Small business council wants to encourage self help

By Julie Montgomery Home News Staff Writer It has been said that there is strength in numbers.

With that concept in mind, a group of Henderson small business merchants have organized one of the community's newest assets, the Henderson Small Business Council (SBC).

"There were just four of us at the first meeting," said SBC chairman Leonardo DeJoria. "We now have approximately 45 members."

The SBC has officially been in existence for four months. DeJoria acts as chairman, with Pep Brashear and Bob Dachelet acting as co-chairpersons.

The SBC's goal is to promote growth and strength within Henderson's small-business community through a network of helping hands that will keep working capital within the city. "Businesses could increase their profits by 10 percent by helping each other," said De-Joria. "If we can keep our money in Henderson, we will all benefit."

One of the problems facing the Henderson small businessperson is the revenue lost by customers traveling to Las Vegas to do their shopping.

"There are people in Henderson right now that aren't even aware that certain services are available right here," said DeJoria.

Brashear said that problem can be alleviated by forming a network of small businesses that can reach the community through group advertising.

"Weekly advertising is just a dream for many small businesses. One of the ideas we are investigating is group advertising and promotion. Under this plan, the small merchant would be able to advertise his business effectively, but at a very small cost," said Brashear.

Both Brashear and DeJoria stated that they are open to new ideas from the community.

"We are not here to dictate to anyone," said Brashear. "We want to help the small businessperson. We are concerned with their problems and ideas."

There are approximately 1200 small businesses licensed in Henderson at the current time. That number represents almost half of the merchants operating under the community's business umbrella.

DeJoria claims that when the planned freeway-expansion reaches Lake Mead Boulevard

New animal laws would require bites be reported

by Katherine E. Scott Home News Staff Writer

If you are the victim or the owner of an animal that bites and fail to report the incident, you break no law.

But if the Henderson City Council passes a revised animal control ordinance tonight, the deputy humane officer explained, "It would be a misdemeanor violation."

Vicki Cameron, whose position is renamed senior animal control officer by the proposed ordinance, explained it will clarify many animal laws, make certain in-house policies official, and cause some offenses to become misdemeanor violations.

Assistant city attorney Andrew Urban said that technically a person who does not report getting bitten "could get a citation . . . but the intent and purpose of this is to protect the victim."

He mentioned that section was designed for "people who willfully and intentionally

Should high school journalism be recognized as one of several elective courses to fulfill a four-year English requirement?

Should school newspapers, both at the high school and college level, be given some degree of autonomy to produce news and opinions critical of their schools and educational institutions?

Guess which profession is paid lower on average than teachers are paid?

We as newspaper people are shocked to find that we have been derelict in telling Americans and our neighbors how important a free press is, and now our laziness has shown itself as evident in the attitudes and actions of school administrators and the public.

The answers to the first two questions being no, it indicates how school bosses and even most faculty look at journalism.

In a significant number of high schools, journalism is on the level of auto shop; Nevada's state board of education doesn't know how to classify it and currently it cannot be used toward fulfillment of an English or a

Chamber installs officers

by Katherine E. Scott Home News Staff Writer Henderson Mayor Lorna Kesterson on Friday gave officers and directors of the Chamber of Commerce advice to remember "during the curse of your term."

The mayor quickly corrected, The course of your term," during the Chamber's annual installation banquet at the Henderson Convention Center. She also installed officers and trustees of the Chamber-sponsored Henderson Development Association.

Nevada Governor Richard Bryan presented the Chamber's outstanding member award to local businessman Ed Harris, who headed the successful effort to fund the redevelopment of Boulder Highway.

Harris, who expanded his Henderson lighting firm Creations by Harris into an international business, was nearly speechless after the governor's presentation.

President John Holman, in his second consecutive term, made both outgoing and incoming speeches.

He brought out a sack and referred to his speech last year in which he described the Chamber's efforts as a threelegged race. He recalled concluding with an invitation for people to join him "in the sack."

He declared, "We had many takers. Not that evening, but during the course of the year."

Holman recounted accomplishments, from the nearly $8 million funding provided for Boulder Highway improvements to the Henderson expressway and its impact on bringing a major mall to the city.

He noted the "achievements (were) done by the team as a whole," including the city of Henderson and its various departments.

He noted the theme for this vear was "Team Henderson" and the tradition of working together would continue.

Holman introduced some new concepts taken recently by the Chamber. The format for the Chamber's newsletter was changed, and he said it will now

Council reviews master plans, Boulder Highway developments

by John Dailey Home News Editor

A controversial commercial zone change near a residential development and request to construct a trailer park in the same area will be reviewed by the Henderson City Council tonight.

The changes are among the 10 recommendations forwarded by the Henderson Planning Commission for final say by the council Tuesday at 7 p.m. during their regular meeting at city hall at 243 Water St.

The commission recommended denial of Joseph Kovac and Western Holding Company's request for a commercial zone change on a little more than four acres near the southeast corner of the intersection of Boulder Highway and Palo Verde Drive.

City staff said neighborhood commercial development in the location would provide good transition from highway businesses to the single-family homes adjacent to the site.

Planning staff also noted the Kovac's property is impaired by four rights-of-way or utility easements.

However, commissioners bowed to protests from seven speakers representing a larger number of Woodridge Estates residents whose development would abut the proposed commercial site.

Commissioners said lack of definite plans for the property persuaded them to recommend 4-1 for denial. Chat Chatterson voted against the motion for denial while Paul Ruth and Mary Roberts were excused.

Across the highway, developer Thomas Threinen wants to build and operate Country Club Village, a 50-space, eightacre trailer park southwest of the Boulder Highway-Palo Verde Drive intersection along the new alignment of Greenway Road.

Staff reported the park will construct a six-foot block wall around its perimeter with landscaping along Greenway and Mona Lane. The development also said they would construct a picnic park with barbeque pits, a swimming pool and a recreational vehicles parking area.

Commissioners voted unanimously to recommend approval for both use permit and architectural review requests.

In other planning votes, commissioners approved a residential-commercial development of 361 acres that stretches along Lake Mead Drive from Eastern Avenue to Pecos Road. They also recommended zone changes for 412 acres of Whitney Ranch development along Sunset Road and Stephanie Street.

Unhired architect's salary boosted, electrical code submitted for changes Previous skepticism of council proved true when determining the salary of the city's new landscape designer-architect position.

Management has now requested the position be accorded a $32,000 to $39,000 salary range, up from $28,000 to $35,000 previously given.

Structural knowledge and skill the job requires was not . considered in determining the salary range, staff reported. and the higher salary reflects these responsibilities. Revisions of the city's electrical code will also be reviewed. Council may take the option of amending the uniform code, as the city's Electrical Board has recommended, or it may follow city staff advise and adopt the national code in total.

in approximately 18 months, the amount of traffic through the city could triple.

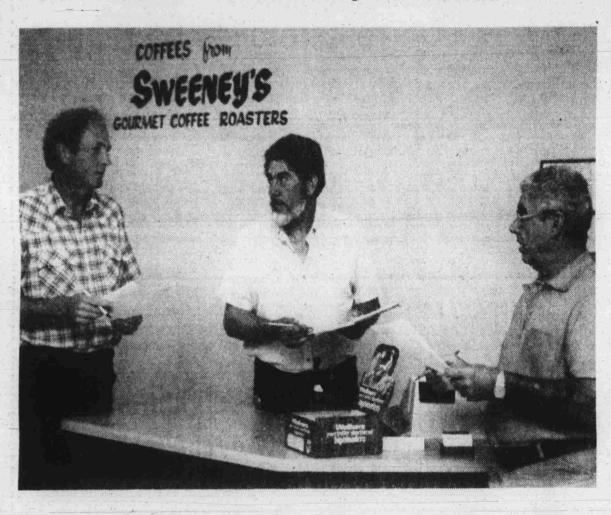

"There is a lot of excitement in Henderson right now," agreed Brashear. "The city is changing its image. We are becoming a town, a city-not just a close-knit community."

There is no cost to the small business merchant to join the SBC. Meetings are held at 7 a.m. monthly at various locations. The next meeting will be held Aug. 21 at 7 a.m. at the El Dorado Casino. A free continental breakfast will be served.

Humanities requirement.

In some schools, the journalism course is used as a dumping ground for marginal students to obtain easy credit. Administrators encourage this practice, teachers tell us, as do some lazy instructors.

I guess what we know what they think about their school newspapers.

But many people think journalism and newspapers are nothing but a refuge for malcontents and scandal mongers. "You don't tell me anything I want to know," I've heard many a time.

The trend is troubling. From both left and right and now from our institutions, the press is constantly being told "It's none of your business." We are accused of hiding the real story by the right and blamed for running good men from office by the left.

School administrators wish to run their newspapers as publisher and editorin-chief, meaning they want to kill any story they choose. Real publishers don't act that way, but convincing a school principal of that fact is becoming difficult for both teachers, students and supporting journalists.

University journalism training is providing the profession with better trained individuals but while learning, many of the students are inhibited by administration or student government itself to preach and inform along the school's

The trend is troubling because it seems to be one of popular origin and support. From this listening point, it seems as if citizens are telling both students and practitioners of the press to engage and protect the powers of society, not to challenge and confront them.

Nobody likes their own ox to be gored but if everyone stuck by, the press would retaliate, as many have indicated recently they should, there would be no free

If student newspapers are to be edited and controlled by school administrators or student government, why not have the media regulated by the government?

Wisdom and the the First Amendment aside, do you really want politicians, generals or even popular guys like Ollie North determining what and how much you're told about government or anything else?

Breaking it down further, do you want your son or daughter's principal to control the release of information from your public school?

The tragic fact is that many reading this are saying to themselves "who cares!"

So what if school administrators don't think journalism is a serious pursuit, so what if educators want to play publisher, it's their school.

That may be the heart of our problem, it's no longer our school but theirs, it's no longer our university's but Bob Maxson's, it's no longer our government but it's theirs, those guys that engineer 11 percent raises every chance they get.

Society in our modern times has never valued the press; the recent power, prestige and money paid to produce television news is an anomaly when compared to the majority of the profession.

But we haven't requested to be valued, only to be tolerated, and in such a compromise we have neglected a constitutional duty to remind voters, citizens and readers about our role in preserving and enhancing democratic government.

We will be bias, we will be one-sided and partial to the causes and interests that appeal or interest us. We will also be boring and unappealing to some.

Student papers want the same latitude, and realize they have responsibilities too. But with discretion left with a school administrator's judgment, don't be surprised that students push the system to the limits. In such arrangements, they have no responsibility because the principal will determine those duties.

Do not damage any student or reporter nor democracy in an attempt to remedy or correct these sins. We have all come short of the glory and remember, we have competitors within our own profession willing to cut our throats for our errors of omission, incompetance, bias and conscience.

Those of us in the marketplace are coming around to a greater appreciation of the public sector, the great contribution that teachers and others can make to make a better nation.

However, those most public of persons, the ones who administer our laws, serve in government and those who tell us what government and society is doing, namely lawyers, politicians and journalists, are among the people we most denigrate.

Lawyers and politicians may deserve their rap, but often do not, yet their compensation for service is consoling.

Journalists, however, are much like teachers; everyone may praise us and act deferentially on occasions, but nobody pays on par with a profession.

We don't complain, we like our jobs. But in this absence of defense, we have neglected our duties to educate others about the importance of the free press. Also, we have forgotten to defend those weaker than us who cannot protect themselves.

July 7 the Henderson City Council authorized $320,000 to purchase 40 acres northwest of the intersection of two unconstructed arterial roads, Stephanie Street and Wigwam Ave.

Already, at least one councilman is planning for the park's uses.

Councilman Michael Harris presented a proposed design for a sports park July 7.

The design included seven ballfields, a soccer-football field with track, an exercise course throughout the site and a playground. Two concession stands, restrooms and parking complete the complex.

But another councilman said that though he would approve purchase of the land, he didn't want to commit to park development soon.

"I just want to make it clear that we're not committing to spend money on park construction, (money) that we don't have," Councilman Lorin Williams said.

Harris responded development would be in phases. The city itself has not completed any design work for the site.

The councilman's plans were forwarded by himself and designer Mary Kozlowski for the July 7 council meeting.

However, no official city planning has been authorized or commissioned for the site.

Parks planners have long been looking for a regional site in Henderson for such a sports fields complex.

To date, the problem has been securing an adequately sized portion of land, city Parks and Recreation Department director Dundee Jones has said in the past.

Jones has also said that 40 acres is a minimum for such try to conceal an animal bite situation."

Barbara Vogtman, who has been bitten four times since she started delivering mail in Henderson some ten years ago, approves of the new laws but stresses there may be a problem with enforcement.

"By the time the animal control gets the one and only officer out on the street," she complained the animals that have threatened or bitten individuals are hidden.

Henderson city manager Gary Bloomquist pointed out the city has two humane officers. He does not see the need for hiring more, and adds people who ask do not supply specifics about the incidents and the time taken for a response.

The proposed animal control ordinance has 89 sections with 49 definitions, compared to 49 sections and seven definitions in the current ordinance.

"It was never required before that if you hit a dog (with a vehicle) that you report it," Cameron commented, adding it will be required under the new law.

Also, she noted, it "will require that animals transported in the bed of a pickup truck must be harnessed in so they cannot fall out or they cannot jump out."

One definition added to the ordinance describes a vicious dog. With due process, one can be labelled vicious after two biting incidents.

Urban stressed a dog so labelled will not be automatically destroyed. "The dog owner's liablity changes," he remarked. "A person who owns a vicious animal is strictly liable for its acts."

The court does have the right to have a dog ordered destroyed in both ordinances. But Urban noted in the new one convicted owners would specifically face "fine and/or imprisonment" rather than a vague "penalty."

The city council will discuss the new ordinance in a committee meeting tonight in council chambers at city hall. The committee session starts at 6 p.m.

Final action on the ordinance is included on the council's regular meeting agenda starting at 7 p.m.

The public is invited to attend either or both meetings.

Henderson ambulances to be repaired

by Katherine E. Scott Home News Staff Writer

Two of the three ambulances run by the Henderson Fire Department are among hundreds across the country which Ford Motor Company says need repairs.

However, the local fire chief said they may still be used with proper care while awaiting a time and location for the problem to be adjusted.

"We're well aware of the problem," Fire Chief Dale Starr remarked Monday. He continued, "We only keep our tanks about three-quarters full."

He noted, "Those two will have to be fixed, but (they) are on the street every day."

Starr described the potential danger is that "the fuel leaks down on the exhaust pipe. and it catches on fire.'

The fire chief noted they are waiting for final word for when to take the "modulance" vehicles in. "They'll be sent to (a Ford dealership) for repairs."

The squared-back modulance vehicles are "on recreationaltype chassis," he described. The chassis are cut away "and then they put a box on it."

Starr sees no potential disruption of service and expects the adjustments to be made with minimal time lost.

The two modulances have been used by the city for about a year, Starr said. The third city ambulance "is an older van-type."

be issued quarterly.

Members will still be sent notices with information about the monthly luncheons.

The Chamber president also discussed a new committee for small businesses intended to help the businessmen and assess problems and programs.

Holman also unveiled new folders developed for promotional purposes by the Chamber and the city. Disguised as triangular centerpieces on each table, the folders on one side held a modified city slogan and on the other a stack of cityoriented paintings.

A lavender-and-gold floral design with the name Henderson is accented with the words, "A flower in the desert growing towards tomorrow." The last three words are familiar on road signs at the city borders.

The paintings on the other side of the folder include renditions of the Henderson Convention Center, the Smith's shopping plaza and Quail Ridge estates.

The folders, designed by Sutter Creek Advertising in California, will be used by the Chamber of Commerce, the Henderson Development Association. The City of Henderson and the Henderson Convention Center, Holman explained.

He added the folders were "tailored specifically for economic development, for the Convention Center, and for people who just need the general information."

Holman noted the folders themselves just announce Henderson, and the packets put inside will identify which group is providing the information.

HDA president Duane Laubach remarked HDA trustees are the "front-line troops of economic development."

He discussed several new major companies which have built or expanded in Henderson. Those included Dick Blick, Berry Plastics and Farwell, Ozmun and Kirk and Company.

The latter business distributes products to the new Target stores in the Las Vegas Valley from a large warehouse behind the fire station on Gibson Road.

Laubach noted, "HDA alone has not been responsible for the growth." He added it filters down from the governor. through state and city offices and economic development departments.

He remarked the city council, citizens and businesses produce a "team effort where everyone works together for one common goal and ... effort."

Laubach concluded, "This is economic development at it's very best."

Installed with Holman as Chamber officers were vice president Bob Campbell, second vice president Ed Harris and treasurer Sandi Sager.

All are serving their second consecutive terms except Harris, who is on his first term.

Installed on the Chamber's board of directors were Holman, Campbell, Harris, Sager, John Flaherty, Sharon Grauman, Mike Harris, Freda Klein, Brook Martin, Mary McFarlane, Brad Nelson, Oscar Portillo, Chuck Spradlin and Jack Walters.

Joining Laubach as an HDA officer was vice president Hank Costenbader. Both were also installed as trustees along with Campbell, Nelson, Selma Bartlett, Lou LaPorta, Bob Ritchey, Rich Schmidt and Glen Taylor.
