

CITY SEEKS TO FILL DAY'S CHIEF BUILDING INSPECTOR POSITION

MORRY ZENOFF'S 'Morry' Story—

Community response to an important issue was so terrific last week that it all prompted an immediate result that meant savings of several thousands of dollars to the people of our town.

Bright and early Thursday morning many of the townspeople received their city water bills... each showing an increase and the new rates.

Bright and early, too, our HOME NEWS telephone was jingling and jangling and jumping—as the people called us to register their complaint. They had understood the new rates go into effect in December and will be payable in January.

We kept count to make sure it was a general complaint instead of a few—and as soon as we were satisfied it was the will of the majority we went to work.

Rae Von Dornum started telephoning the councilmen. I raced over to Mayor Bill Byrne's grocery emporium. Dolores and Lura Winall and Linda Froom answered the continuous ringing phones.

Mayor Bill went into action—so too the councilmen—and within an hour—the issue was rectified... with the verdict that the morning's billings were a mistake—that all water users won't feel the rate rise until they receive their January Bill.

Such is the job of the community newspaper—to answer your call—jump to serve you—as long as it is the will of the majority.

We're at your service!

Question of last night—Who knocked the 'L' out of Bowl on the bowling alley's pretty highway sign in front of its building. Probably just a shorted plug—the BOW part is ok.

Just wait til you see those new Xmas decorations on the downtown light poles... they're beautiful say the two Bobs—Olson (chamber prexy) and Woodruff (chairman).

BMI reports that our city's use of water during the past year is much less than the year before—and gives credit to the water meters. Rarely did we go over the 5 million a day contract with BMI—use to go as high as 9 million.

Around The World In 80 Seconds

(Far be it from us to tell you what to read, how to read, when to read—but may we let this column be a sort of a check list for you in helping you keep up with what's going on in the outside world.)

The events of the world are too great, too important, too interesting for us to let pass by. At the least it makes the most fascinating reading.

So—may we present the following summaries of important world stories—and we'll do this from time to time until the daily papers realize it is their job to do that and our job to bring you the community news.

Let's call it—"Around the World in 80 Seconds" (reading time that is).

Reports from the first National Conference on Air Pollution emphasize Los Angeles' dissatisfaction with what the automobile industry is doing to help curb smog.

"Disappointing and contemptuous" were the words used.

Against a background of political deadlock in Kenya, a new and militant African organization has emerged in the apparent belief that it can effect African advancement by lawlessness and violence.

The movement is the KKM—the Kiama Kia Muingi—which Kenya's British Governor, Sir Evelyn Baring admitted recently has gone "very deep indeed" in parts of Kenya.

Side by side with the establishment of people's communes in Communist China, authorities are pressing forward with the "everyone a soldier" movement.

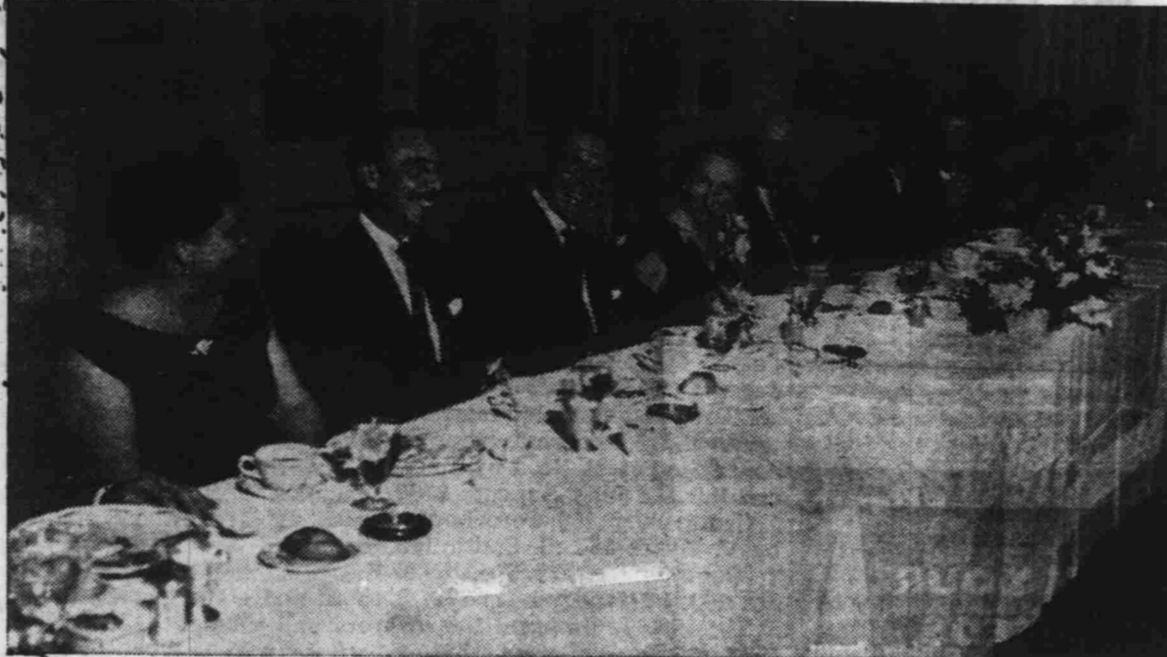

This home-guard organization, described as a defense force imperialists, had enlisted near-against invasion by "Americanly one-sixth of Communist China's 650,000,000 people by the middle of October.

France has not yet become a member of the world's "atomic club" but is standing on the very threshold.

The country expects to take a further new step in this direction with the construction of a submarine of the Nautilus type to be driven by nuclear energy.

The Navy has cut its jet seaplane program, and possibly because of its interest in nuclear powered seaplanes.

Vice-President Richard M. Nixon and Nelson Rockefeller apparently have reached an understanding to avoid stepping on each other's political toes until 1960.

The Pittman Women's Club decided to donate this doll to help raise money for the ambulance, in return for the many acts of kindness on the part of everyone in the city who helped in the construction of the Pittman Community Center, as the ambulance is something that will be of value to everyone in the city.

Applications are now being accepted for the job vacancy that was created when City Building Inspector Charles Day Passed away suddenly last week.

Because of the importance of the job, a man with considerable experience plus one with a full knowledge of the building code and city ordinances is required.

Pat Doherty, head of the building department, has taken over some of Day's former duties and the 27 year old Don Stukas was transferred into the department for a probationary period to determine whether he can qualify to stay there. His pay equals the scale being paid to the plumbing inspector.

Some 300 building permits are the work load of the department, now and 108 of them date to the past few weeks—creating the roughest load in years.

After all information has been checked on candidates applying for the chief building inspector's spot, a board of review will check as to whether a new person should be hired or whether one of the present city personnel could meet the specifications outlined in manuals used by many progressive cities.

"The tendency is to get younger men", City Administrator Clay Lynch explained, "and also to try to upgrade present personnel whenever possible. However, the best interests of the city must always be taken into consideration first."

Suggest Aid To Back Home Town Papers

Carl Zielke, manager of the Wisconsin Press Association, told an audience of businessmen and civic leaders that they have an obligation to support their local newspaper in every way possible.

In a Newspaper Week address in Kiel, Wis., Zielke said publishing a weekly newspaper is a tough venture.

"There was a time when Wisconsin had more than 600 weekly newspapers. Today we have but 285," he said.

A newspaper is a business venture and before the newspaper can succeed and remain in business, it must make a profit. It, too, like every business up and down main street, has a payroll which must be met each week, otherwise it will fold and go the way of some 300 newspapers in the last 50 years."

Many communities in Wisconsin, he said, are without newspapers because the businessmen of the community failed to appreciate that newspaper.

"You must support your local newspaper if you want a good newspaper."

"If it is to be a good newspaper it deserves your support."

Zielke also stressed the obligation of a publisher to his community in his exercise of "the freedom to write as he pleases" and in protecting the people's right to know. He has the obligation of keeping the citizens of the community fully informed as to governmental activity at the local level and in other areas. He has the further obligation, said Zielke, of reporting to his readers objectively and of expressing any opinions he may have in the editorial columns of his newspaper.

I COVER THE DESERT

By MERT INGHAM

Many people think of the desert as a place barren of plant and animal life, but this is not true. For instance, over two hundred and fifty species of birds have been seen within the Lake Mead National Recreation Area.

A number of these birds nest here. More unusual than the fact that so many birds nest here is the miraculous manner in which the nests are built.

A bird is not taught how to build his nest. When it builds the first one, it has never seen a nest built. So far as is known, each species makes its own style of nest and does as good a job the first time as it does in later years. It is guided by an instinct, as if it carried a blueprint in its brain.

While the design remains the same, similar materials may be substituted. For example, the Crested Flycatcher which builds a piece of cast off snake skin in its nest may substitute a cigar wrapper.

The time when eggs are laid and young are in the nest is a critical period in the life history of a bird. Losses are heavy. The eggs and young are victims of storms, accidents, and a long list of predatory birds, mammals and snakes.

As protection against these enemies, nests on the ground, such as Meadowlark and Gambel Quail, are hidden in shrubbery. Nests of songbirds are built above the ground in thickets and clumps of cacti. Most are so well hidden we are seldom aware of our close neighbors.

Ravens, Hawks and Eagles make nests of sticks in larger trees, and crevices in cliffs in our surrounding mountains.

The Cliff Swallows burrow several feet into softer banks along the Colorado River and Lakes Mead and Mohave. The burrows end in nests of plant materials lined with feathers.

The Barn Swallow plasters cup-shaped mud nests, also lined with feathers, in abandoned buildings and under bridges. Pellets of wet mud are pressed into place and reinforced with leaves of grass.

The nests of an Oriental cliff-dwelling relative of the White-throated Swift, which migrates through this region each year, are collected and sold to make soup.

The hummingbird sables, a small branch with a cup of fine plant cotton, about the size of a walnut shell. Cobwebs are used to bind it together.

Among our local birds, nests vary enormously. The Night-hawk merely lays its eggs on barren spots on the desert. The female Cowbird lays her eggs in the nests of other birds.

Except for Eagles and a few Hawks, birds seldom use the same nest twice.

MEET YOUR FRIENDS AT THE

DEAR MARCIE

By MARCELLA DUNCAN

Dear Marcie: My family and I never miss your column — in fact, there are usually arguments as to who shall read it first — but we actually never considered the possibility of writing to you ourselves. But now WE have a problem!

Should we tell our six year old there IS no Santa Claus, or let his playmates tell him? He is getting "curious" and "curiouser," and we've dodged questions for weeks now!

What do you advise, Marcie? Wondering

Dear Wondering: When a six year old gets curious, he wants direct and honest answers which he would not usually get from ANOTHER six year old. This is one of the good reasons why he has parents!

You Rely on Him

—for ever increasing needs. More and more you depend upon the farmer. You depend upon him as a friend and neighbor—as a skilled tiller of the soil—breeder of cattle—good businessman—as a man you trust and respect.

Count on Us, Too

—to constantly find new ways to be better friends and neighbors—to find new ways to serve you better. You can count on us for an essential, efficient service at any hour of need.

By all means tell him about wonderful St. Nicholas (Bishop of Myra) and how his everlasting spirit of "giving" (not only of gifts and prayers, but giving of himself, too) caused him to be called the patron saint of Christmas; and of Santa Claus, the spirit of love and Christmas. And a very merry Christmas to you and your family.

Dear Marcie: Here we go again! My husband and I, I mean. Every three or four years we redecorate a couple of rooms in our home, and every three or four years we nearly land in the divorce courts! This time is no different.

Why can't my husband leave the decorating to me? Do I go to his office and tell him how it should be run? (And don't think I haven't thought of it—he could use some help in that direction. If he doesn't quit suggesting colors, fabrics, etc. I think I'll go nuts! Why can't he see that this is my job in his own "precinct?"

Dear Decorator: It may be your job, but your husband lives there too, you know! And you haven't SAID that his interior decorating ideas weren't good, or that YOURS didn't need assistance.

Even's sake, calm down and make a family project out of your decorating maneuvers. You've no idea how much fun this can be. And, so WHAT if the Mr. & Mrs. redecorating ideas don't coincide with the latest views of the latest interior decorator? It's YOUR home and you two are living there! If you and your husband are satisfied with it that's all that matters.

But, by all means, bring your husband into the project! Don't shut him out! The fact that you don't tell him how to run his office doesn't enter into it — YOU don't work there! But your husband DOES live at home—at least, he will as long as he's happy there! Nuff sed?

Dear Marcie: How, in the name of Heaven, does one keep his sanity, not to speak of his sense of humor in the face of financial loss and severely trying times?

Dear Tryin: You must have lost your HEALTH too, not to speak of your MARBLES, or you'd remember the old maxim "To laugh is to be happy."

The mature person agrees with this old saying, but he doesn't joke at the expense of others. He does not laugh when someone is hurt or whenever someone else is made to look silly before others. Most important of all, he can laugh at himself occasionally.

And this is the easiest of all! Just sit and watch "Queen For a Day" a couple of times a week — you think YOU have troubles? Phooey!

Do you have a problem? Marcella Duncan will be happy to help you if you will write to her in care of this column. A self-addressed, stamped envelope will bring a personal reply.

Editors Feel Some Dailies Are Falling Down On The Job By Failing To Give World News

FRENCH LICK, Ind.—At least two Daily newspaper editors feel their profession is falling down on the job so far as foreign news is concerned.

E. T. Stone, managing editor of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer and Norman Isaacs, managing editor of the Louisville Times, made the observations during talks to the Associated Press Managing Editor's Assn., meeting here. Mr. Stone observed that "World news is becoming local news. Unless we wake up to the fact, we're living in a dream world of the past."

Mr. Isaacs contended that only a small minority of Daily papers are doing outstanding jobs of informing readers about world news or even making use of foreign news.

NO CHRISTMAS TREE CUTTING AT CHARLESTON

By H. C. Hoffman
Dist. Forest Ranger

National Forest lands within the Charleston Division of the Toiyabe National Forest are closed to the cutting of Christmas trees for private use and the commercial market, the same as they have been for the past eight years. The reason being, that the accessible trees which we have are needed in place for water shed protection, and to maintain the natural beauty of the roadside zones and recreational areas.

However, there will be a limited number of white fir trees available for military bases and camps, churches, schools, charitable institutions, town community Christmas trees, and for City, County, State and Federal Buildings. This cutting is being allowed to widen and extend the Kyle Canyon Ski Run.

Organizations who qualify to get trees for the above mentioned uses may get them by sending a representative to obtain a permit for same at the Kyle Canyon Ranger Station on Nevada State Highway No. 39, between 9:00 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. on December 12, 15, 18 and 19th. It is the responsibility of the organizations who get these trees to provide the necessary transportation, labor and equipment required to get them out; and to cut them
