Basic High graduate Roy Sparks last week scored an impressive "First" for the City of Henderson when he became the first and only Basic soccer player ever to be drafted by a professional team.

The 24-year-old star of the UNLV Rebels soccer team was chosen in the fourth round by the Las Vegas Quicksilvers of the North American Soccer League. He is the first Nevadan drafted by the NASL, and may also be the first Basic graduate ever drafted by a professional team in any sport.

According to Quicksilvers officials. Sparks was drafted in the hope that he can help correct their major weakness last year; scoring goals. The 1970 Basic graduate was the Rebels leading scorer for three years, including 20 goals this year, and was also all-conference forward for two years while at Basic.

At both schools, Sparks had attended for a full year before the soccer program was begun. At Basic, he had no knowledge at all about the game before the program started his sophomore year under Mrs. Doris Reed, a 5-foot junior high school Engish teacher from England, who is well known to local Sparks told the HOME NEWS this weekend, "Everything has fallen right into place for me. I would just like to say thank you to everyone in the state who has anything to do with soccer -- for this opportunity. I think it's going to be a lot of work, but it's great to have the opportunity."

According to Quicksilvers Coach

Derek Travis, "We really cannot tell yet about his potential, but he is very keen to show what he can do for us. He is big, strong, and well-coordinated. He is a good shot, and looks as if he has the potential to perform well. He will no doubt learn a lot from other professionals."

Mrs. Reed, who introduced Sparks to the sport at Basic, told the HOME NEWS, "I was thrilled when I heard the news. Sparky is devoted to soccer and works hard at it, but he is the best natural soccer athlete I've ever seen."

People Should Elect Own Government

By M.M. Zenoff

Puerto Vallarta, Mexico, Covering January 6 to 13 - A arge canvas banner attached to the white brick wall over the entrance to Puerto Vallarta's city hall reads (in interpretation) "The people have a right o elect their own govern-

And therein lies a story which has developed this past week into a situation where all the days long and far into the evenings the central city plaza is crowded with people, all evidently intensely concerned with what is going on behind the doors of a substitute meeting room adjacent to the city hall portion.

The city hall itself had been in the hands of the women of the town who won the hurrahs of peasants, the field-workers, the businessmen as they spelled each other in their vigil at keeping the city hall free of what they termed the illegally elected mayor named Eugenio Torres Ramirez.

We visited this inner sanctum, before it was officially sealed closed, where once the mayor sat, and there were huge pots of beans standing on desks formerly used by the mayor's staff. Other pots of Mexican specialties from tacos to tortillas to coffee brought there hand-transferred along the long line of people who were forced to stand outside - forced only because of the hugeness of the size of the crowd.

The block square plaza, a huge gazebo in its center, hasn't been as filled, some say, since Richard Nixon spoke there in the dedication of the new airport. Others point out this park plaza was always the focal point for people to sit around talking to Liz Taylor, Richard Burton and Ava Gardner when they were filming the "Night of the Iguana".

It's a bloodless revolution, the Mexican man on the street carefully explains to those visitors who walk along the famed Juarez tourist shopping street, which lines one side of the plaza. It passes the town's main church - Nuestra Senora de Guadalupe - whose giant bells all week have been ringing almost constantly. It's ringing and tolling have always been the city's main vehicle for giving time or messages, to all 60,000 inhabitants. This week everyone is in tune with the One stands in the center of the plaza and looks down any one of the 12 streets that feed into it. Along them all come people - walking.

They line the square, carry their children in their arms, men and women both, and as they realize there are space limitations within the one meeting hall where discussions are constantly in session, they stand by and await word either from those groups who come from the room, or from the occasional announcement over the loud speaker in the

A visit inside the meeting room one sees intensely serious people sitting, four men dressed in white summer cottons behind a row of tables. They are the representatives of the congress of the state of Jalisco, sent in to hold hearings, take stories from every group, every citizen who wants to appear. They listen, they question, they make notes. Before the protestor leaves, he signs a statement.

The members of congress assigned to this investigation are: Jose Luis Leel Sanabria, Teodoro Gutierrez Garcia, Enrique Chavero Ocampo. They are assisted by Sabino Arainbub Magona.

Where is the duly elected mayor Egenio Torres Ramirez all this while? The city hall being occupied by women, and their children of school age assigned to spasmodic cordons across the main street that leads across the river Cuale which divides the town, there is no other place for Torres to go but to the offices of the CROM labor union, which was the identified leader of the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI) which in December helped Jose Lopez Portillo move into the presidency of the country.

Where is the electee of the forces who cry "we have a right to elect our own government"? That's Dr. Efren Calderon Arias, local physician who chose to fight the odds and oppose Torres, the man Portillo forces designated. At the December 5 municipal elections the turnout was as feelingful and enormous as are the crowds who gather now in the town plaza.

And here lies the bone of contention. The federal military came in and picked up all ballot boxes, it is claimed, before a local count was made. Torres was in due time declared winner and that's when the protest broke loose. The leading women of the city carried the torch, taking over the city hall, lock, stock and barrel.

Torres immediately named a new police chief -- Hoctavio Gonzolez - a popular Vallarta dentist whose avocation is Karate. He, in fact, has for years taught school children in his spare time this rare art of self-

Today, though the town is possibly anti-Torres, it is pro-Gonzolez. The dentist has

Mayor Lorin Williams

City Manager Don Dawson

Councilman Mourns Loss of Mother

Mrs. Rachel Lawrence of Fort Worth, Texas died of a heart attack at the age of 75. Mrs. Lawrence is the mother of City Councilman Carlton Lawrence.

Services are being held today at 2:00 p.m. at the University Christian Church. Lawrence is in Fort Worth for the services.

Mayor Lorin Williams and City Manager Don Dawson agreed that the year 1977 will be brighter for Henderson if the State Legislature "works on behalf of the smaller communities in Nevada."

The Chamber of Commerce heard the Mayor and the City Manager discuss the "State of the City" at Everetts Supper Club last Thursday.

"I have a very optimistic outlook for 1977," said Mayor Williams. "And if I was to look back at the past year, even with our troubles, the fact that building permits doubled means that we are back on the road. When people want to build and live in Henderson, it's a good sign for all of us," he added.

The Mayor pointed out that 1976 was a difficult year financially for the city. A large deficit was projected, but because of an "austerity" program the city didn't have to borrow or go into the red.

"Yes, to some extent, I meant what I said about getting through the year with a shirt on our backs. We projected a shortage of some $360,000, but with reduced spending and bookkeeping assistance from the state we made it through," said Williams.

"We have some very difficult issues facing us. The power situation has made us aware that we might have to go into the power business. In the next 60-70 days we will have to make a decision. I was against it in the beginning because of thelarge expenditure that would be involved in purchasing the plant. Yet with energy becoming more scarce, it might be good to have our own plant," said the Mayor.

The freeway decision by the Clark County Commission was hailed by the mayor as a "great benefit to all of us, we need it." He pointed out that even though there was some controversy over it, the City Council voted to endorse the proposal.

On the subject of annexation, Williams warned that it could cause Henderson some serious problems. "We could very easily lose $400,000 if Las Vegas is allowed to annex parts of the county, unless the state tax collection procedures are changed," said the mayor.

"I am very happy about the $1 million federal grant which Henderson will receive for several projects," said Williams. "These funds are important because improvements can be made without always going to the local taxpayers," he added.

The Las Vegas Downs project was also mentioned by the mayor as an "issue that many people are waiting to see just what is going to happen."

"All in all, I think Henderson is a growing community and one that we can all be proud of," concluded Williams.

City Manager Don Dawson began by telling the audience that his job is to carry out the wishes of the elected representatives of the people. "My job is to see that the ordinances are abided by and carry out the policies designated by the council," he said.

"One of the most important jobs is to present a balanced budget and that always involves cuts," he added.

"With issues such as annexation and the franchise tax, this city could see a loss of $1.3 million in revenue. It depends on what the state legislature does. The small cities message and concerns must be carried up to Carson City," said Dawson.

Projects discussed by the city manager included the East Interceptor Sewer to expand growth in the northeast section of the city, possible acquisition of the BMI water plant, the second phase of the Southern Nevada Water Project, and future sewerage treatment plans.

"We will be applying for $7-8 million of federal funds to work on major projects for this city. I don't really like it, but if we don't get in there and get our share, it just goes somewhere else," said Dawson.

started teaching his force karate as it is his announced intention to have no policemen carrying guns.

During the current strife, his men are standing guard over the city hall but are instructed only to act in case of riots. When the school children spread their line across the main street to stop any traffic from going across town, not a policeman lays a hand on a child. They stand by in case of traffic accidents, or, to direct traffic into other streets to overcome possible snarls.

Torres backers on the city government payroll have not had a place to go to work, what with the city hall closed for official business. Taxpayers, license fee payers, merchant obligees of any sort have had to bank their money instead of pay it to the public treasurer.

For a few days the city garbage workers didn't make their rounds and Torres forces felt this would help his cause. Merchants, housewives, farmers took the big wagons and made the important garbage stops and kept the restaurants, hotels and busier streets free of debris. The regular garbage service resumed following this citizen action.

Dr. Calderon then went to the Jalisco state capital, Guadalajara, to state his cause before federal and state officials. He went on to Mexico City to explain again.

Action followed to the extent that the city hall was sealed off with big white x marks, on the doors, pieces of sticky paper reading "by order of the state government the place is closed". The Jalisco states attorney general having done this, then agreed with the plan to send in the congressional committee to investigate. One report is the committee will determine whether the ballot boxes were illegally handled. Another committee will return to report to the state congress as a whole, which has jurisdiction, to let that body rule whether a new election should be held.

The crowd's latest report via the loud speaker type of communication in the public square was -- that the Interior Secretariat would nullify the elections.

As of a late hour Sunday, the housewives are still outside the city hall, the church bells still peel crazily at times their messages.

The state senators, our informants state, will report back to the congress and the new state governor Flavio Romero de Velasco. They were to issue a report by "next week", it was assumed. (That's this week.)

Meanwhile, the followers of the candidate Doctor Calderon are talking of staging business and tax payment strikes as well as school stoppage. One of them who refused to allow his name to be printed said: "We shall show for the first time, since Pancho Villa what real democracy is. When we win, we're sure other cities or groups with honest complaints will follow. We're tired of being told every few years who will be our local leaders. We can do it without guns. These people are showing it by just being here."

But then, when one asks --"who is running the store", one has to answer - "no one". But the people don't seem to mind as they feel it is their store and first things come first.

HERE'S THE JAIL.

Those speaking more practically, an engineer-architect, for example, explained that Torres has talent but is too new here to be considered local. People feel he was sent in a year ago as building license chief to get ready for the big job of mayor. The engineer also expected more serious outbreaks as the crowds in the plaza come back, go home, come back, and seem not to be satisfied with no permanent results being announced.

Except for the occasional school children street tieups, Puerto Vallarta's tourist life goes on. The big ships come in, stop for a day, their 300 passengers marching up and down Juarez street to buy their souvenirs, passing the crowded square, stopping momentarily to take pictures of the exercised people, then on back to the ship.

The federal soldiers carrying machine guns, are everywhere to be seen, but apparently are under orders to be seen but not heard as not a shot has been fired. This has been the case with the dentist karate expert who calmly runs from his own office to the police station to handle the cases as they come in --- the usual cases of drunkiness, robbery, acci-

Another scion of a famous local family, here since the town's inception, explained he was happy with the uprising of the people. He said that every local mayor had been handpicked from either Guardalajara or Mexico City for the 25 years he could remember. He said some were good in office, some were not, but almost all were not the choice of the people - and he felt that the terrific outpouring of people in the plaza is enough of an indication that the people want a

He felt there would be no need of guns, no show of guns -just show of citizen participa-

Then what will finally happen?" he was asked.

"We won't win this time. Torres will be mayor. But next time, the movement will be so large that local government will be by local election."

The above was what happened until the night of January 13th.

Came the night of January thirteenth -- Thursday night -when around the town a car with a loudspeaker in continuous use notified the townspeople to come to the plaza, that the church bells had been stopped by the federal authorrities from giving their 'messages'. The priest had explained he had nothing to do with the bell ringing except for the time signals on the hour and half hour and the mass and death tolls. It was explained by the anti-Torres group that three teenagers were their bell-ringers, the youngsters having found a way to climb thru holes in walls, over ancient parapets to the tower, some 200 feet above the street.

Apparently, for whom the bells tolled was not whom the federal authorities intended ... thus -- the cease-ringing order save for on the hour.

Approximately 11 p.m., following a huge congregation in the plaza on the night of the 13th, a general block of traffic was commenced on the main street that leads across the river. Within minutes the clog was impacted to where one could neither backup or turn off and certainly not go forward.

From a passer-by walking from the plaza, who was a friend, explained the government had announced from the gazebo that the following morning (Friday the 14th) a decision would be announced.

She said she had heard that the townspeople involved in the "freedom" fight were importing guns and that the tieup in traffic was being done because of anticipation of Torres forces taking over city hall by force following the expected announcement on Friday.

At five a.m. our household was awakened by what we believed were bomb bursts from the area of the plaza. Black outside, the ocean pounding hard at our front door beach, we decided to call the police and prepare for evacuation, if possible. The police stated the bomb bursts were sky-rockets calling people to the plaza to come and spell the people who had been up all night.

Our problem -- our rent-a-VW-mini-bus was blocked in the center of the stricken area. We had abandoned it and walked home ... across the bridge to our house. The airport is now, then, on the other side of the bridge -- far out of town with no way to get to the airport, assuming a plane may be taking off today that we could get on.

Unless - and this shall be our last-resort if it comes to anything more serious -- we'll rent a boat from a fisherman and try to row, tow, go the 10 miles via the Pacific Ocean -along the shoreline, of course, out away from 10 foot breakers if such can be done.

As baggage -- we're carrying our tooth-brushes.

Puerto Vallarta, Jalisco, Mexico -- (Sunday) A large canvas banner attached to the white brick wall over the entrance to Puerto Vallarta's city hall reads (in interpretation) "The people have a right to elect their own government".

And therein lies a story which has developed this past week into a situation where one wonders where it will end and how. All the days long and far into the evenings the central city plaza is crowded with people, all seemingly intense on what is going on behind the doors of a substitute meeting room that adjoins the city hall.

Visiting this inner sanctum where once the mayor sat and before it was officially sealed later this week, one saw huge pots of beans, stacks of tortillas, tacos, pots of coffee standing on office desks, formerly occupied by everyone from the mayor on down. The food was brought in by passing the containers along a human line of citizens who filled the areas leading to the front door of city hall. There were mothers holding babies, wrapped in blankets. "Down the road we have to decide either to build a new sewerage treatment plant or join the Clark County system. Along with that, it is important for the BMI water plant to be upgraded because of EPA regulations," said Dawson. "We need the water and it's cheaper than the Southern Nevada Water Project water. If the city purchases the BMI plant, we will have a longer period of time in which to make the necessary charges," he added.

Dawson pointed out that the water is very important to Henderson because of the development of the city. "All building would stop if we didn't have the needed water to provide to the new families building and moving here," he said.

"We need to get our share of the water from the Southern Nevada Water Project also. We are using 7,000 acre feet from the first phase and want 33,000 acre feet from the second phase. This new water won't be available until 1981 and with our growth, it will be needed," said Dawson.

"This community has a lot to be proud of and if we all work together, it will have a tremendous future," concluded Daw-

The first in a series of proposals by the BLM to regulate all uses of the public lands has fallen on the mining industry. Nevada miners agree that the proposed BLM regulations would mean an end to the small independent miners and hamper exploration and development of large companies.

BUILDING BLOCKS

FOR OUR FUTURE...

Public statements by the Bureau of Land Management officials have confirmed our worst fears.

This new bureaucratic incursion into our lives must have been authorized by Washington people with very limited knowledge of mining and the Hevada economy.

We all love our land, our mountains and our endless horizons— but we must be practical. The entire economy of the United States depends on our capacity to manufacture from our abundant natural resources.

These proposed regulations were published in the Federal Register on December & and 10, 1976. The regulations are entitled: PROPOSED PROCEDURES TO MINIMUZE ADVERSE ENVI-RONMENTAL IMPACTS and RECORDATION OF MINING CLAIMS AND FILING PROOF OF ANNU-AL ASSESSMENT WORK OR NOTICE OF INTEN-TION TO HOLD MINING CLAIMS.

The more objectional aspects of these proposed regulations are discussed in the following article.

YOU CANNOT REBUILD MOUNTAINS Reclamation:

Reclamation means returning land to its virgin state. Although 40% of all mining land has been reclaimed, this land was located in flat terrain that lended itself to reclamation.

The BLM regulations state that all reclamation work must begin as soon as possible on mining activity.

Minerals occurances in the West are usually located in mountainous areas. You cannot rebuild mountains. Large tonnages of ore and rocks are removed from mines monthly and filling in these mine sites could not be accomplished without additional disturbance to the Occurrence of the 55 or 60 commercial minerals may be found in Lander County alone.

These minerals are used in every household convenience, mechanical and automotive machinery and food production. Our total economy is interrelated— if the mining industry suffers from excessive costs and the small explorative independent miner becomes extinct, it will affect us right where it counts, IN OUR POCKETS.

A MERE 100,000

Bonding: The BLM has stated that any operator who files a plan of operation must also furnish a bond prior to beginning operations.

The stated minimum statewide bond is $100,000. National organizations must pay $300,000.

This will totally destroy the small miner, he cannot afford to post a $100,000 bond. Bonding companies contacted have refused to issue bonds because the loose language of the BLM proposal invites arbitrary and capricious enforcement by individual BLM personnel.

This bonding requirement will also inhibit large companies because the bond would hold operators responsible for reclamation work for

This is obviously a serious and direct threat to the entire future of the mining industry and our guaranteed freedoms. Small mining operators cannot exist with in the framework of these BLM regulations that are supposedly cleaning up our environment to make it a better place in which to live. We will destroy our most important natural resource, man, by creating unemployment. Also the US economy will be forced to rely on an unstable and inflationary foreign mineral sup-

For

Our Future

SPORTSMEN BEWARE

One of the first BLM rules state that: "No mining operation which might cause significant disturbance to the surface resources shall be conducted or initiated on lands subject to these regulations until a Notice of Intent has been filed with the proper BLM office." A prominent BLM official has publicly stated that "motorized vehicles on unestablished reads are definitely considered a significant disturbance to the land. Nevada is 87% public lands.

What this means to the miner is that he has to have an approval from governmental officials before he can get off the main roads to just go prospecting.

The BLM has also promised further sets of regulations will be forthcoming to govern other uses of the public lands, such as ranching, recreation, off-road vehicles, etc.

The ranchers are now waiting for the other shoe to drop and if these proposals aren't stopped new you soon won't be able to go camping, hunting, fishing, or take an afternoon ride in your jeep until you have applied and received a permit from the BLM. Incidentally, they have 15 days to decide whether to issue one or not. If you don't want this to happen make your voice heard.

HIGHLY INFLATIONARY

Paperwork: The BLM demands superflows and time consuming paperwork to be initiated. Miners must file a notice of intent, a plan of operation and a detailed topographical map. The BLM has up to 135 working days to grant you permission to begin your operation.

In addition to the unrealistic amount of time, the whole procedure is highly inflationary. Many new employees would be necessary for industry as well as the BLM. To the marginal prospector the paper work is expensive, complicated and unnecessary.

JUDGE AND JURY

No Appeals: The BLM will be both judge and jury. They will have absolute power. Appeal as to fact can be made only to the Department of Interior...the same group who formulated the regulations. Should a miner disagree with their enforcement, there is no objective middleman

In effect, if a miner accuses the BLM of unfair practices it is up to the BLM to decide if it has been unfair.

NEVADA MINER ENDANGERED SPECIES

Congressman Jim Santini in a letter to Secretary of the Interior Thomas Kleppe said:

"I find it ironic to read that "(It) is the pelicy of the Department to encourage development of Federal minerals," and then watch the Department issue a series of regulations that present the very real possibility of virtually eliminating the small miner and prospector.

If it cannot be recognized that small miners and prospectors experience many compliance difficulties than I suggest that you add the small miner and prospector to your list of 1700 endangered species."

Worldwide mining activity has disturbed only 16 hundredths of one per cent of the earth's surface and 40% of that has been reclaimed.

In 1971 mining occupied only 3.7 million acres of the world's land mass. By contrast: Hi-ways covered 22.7 million acres Airports covered 3.3 million acres Railroads covered 3.2 million acres

ONE LETTER IS WORTH A THOUSAND VOTES

Follow Nevadans, taxpayers and consumers, it is up to you. We urge you to write our Governer and Congressional delegation and let them knew your objections and recommendations regarding these BLM regulations.

The proposed BLM regulations need only to pass unnoticed by the public to become a reality. The LANDER COUNTY CITIZENS FOR MINING is actively involved on all fronts in this fight for our future. Won't you join us? In return for a contribution of $5.00 or more, LCCFM will make you an associate member, for $25.00 you can become a full member.
