end the deer hunting expedition. Also in their party but in another car were Police Chief George Crisler and his brother, Ferdinand. They picked up the trio and all continued on to Elko. Each member of the group bagged a deer, the largest weighing about 140 pounds.

McKay returned to Henderson Sunday and reported that hunting is unusually good in the Ruby Mountains this year, although most of the deer are to be found at the higher elevations.

Shearing the Camel

MEXICAN vaqueros feared nothing on earth they could lasso. In the early days a popular sport was to rope a grizzly or a puma, and so great was their skill that such stunts became common. But Old Heenan, great patriarch of the camel herds along the Carson River about 1870 made a different story for the daring cowboys.

A practical joker first suggested the vaqueros rope and shear Old Heenan for his luxuriant, silky hair, which the Mexicans wanted for the fine decorative effect on their elaborate saddle rigs. The vaqueros took the suggestion seriously and two of them actually rode up to Old Heenan one day, dropping their nooses skillfully from each side at the same instant!

Old Heenan rose, unhinging like a fire escape ladder, and then dashed at one mustang with open mouth, gnashing teeth, and fetid breath blowing like steam. (Horses so feared camels that camel trains were forbidden by law to enter a city in daylight, and this mustang proved no exception). He went crazy with fear. An instant later and Old Heenan charged the other pony. By now both horses were screaming in terror, rearing, plunging, trampling down great areas of sagebrush. At last the Mexicans cut their highly prized riatas. One vaquero stepped down to the ground for an instant in a futile attempt to snatch up a loose, trailing riata, but Old Heenan charged him. He leaped into the saddle and slapped spurs to his hysterical pony. Both men rode frantically for a nearby Indian village. Old Heenan galloped close behind, sparking green fire from his eyes and blowing like a steam engine going upgrade.

The vaqueros offered a Paiute $5.00 if he would recover their valuable riatas, now trailing in the dust from Old Heenan's leathery neck. For $5.00 the Paiute would dare anything, and he had seen enough of the camels to know them.

Gingerly he crept up behind the standing bull camel. Silently he picked up the trailing ends of the riatas. But at the slight movement, Old Heenan's ears laid back flat, he rolled his eyes, screamed, wheeled and flew at the unlucky Indian, big teeth snapping, neck arched.

The Paiute "brave" froze in horror, then galvanized into a red streak through his little Indian village. Right behind him flew old Heenan, among wickiups, brush huts, baskets, and cooking fires, snapping at papooses, squaws, dogs and ponies. The entire Indian village population fled screaming into the nearby Carson River, splashing for dear life to the opposite shore. Old Heenan screeched right up to the bank and then stopped, snorting and blowing and gnashing his teeth while he paced indignant and frustrated up and down. It was the first and last time anybody suggested shearing camels in Nevada.

Correctly so, he was flagged to the side of the road by a traffic officer.

"I'm going to give you a citation," was the officer's opening comment.

"Really can't use him," was the BC businessman's retort. "I know he won the Kentucky Derby and a million dollars but just haven't any place to keep him in Boulder City."

The officer laughed — and then proceeded to write out the businessman a traffic citation for driving 20 miles per hour in a 15 mile an hour school zone.

Which should be a good reminder to all that when you're traveling through a school zone during school hours, ease up on the accelerator.

And it doesn't make any difference if you're driving through Las Vegas, Henderson or Boulder City. They're all innocent school kids. Just live in different cities.
