One Man's VIEW

By Mike O'Callaghan

Experience of senior members of the Henderson City Council became obvious last week when considering the future of Sky Harbor Airport. A council with less experience might have jumped at the opportunity to buy and operate the airport within the city limits. The entire council is wisely approaching the airport acquisition very cautiously and may turn their backs on the project.

If the city eventually moves to control the airport then a private operator should be sought to run it. It's doubtful if Henderson needs a department of aviation any time in the near future.

The death and injury toll at Lake Mead and in Southern Nevada private swimming pools is spurring upward. It's enough to scare every concerned parent and/or grandparent. Nevertheless, death and permanent brain damage to both children and adults becomes an almost daily happening during these hot summer months.

I have no special advice other than to teach our children to respect the water and for all of us to be alert for possible problems.

Educators like Mike West are good for students and the community. The former Green Valley High School administrator, like a ball of fire, is starting educational blazes in his position as principal of Elton Garrett Middle School in Boulder City. He is concerned about

Plans for new Old Vegas move forward

City Council OKs use permit but delays architectural review

By Paul Szydelko
Managing Editor

The Henderson City Council on Tuesday granted a use permit for a limited gaming and limited gaming liquor operation to Focus 2000 for the re-opening of the Old Vegas fort.

An architectural review for the fort's renovation and a conceptual plan for the entire 127-acre site must be submitted within nine months, the council insisted.

The gaming permit would allow from 75 to 199 gaming devices and no more than nine live games at the fort, which has been closed since 1986.

Several River Mountain Estates homeowners raised concerns about the impact the new Old Vegas would have on the neighborhood and pressed for more details on the entrance, landscaping, buffering, signs and lighting for the project. They said re-opening the fort will diminish children's safety and the neighborhood's quality of life.

One resident, Dennis Sorensen, questioned whether the project was properly zoned. The site is

Freeway extension 45% complete

By Roy Theiss
News Staff Writer

The U.S. 95 freeway extension from Lake Mead Drive to Boulder Highway south of Old Vegas is nearly half completed, said Mike McFall, assistant director of engineering for the Nevada Department of Transportation, this week. McFall said 45% of the work has been completed.

As of July 1, 237 of the 705 work days have been used. The contract was awarded to Frehener Construction and Max Riggs Construction for nearly $38 million and $16 million has been used so far, McFall added. The project completion date is November 1994.

McFall said he would be surprised if the freeway opened before the scheduled date.

Gus Michael, assistant district engineer for NDOT, said the project is ahead of schedule. "Right now we are about eight months ahead but every time you count on it, something comes up to slow you down."

Several projects still have to be

By the time the first car dealerships open at Car Country International on Boulder Highway, "we're going to hit it just about right when the economy starts picking up and car sales [improve]," project director Barry Stubbs said Wednesday.

With infrastructure nearly complete, negotiations are continuing "with every major manufacturer, and [we] expect to be able to announce some consummations of those arrangements quickly," Stubbs said.

The first phase of the $120

Kerr-McGee pays fine for hazardous waste

By Roy Theiss
News Staff Writer

Kerr-McGee Chemical Corp., paid a $13,800 fine June 1 for mishandling hazardous waste.

An inspection Dec. 17, 1991, by the state Division of Environmental Protection, determined a container was unlabeled and not marked for regulation time.

Jeff Denison, an environmental engineer for DEP, said a company generating hazardous waste can store the waste 90 days at the site before it has to be moved off site.

Kerr-McGee was assessed a $10,000 fine for an uncertified tank, $3,200 for an accumulation of uncontained waste and $600 for not labeling.

"They were acting as a storage unit," Denison said. "There was no way to determine how long it was being stored." The hazardous waste being stored was hexavalent chrome.

The fine for the uncertified tank was due to a discrepancy with the definition of the tank, Denison said. Kerr-McGee did not see it as a tank but according to the definition by DEP, a tank is made with non-earth walls. Kerr-McGee was using a container made out of concrete.

Pat Corbett, plant manager for Kerr-McGee, said the company was going to put stickers up for proper labeling. "We just constructed a retaining area but we had it in use before the stickers the future success of each and every student. Upon arriving at Garrett Middle School, he soon realized the computer lab is in dire need of upgrading. I'm sure he received the all-too-common response that there just isn't enough dollars to go around and the dollars available have to be spent on other things. This kind of response doesn't stop educators like West. A negative response may slow him down but stop him it doesn't.

Mike went straight to the people who will benefit the most and referred to them as his "prospective partners." He wrote: "As the newly appointed principal of Garrett Middle School, I am initiating a vigorous fund-raising program to update and expand the school's current computer lab and purchase a second state-of-the-art lab with multi-use software. The total amount needed to accomplish this task is roughly $110,000. It is my firm belief that our school has some serious "catching up" to do to offer our students the same learning challenges and technological opportunities available at the new schools being built and existing schools currently being modified in Clark County. I have targeted January of 1993 for the Computer Center's opening here on campus.

To partially fund this project I have earmarked a total of $60,000 ($12,000 per year) out of the school's operating budget over the next five-year period. This money will be used to purchase 36 Macintosh LC computers, 12 printers, and provide for necessary facility modifications. The remaining $50,000 will be used to purchase a software package to be used in the labs for development of keyboarding skills as well as a multi-disciplinary program available to all English, math and science classes." "I am soliciting donations from parents, Boulder City businesses, and individuals in hopes to raising the additional $50,000 necessary to complete this task. Any money raised for this project will be placed in a trust account earmarked solely for the purchase of computer equipment and software for student use in the lab. A payment plan is available to fit our needs. Please view this request as an opportunity for us to invest in our children's future. I ask that you join me and our staff as we build for the 21st century, by giving of our resources today. In addition to your investment, you will receive the premiums listed on the contribution form."

In the final issue of the Garrett newsletter for the 1991-1992 school year, the principal told the students' parents and guardians, "Mr. Tom Davis from Edunetics Corporation made a very interesting presentation at the May 5 parent advisory meeting. To those people in attendance, it became even more evident how far we must go to provide our children with the technological opportunities they need and deserve to compete educationally as well as in the world of work. A fund-raising campaign designed to fund this lab will begin shortly."

We hope that Mike West and the Garrett students of tomorrow and many years to come will be winners in this exceptional desire to educate for today and the future!

Scouts, agents distribute flags

Many residents woke up last Saturday to find a U.S. flag waving in the breeze in their yards. To celebrate the Fourth of July, real estate agents at Coldwell Banker/Paul Gargis Associates and Boy Scout Troop 37 placed 6,600 U.S. flags in front yards of several Henderson neighborhoods. Mayor Loma Kesterson acknowledged this patriotic effort with a formal proclamation, "Celebrate America with Coldwell Banker/Paul Gargis & Associates and Boy Scout Troop

"We're proud of our July 4 Flag program and thankful for the hard work of Troop 37, agents, families and friends," Gargis said. "I only wish we had the resources to place a flag in every yard in the Henderson area."

Committee for disabled seeks community input

A committee was organized several months ago to address disabled people's needs. Henderson's committee for the National Organization on Disability is seeking information from the community. The information will be compiled and then the committee will decide what issues to tackle.

One of the first issues to confront will be unauthorized parking in handicap zones, said Chairwoman Susan Baran. But this will not be the only issue for the committee and it seeks input from the community. A questionnaire about different concerns is being distributed to help with the information gathering.

Henderson's committee for the National Organization on Disability is interested in your opinion of the needs of the disabled. Some areas of concern for citizens with disabilities are listed below. Please rate each issue from #1 through #10, with the #1 being the area of most concern.

- Transportation (For shopping, errands, doctors, etc.)
- Home Companionship for the homebound
- Daily Needs (housekeeping, adult day care, meals, other)
- Quality & Availability of Employment

currently zoned CC-G (community commercial, with gaming enterprise) and has been designated as commercial since 1977. Since the project is intended to attract tourists, Sorensen said the site should be more properly zoned CT (tourist commercial).

Sorensen called the project a "real well-dressed ugly pig," and criticized the "hop-scotched planning" of the city. "The residents of Section 27 have nothing to gain from this use and everything to lose," he said.

He said the developer should better address impacts of increased traffic and construction activity, in addition to mitigating other impacts the re-opening may have on the adjacent neighborhood.

Councilman Andy Hafen said he was afraid to allow any use permit now without knowing what's going in there in the future." But he added later that "We're not granting anything that wasn't there before."

The architectural review for the fort will include a conceptual plan and a landscaping or buffer plan for the northern boundary of the site which faces low-density residences. Color renderings of the site from several angles and detailed plans of the renovation will be available for residents to review and discuss, said Bob O'Neil of Focus 2000.

Focus 2000 initially plans to renovate and re-open the existing fort buildings, including a restaurant and small casino. The applicant said he intends to add as many as three hotel and casino sites, three truck and recreation vehicle centers and possibly a factory mall outlet. O'Neil said he intends to continue to work with the residents and respond to their concerns about the project. "We will attempt to be consistent and direct," O'Neil said.

completed. The interchange at Wagon Wheel Drive connecting Boulder Highway has to be completed. A detour will be implemented in a couple of months, Michael said. Boulder Highway will be re-routed past the east side of Old Vegas. On/off ramps at College Drive and Horizon Drive need to be completed. Two structures for driving over the railroad also will be built. The first one, located south of Lake Mead Drive, is already under construction. The second structure, located at Wagon Wheel Drive will start construction soon.

million project should open about the same time as the new interchange for the U.S. 95 (Henderson) expressway, Stubbs said. The expressway extension is scheduled to open in Fall 1994.

When completed, the 176-acre site will include 15 to 20 car dealerships, related commercial and professional services and a state-of-the-art auto demonstration course, he said. Stubbs said the course was designed by Motor Trend, adding, "many of the manufacturers' engineering departments are getting involved" in its development.

In addition, Car Country will feature a hotel/casino/conference center, family attractions and an on-site day care center for employees, he said.

The site will maintain a turn-of-the-century theme with Victorian architecture, emphasizing customer convenience and shopping, Stubbs said. Showrooms will be located along the main street with parts and services departments behind them.

The on-site office opened in January, Stubbs said. The grading has been completed, including an extension of Foothills Drive, which will connect with Boulder Highway. The infrastructure, financed with Henderson Public Improvement Trust bonds, is being completed on schedule, he added. "All we've got left is the electric and the telephone."

The project should create more than 3,000 jobs, Stubbs said in an earlier interview. With car sales expected to exceed $300 million annually, he said Car Country will have a major impact on city revenues.

Although the project has taken longer than expected to complete, Stubbs is optimistic. He expects to have firm commitments by the end of the month, with four or five ready to begin business when the expressway opens.

"Our dealerships will be poised to open in the strong, upswing market," he said.

Easy Breathers to meet July 22

Easy Breathers will hold its annual summer luncheon from noon to 1:30 p.m. July 22 in the St. Rose Dominican Hospital Annex.

Easy Breathers is a lung support group sponsored by Nevada Medical Supply and St. Rose Dominican Hospital to assist people suffering from emphysema and other related chronic lung diseases.

"Anyone interested in the Easy Breathers program is welcome to attend our summer luncheon as well as our regular monthly meetings held at St. Rose Dominican Hospital," said Dave Mehlberg, a certified respiratory therapist and coordinator for Easy Breathers. "Our main goal is to help lung patients learn what they can do to relieve breathing difficulties and avoid unnecessary hospital admissions."

"The classes are offered free of charge, and are conducted the second Wednesday of each month at 2:30 p.m. at St. Rose Dominican Hospital," said Sister Robert Joseph Bailey, coordinator of community education at St. Rose Dominican. "The luncheon will give new participants a chance to meet and socialize with other respiratory patients before attending a regular meeting. New members are always welcome to attend."

For more information or to make reservations for the luncheon, call Bailey at 564-4542.

Youngster drowns at Lake Mead

A two-year-old North Las Vegas lad drowned at Lake Mead Sunday when the air mattress raft on which he was riding was swept out into the lake by an off-shore wind.

The boy's father had been playing with his son in shallow water when he momentarily lost his grip on the raft. It immediately began its wind-driven journey out into the lake. The father attempted to retrieve the raft by swimming after it. He nearly drowned when he became exhausted in his futile efforts to catch up with his son. A park ranger noticed the predicament and called for a patrol boat to rescue the young lad. A boat headed for the raft but was still some distance away when a gust of wind tipped the raft over, sending the tiny boy into the water. A ranger dove from the patrol boat and recovered the youth who reportedly was found to be in full cardiac arrest.

Cardio-pulmonary resuscitation was begun immediately and the lad was rushed to the Boulder City Hospital and later taken by Flight for Life to Humana Sunrise in Las Vegas where he was pronounced dead at about 6 p.m. Park rangers ask visitors to be sure that children and non-swimmers wear personal floatation devices whenever they are in or near the water, and especially if they are using the inflatable rafts.

Rangers had just completed another similar rescue of an adult male who had become exhausted while swimming after an inflatable raft torn from his grip by the wind. The man went under the water and was fortunately spotted and rescued by a person in a sailboat who dove into the lake to rescue the unlucky individual. He, too, was transported by Flight for Life to a Las Vegas hospital.

"This is a relatively common and dangerous scenario," says Park Ranger Chuck Luttrell. "Inflatable rafts and toys are caught by the wind and carried too quickly for a person to catch. They swim too far, get fatigued and can't swim back to safety."

NPS officials note these two accidents are typical of the swimming related incidents at Lake Mead. They add that most drownings occur within a short distance of shore; that the use of personal floatation devices in the only way to prevent these tragedies from happening.

Police snag purse snatchers

By Katherine E. Scott
News Staff Writer

Four juveniles and an adult, all but one from out-of-state, were arrested early Tuesday morning for stealing a purse from a woman walking into a Green Valley neighborhood grocery store, according to police.

Police said the 48-year-old victim was entering the Smith's Food and Drug Store on Sunset Road when her purse was taken by two Oriental youths.

"The victim screamed for help and two Smith's employees chased the two suspects," according to an HPD news release issued Tuesday. The suspects were seen leaving westbound on Sunset Road in a red Ford Escort.

Henderson police officers searching for the suspects located the vehicle on Sunset Road, police said. "There were four juveniles and one adult in the vehicle," the news release stated, adding, "all subjects are from out of state except one of the juveniles who resides in Las Vegas."

Fernando Cruz Pascua, 18, of Moreno Valley, Calif., was charged with larceny. The four youths were booked on similar charges in Clark County Juvenile Hall, according to police.

Chamber lunch to feature health insurance issues

Employer-provided health insurance is planned to be the topic for the Chamber of Commerce monthly membership luncheon. The luncheon is scheduled for noon next Thursday at the Lonesome Dove Steak House, 2140 S. Boulder Highway.

Donna Oliver, medical manager of McGladrey & Pullen CPA's, is scheduled to present the program.

"This subject is of particular interest to all employers because there is a wave of new regulations at the federal and state levels," according to the chamber's monthly newsletter.

Subjects to be covered include mandatory employee coverage, different options "and what they really mean to the employers in dollars," the newsletter added.

Reservations should be made by 5 p.m. Tuesday by calling the chamber at 565-8951.

Budget cuts not to affect teachers

By Roy Theiss
News Staff Writer

Due to the state's $138 million deficit, Gov. Bob Miller is making cuts in all state agencies. The state's 17 school districts have been asked to cut their budgets by 5%.

The governor expects the reduction by the school districts will save the state nearly $15 million and Clark County School District's share is expected to be $9 million. The state will also save another $15 million by not implementing the third grade class size reduction program.

Although the 5% cut will have significant consequences for the school district, Superintendent Brian Cram said the district will not lay off teachers at the present time. But he was quick to add that decision depends upon the economy.

The cuts are the latest round in the governor's attempt to balance the state budget. Last year the governor asked the school districts

"We have to pull together on this. We are all in the same boat and have to take our turns bailing."

Brian Cram
CCSD Superintendent

to cut 2% of their budgets which resulted in a $1.9 million loss to the CCSD.

"We have to pull together on this," Cram said in a news release. "We are all in the same boat and have to take our turns bailing. The decisions that need to be made may not always be the most popular, but we are determined to do our part and to be fiscally responsible."

The budget cuts begin in January and things could change before that, Cram said in a telephone interview. "Even with the current cuts, the classroom would be the last place to touch. The classroom will be the least affected in the school district," Cram said. He added that the school district will continue to hire teachers and staff the classrooms fully.

But another factor plays a critical role in school budget. The school district has projected a fall enrollment increase of 5% and if it doesn't meet that level, the school district would receive less money, Cram said.

To ameliorate the budget situation, Cram said the school district took action more than a year ago. "A year and a half ago we realized revenue wasn't going to be as good as it has been," Cram said. "We took action to lessen the blow." Expenditures were trimmed, the vehicle fleet was streamlined and money was saved through energy conservation, he added.

Recycling Office offers advice

The State Recycling Office, in conjunction with the Governor's Office of Community Services, provides the following recycling facts:

- Nevada's recycling goal is 25%. Some states have set higher goals. Australia, in addition, has set goals to reduce half of their solid waste through recycling.

- For information on area recycling centers, contact the Governor's Office of Community Services at 687-4900, or call toll-free 1-800-828-4155.

- Many Nevada telephone directories can be recycled and used for such items as insulation and packing material. For information on recycling old telephone books, call 687-4910 or 1-800-828-4155.

- Polystyrene packing material (peanuts) returned in 1991 resulted in $26,000 in savings. They can now be recycled nationwide. For information, call 687-4910 or 1-800-828-4155.

If only: words of warning

If only, if only the young father had not inadvertently let go of the air mattress; if only the young tot on the mattress had been wearing some type of flotation device; if only the wind hadn't been blowing from the shoreline at Boulder Beach out onto the lake; if only—!

A young two-year-old boy drowned in Lake Mead Sunday because none of the above "if onlys" were done. In less time than it takes to read about it, the mattress was caught up by the wind and sent skimming across the water beyond the young father's reach. He struck out after it, swimming to the best of his ability but it wasn't enough. The mattress and its small occupant evaded his grasp and went further from the shore.

The father, exhausted, almost drowned in his futile efforts to reach his son. A strong gust of wind tipped the mattress over. The youngster was tossed into the lake with tragic results.

If only—! How many times have we read of the dangers of air mattress devices on water. But of course such accidents always happen to someone else, not to us.

And so last weekend, a family's fun outing at Lake Mead turned into tragedy and death—because of an air mattress on the water.

If that example isn't enough, another adult swimmer almost lost his life that same afternoon when his air mattress was also swept from his grasp and pushed out into the lake with no one on it. Yet the man swam after it, hoping to retrieve it. He, too, became exhausted and was slipping beneath the waves when he was spotted and rescued by a passing person in a sailboat.

Water is most unforgiving to those who push beyond their limits. Each year brings new tragedies here on Lake Mead. Summer fun turns to summer tragedy in the winking of an eye.

Hopefully the tragic weekend incident will make a strong impression on those who use air mattresses on open water such as found in Lake Mead. Hopefully parents will learn from this graphic example of what can happen in a matter of moments.

The young lad cannot be brought back. Hopefully his untimely death will be remembered by others and the scenario will not be repeated.

The American powder keg

The acquittal of four white police officers who had brutally beaten a black traffic offender merely triggered the riots in Los Angeles and other American cities. The root cause of the explosion had little to do with the jury's verdict.

As any dweller in an American city knows, the beating—which caused no loss of life—was not exceptional. The excessive use of force and outright brutality—committed not only by white policemen and not only against minorities—is relatively commonplace. The Los Angeles incident, recorded on videotape and relayed on television, became a symbol of chronic social injustice only because it received worldwide publicity.

What is most shocking about these riots is that they could break out even today. The powder keg of frustration and rage in America's inner cities is, it seems, as volatile as it was 50 years ago, when discrimination against disadvantaged minorities was rampant. All the broad, strictly enforced, civil rights laws, and all the "affirmative action" programs which favor disadvantaged minorities to the point of openly discriminating against others, seem to have been ineffective in assuaging ethnic tensions.

The Los Angeles riots are being billed now as the worst civil disturbances in American history. Indeed, their toll in lives and property has been dreadful: 44 killed, mostly blacks and Hispanics, 2,000 injured and 5,000 arrested, with damage estimated ultimately to amount to $2 billion.

But the modern history of such disturbances begins in 1943, when 34 persons were killed in Detroit in a riot triggered by a false rumor of rape and murder. In 1964 there were riots in New York City, Rochester, Philadelphia, Chicago and several New Jersey cities following the testing of new civil rights laws. The Los Angeles riots of 1965 which centered in the Watts inner city section involved 10,000 blacks who looted and razed a vast area. It took 15,000 troops to quell those riots then, and the toll was almost as terrible: 34 killed, of whom 28 were blacks killed by the police.

Riots erupted again in 1966 in Dayton and San Francisco, and more fiercely throughout the country in 1967. In July of that year the beating by the Newark police of a black man arrested for a traffic violation (which, unlike the Los Angeles incident, was not recorded on videotape) triggered a riot which claimed 26 lives, 24 of them black.

Later that month Detroit became a battlefield following a police raid on an after-hour nightclub. Federal troops had to be called in; 43 men, of whom 36 were black, died; 2,000 were injured and 5,000 arrested. Altogether in 1967, there were riots and disturbances in 127 cities. Seventy-seven lives were lost and close to 4,000 persons were injured.

Following the assassination of Rev. Martin Luther King in 1968, riots again broke out in 125 cities, causing 46 deaths; 55,000 soldiers and policemen arrested over 21,000 people. In a gun battle in Cleveland in July of that year, eight Black Nationalists and three policemen died.

Even electricity blackouts in major cities in the 1960s and 1970s, particularly in New York, triggered rampages by blacks and other minorities. Looting, arson and vandalism spread like wildfire.

French President Francois Mitterrand said recently that social inequities were at the root of the riots. True, only the poor riot; rich blacks and Hispanics do not. But had the victim of the Los Angeles beating been white, there would have been no riots. Clearly, it takes a combination of ethnic tensions and economic deprivation to cause such deadly explosions.

Nor is the problem strictly American. The same lethal combination of racial mix and socio-economic disparity now plagues European countries, too. And some have experienced the same kind of mindless rioting, albeit not on the American scale.

No democracy can afford to be smug about such explosions. In the

Nobody does it better

ANNAPOLIS—A day tracking Ross Perot is not without its perils. Starting with the "Today Show," proceeding to a rally and press conference here and concluding with the "Larry King Live" show, the average person risks losing 10 I.Q. points just listening to the guy. Except when he is being evasive or transforming himself into the world's first billionaire victim, Perot is a kitsch character, someone who's overdosed on elevator music. "Nobody does it better," he told his people here. "Climb every mountain," he exhorted. Too late. They had sunk into a stupor.

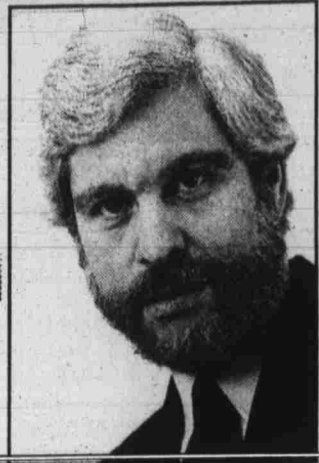

This was the day Perot rebutted charges that he had investigated George Bush and his children. This was the day he accused the Republican Party of engaging in dirty tricks—the dirtiest, presumably, being a search for the truth about Perot. This was the day he couldn't answer questions about the recently enacted Civil Rights Act, the superconductor project in his home state of Texas or how, now that we're at it, how he would reduce the budget deficit. For reporters, it was one swell news day.

But for me, the real news was how bad Ross Perot is on the stump. By now, no one expects him to say much of anything. Truly, he does not seem to know much of anything—except that he should be president. This is based on his being his own cult figure—a delusion that he is uniquely talented, if not downright gifted, to do what others cannot. He has been chosen—with luck and lots of money, in 50 states.

The evidence for this has to be deduced, but it is there nonetheless. The incredible specialness of his life is memorialized in Perot's Dallas office and in Texarkana, his hometown, site of his mummified family home as well as the Ross Perot Scout Service Center, which displays his Boy Scout Handbook. And what, you may reasonably ask, is so special about his life? The answer is plain: He has become filthy rich.

Indeed, he has. But just how the ability to make money on the scale of Scrooge McDuck translates into talents needed for the Oval Office is not clear. What is clear, though, is that Perot has nothing of substance to say. Standing on a boat in the Annapolis harbor, he remembered that it was here, in this very city, that his wife Margot had pinned his ensign's shoulder boards on him after he graduated from the Naval Academy. This event, no doubt moving to everyone involved, is typically memorialized by a relic. "I still have that picture on display in my home," he told the crowd.

Turning from himself, Perot addressed the good people, about 2,000 strong, who had waited for him on a hot and muggy day. He praised their good sense to reassert their management of the country: "Nobody does it better," he said, quoting from a song that is double-entendish at best. "Nobody does it half as good as you."

He talked of his graduation from the Naval Academy and then asked his people a really tough question: "Are you willing to do what it takes to rebuild the jobs base of this country?" Yes! the crowd roared. Did it want to see "Made in the USA again become the world standard of excellence?" Hard to believe, but no one said no. Perot said he wanted good schools and the end of crime. I ask you, is it any wonder this man has such a large following?

But then Perot came to the tough area of race relations—America's abiding tragedy, the cause of the Civil War and, more recently, of the Rodney King affair and the Los Angeles riot. He had a plan: "If you have a divided team, you lose. If you have a divided country, you lose." He called then for a united nation. How would he do that? Easy. You "climb every mountain." He also quoted these lines: "A bell is no bell 'til you ring it. And a song is no song 'til you sing it." I'm not sure, though, if this was his civil rights plank or his economic program. My notes at that point are not clear.

Ross Perot's love for Ross Perot is something to behold. More than any other politician in my experience, he is offering himself—his very body—to the nation—nothing more. Not his ideas. Not his programs. Not his ideology. Nosirree. Just him. It's a conceit that will do as much damage to his campaign as any Republican truth squad or the archaeological diggings of the news media.

He is a man who diminishes his own applause, a Superman who brings his own Kryptonite to the rally, someone who cannot yet tell a volunteer what he has volunteered for. He is political porridge—as themeless as Churchill's famous pudding and what the impoverished Tevye of "Fiddler on the Roof" had in mind when he longs for wealth because, among other things, people would consider him wise: "When you're rich they really think you know."

Ah, Tevye, nobody does it better.

Governors empathize on budget short-falls

Bob Miller doesn't envy Gov. Pete Wilson. The California chief executive is such a lightning rod for bad news that Nevada's governor jokingly tells him he tries not to sit next to him at meetings.

Good reason. Things were tough enough when the Republican governor took the oath of office.

The state of California, with the nation's highest population, had started the long dive in to its toughest economic crisis ever. Coping with that kind of situation alone requires more time and energy than any one person has.

But for Wilson, a deepening recession was just the beginning of insoluble problems. It was accompanied by a spate of troubles like freezes and floods, fires and drought. Usually a major concern, they suddenly became minor.

First came the explosive Rodney King decision that triggered a riot far more massive than anyone expected. It let loose forces no one could control and resulted in enough fires to outshine the thousand points of light envisioned by Wilson's fellow Republican, George Bush.

California was just digging itself out from that disaster when the biggest earthquake in 40 years yanked Wilson out of bed last week to survey the damage.

Miller doesn't have to share this full slate of disasters with his beleaguered fellow governor. But he does have to share the one that doesn't disappear after a few after-shocks or raging fires. Like California, Nevada currently has the biggest shortfall in state history, and it is the toughest to deal with.

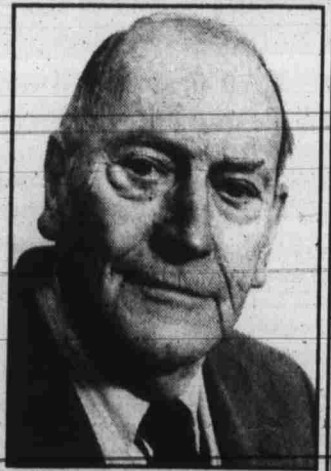

Also like Wilson, Miller has to wrestle with the problem in the face of an anti-government public which doesn't seem to grasp how serious the situation has become. It figures the politicians are deliberating making the nation's economic problems worse than they are.

So, Gov. Miller, being a politician, has trouble convincing a disbelieving public that he's not playing games. At a press conference the other day he said he's hearing a lot of negative reaction. What he seeks from all comers are suggestions on how to deal with the crisis: "I'm getting lots of advice from other people, most of which is, 'Don't do this or don't do that.'"

A large chunk of that advice is coming from legislators, and most of it is discordant, to say the least. But the one thing they have agreed on so far is that they don't want Miller to call a special session to try to help him handle the crisis. Obviously such a session would require,

CAPITOL

by

first of all, some kind of agreement among the lawmakers on if, why and what such a session could or would do. Miller didn't get much of any of that from his meeting with the Democratic leadership:

"We had some spirited exchanges. Certainly there were differences of opinion as to what solutions were best, or what areas needed to be protected. And I think that's one of the indications I've expressed all along—that when evaluating the benefits to the people of the state of Nevada of a special session, you have to evaluate whether there's some kind of consensus in the Legislature. You have to figure whether 63 people can reach a common decision. And there is some significant dispute right now.

"There wasn't any consensus on any critical element. Number one, whether to have a special session, two, what it would be if we did, or number three, what were the most important elements of state government that needed to be protected."

Even though Miller was referring only to his meeting with the Democrats, he added that "from previous conversations I've had, there are differing opinions between the Democratic and Republican legislators as well. But there's not a continuity of opinion even within either party, let alone everybody else."

Does that mean he has now eliminated a special session from his list of options?

"Well, I think it's significant element I have to consider. I don't think it benefits the people of the state of Nevada to have a special session unless there's a realistic assumption that they can reach a conclusion within a short period of time. Otherwise we just end up with an extra legislative session."

In other words, not only the public but the lawmakers who represent them don't grasp the seriousness of the situation enough to forget their individual political sacred cows and put the public first.

Significantly, Miller is getting more understanding from the State of Nevada Employees Association, more often than not at odds with him. Bob Gagnier, executive director of SNEA, seems to have the best grasp of the problem:

"I don't think anybody will be happy with anything that comes up. I don't think the governor will be happy or we'll be happy. It's just not that kind of situation. There was a dialogue today, and that's good. I think the governor will do what he feels he has to do."

Guy Shipler writes about Nevada politics from the state Capitol.

No portables

Editor:

I am a Green Valley High School student who is upset at the fact that there will be portables at our school. I am aware of the many questionable zone variances that have not yet been but should be looked into by the school district.

Besides that, bus loads of students from other communities are shipped to our wonderful school despite their objections. These teenagers do not even desire being present at the outstanding school we call Green Valley High!

This is not an argument about desegregation. This is an attack against overcrowding our school.

It is common in overcrowded schools to emphasize the number of students rather than to maintain the safety of the students. At least 20 portables interfere with our current fire escape routes, subjecting students to dangerous conditions.

Green Valley High School was constructed as part of the master-planned community. Was an overcrowded school part of the plan? Do these "gorgeous" brown boxes help show off our green and grey school?

The school was not intended to have portables, and I (and I'm sure many others) feel it should be kept that way for the students' sake.

Dam Tappers disband

Editor:

From the Dam Tappers, a little note of thanks to the community organizations, care centers, convalescent hospitals, senior centers and community organizations in both Boulder City and Henderson for allowing our tap dance group to entertain you.

It has been a learning and rewarding experience that we will not soon forget.

However, as the director and teacher, this is to let you know that I am retiring the name "The Dam Tappers" which is registered in my name in the county of Clark, State of Nevada, and disbanding the tap dance group known by that name and will no longer be directing or teaching the classes. At this time I especially want to thank the Boulder City Senior Center and the city of Boulder City Recreation Department for their constant support of our senior endeavors.

Thanks for town meetings

Editor:

I would like to thank the city planning office staff for all the hard work they did to put together the recent town meeting. Everyone was very impressed with the Multiple Family Housing Study. It was very easy for the lay person to understand. I found the graph which compared this area with other master planned communities to be beneficial. I was not surprised that our percentage of multi-family ranks high compared to other master planned communities.

Now that they know the percentages, it is my hope that this study will be utilized at both planning and council level when deciding on future zoning requests.

Legal abductions

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled June 15 that the U.S. government is entitled to kidnap suspected criminals in a foreign country without the approval of that country. This is an important legal landmark.

The specific case which elicited the 6-3 court decision involved the abduction of a Mexican suspected of slaying an American narcotics agent in 1985. But the ramifications of the decision are far-reaching.

It legitimizes the capture of Panamanian dictator Manuel Noriega and his transfer for trial in the United States (although it says nothing about the heavy cost in innocent human lives of the invasion of Panama for that purpose), and it reinforces the anti-terrorist law which empowers U.S. intelligence agencies to nab terrorists and others charged with crimes against American citizens.

What the ruling implies is that the traditional concept of what constitutes a state of war has been superseded by the special conditions of contemporary life. The war against drugs is not fought between countries, nor is it governed by international conventions. It is a war waged by an international cartel against society. The power of drug traffickers often enables them to corrupt government agencies, indeed sometimes to "own" the government itself, as was apparently the case with Noriega. It makes the resort to extradition agreements an exercise in futility.

Similarly, governments which sponsor and shelter terrorist organizations can hardly be expected to help apprehend terrorist leaders or their gunmen. And the uselessness of the U.N. organizations in these matters is absolute. Society's only recourse is to act against terrorists wherever they may be, regardless of traditional niceties of international law.

Ultimately, the most effective deterrent against the drug traffickers and terrorists, who, as in Syria's case, often serve the same master, is international sanctions against governments which collaborate with them. But the prospects of such united world action are still slim. Until then, the democracies, which are the main victims of these twin scourges, will have to fend for themselves, and bring to justice criminals who are provided with haven by corrupt and totalitarian regimes.

Small-town friendliness prevails

Memories surfaced this week when a conversation turned to a vague recollection of an old woman who lived alone way out in the middle of nowhere, at the base of Sunrise Mountain, more than two decades ago.

I don't remember the first time I heard about Old Lady Hermit. My brother Mike and his buddies used to go out there to visit in the mid-to-late '60s, heading miles past the end of the paved roadway to reach the cave where the old woman lived.

One time I went along, and I remember sitting on the stone wall she had built by hand, edging the cement patio she had constructed herself. I recall Mike telling me that he and his friends would bring out sacks of cement or cans of food whenever they visited.

I don't remember what we talked about, but I do recall the view. From there, we could see the entire city of Las Vegas, truly an oasis in the surrounding sea of desert. There were some scantily populated areas perhaps as close as Charleston and Lamb. I think the cave was way out past the end of Stewart.

My friend Linda didn't go with us, and I don't recall ever talking about Old Lady Hermit with her. But Linda's home is now in the midst of several housing developments that have encroached the foothills where the reclusive woman once shunned society.

This week when I mentioned Old Lady Hermit to my 10-year-old son, Shawn, he tried to recall where he had heard about her. Then he remembered. He had been at Linda's when he and her son Chris spotted some caves nearby. He said Linda told them one may have been where Old Lady Hermit lived.

A lot has changed since those days, when Linda and I lived near the corner of Maryland Parkway and Desert Inn Road and our parents had to fight to get a stop sign at that intersection. From there to Sahara Avenue, the only thing on the west side of Maryland Parkway was Vegas Village (now part of Commercial Center). On the east was a one-building, one-story Sunrise Hospital, and farther down the road was a convalescent home.

In those days, and all the way through high school, if one had a friend who lived in Henderson we would never go "all the way out there" to visit. They had to come to us. Right up to the time I started working out here, the prejudice against this wonderful town continued.

Then I discovered that Henderson was the best-kept secret in the valley. Unfortunately, many others discovered the same thing. The result has been higher housing costs and more traffic. But especially in Henderson proper, the atmosphere of small-town friendliness continues.

I hope progress stops at that point.

Challenge students during summer

By Bill Hanlon

Well, the kids have been out of school about a month. Chances are they are looking for things to do or maybe they are just getting underfoot.

These are the times you think of how well school keeps those little minds busy and out of your hair. As a parent, you should continue working the brains of those lovely little ones that you call your own.

The library is a great start, check out some of those books you've been meaning for them to read. Talk to them about the book after they have read it. There is no better example you can set by having your kids know you read also.

Read the newspaper, talk to them about the news that may impact their lives. Explain the importance of being an informed citizen.

Have them go over their "notes" from last year. No, not the notes to their friends—the ones they took in their math, science, and English classes. Refreshing their knowledge will only make them more prepared for next year.

Take advantage of programs in the community. Quality time is important.

The newspapers owned by the O'Callaghan family continue to print a math concept column each week. The columns alternate each week between elementary and secondary topics. Taking a little time each week to sit down with the kids to go over these topics will demonstrate the interest and importance you place on learning.

This week's topic is finding the volumes of prisms and pyramids. If you have not been turning back to the Panorama section playing in the wonderful world of math, then today is a good day to start. Remember, math is not a spectator sport. To enjoy it, you must participate. Break out the pencil and paper. Make math your life.

For the price of an annual subscription, you receive 52 math lessons... that is a pretty good deal. I am not aware of any other newspaper in the country that donates this kind of space on a weekly basis to the sciences. This cost is being absorbed by the O'Callaghans. Take advantage of their generosity and tell your friends about the joy of learning mathematics.

If you would like to see a topic of interest covered in the column, call or write the newspaper. We'll be glad to make math part of your life.

Columns have already been written on division, fractions, decimals, integers, areas, perimeters and word problems. Linear, quadratic, and systems of equations; equations involving absolute value and radicals, graphing linear equations—two variables, and trigonometry all challenge the mind.

The silver lining in airline shakeout

Industry shakeouts aren't pretty—and the current one in the U.S. airline industry is no exception. But when too many competitors put themselves deep in hock to add a bunch of unneeded capacity, the result is predictable: The worst offenders go out of business, others seek protection under bankruptcy law, and a few of the strongest try to turn their muscle into a long-term advantage.

There's been tremendous turmoil in the airline business ever since deregulation in 1978. There was a period of startups, a period of massive mergers, and then a period of consolidation that continues today. Bankruptcy laws have been used by weaker carriers to keep fighting against the big guys; stronger carriers have used their clout to lock up landing slots at major airports and add so many flights to key routes that no rival has a chance.

This has taken a toll on service. You can't count on airline meeting schedules the way you once could. It's hard to keep up with all those different fares, despite the supposed simplification. Full-service airlines have dwindled from 18 to 9. Still add it all up and the U.S. consumer has done pretty well. Airlines have become more efficient, run more as businesses than utilities—as in the regulated days—and the cost of air travel has remained fairly low. If you don't believe that, just pay for a ticket to fly between two European cities. Regulation and protectionist policies have led to such exorbitant fares that the European Community is seeking changes.

There is clearly more pain ahead. This year, U.S. carriers are losing money faster than they can lose your baggage. And this summer's fare war means the red ink will continue. But keep in mind that these losses are in large part the reflection of an overexpansion in the late 1980s, financed by a lot of easy money, and of a deep recession.

The bottom line is that deregulation is working just as it should. Sure, maybe it's unfair to this or that airline that Continental has lowered its costs by filing for Chapter 11, or that United and American have most of the landing slots sewed up at O'Hare. But the industry is making steady progress toward a day when they will be able to make a solid profit if they run their businesses correctly.

SILVER STATE DISPOSAL Recycling News

Important recycling tips!

The cycle begins with you.

■ Thank you, Las Vegas, for your overwhelming participation in Silver State Disposal's recycling program. Roughly 75 percent of Las Vegas-area households are actively recycling. That's good news for the environment and for Southern Nevada!

On the curb by 7 a.m.

■ Recyclables must be on your curb by 7 a.m. on your scheduled recycling pickup days. Recycling is in addition to your regularly scheduled trash service. Recyclables are not picked up at the same time as your regular trash.

Important tip for newspapers.

■ On windy days, please tie newspapers in bundles or place them in bags before placing them into the white collection bins, which should always be stacked in the middle of the red and blue bins. This will prevent them from being scattered by the wind.

For info. call 735-5151.

■ Silver State Disposal Recycles Nevada is working hard to make sure that recycling goes smoothly. If you have any questions about recycling schedules or procedures, please call 735-5151. Thank you for your cooperation.

Seniors roll past Pahrump

The Henderson Little League Senior League all-stars routed Pahrump 21-1 Tuesday in their opening round game at Ed Fountain Park in Las Vegas.

Brandon Mattingly pitched four shutout innings to get the victory for Henderson, which played Legacy Little League Wednesday after News deadline in a winner's bracket game.

Jeff Holsey, Henderson's lead-off hitter, scored on four of his five at-bats. He also stole two bases. Each of the Henderson starters scored at least one run.

Henderson scored five runs in the first inning, benefitting from five Pahrump errors. Holsey, Mattingly, Jason O'Connor, Aaron Welbourne and Eric Bott scored the runs.

After a scoreless second, Henderson added four runs in the third to make it 9-0. Bott reached on an error, stole two bases and scored on a hit by Jason Lariviere. Lariviere and Holsey also scored in the inning.

Henderson put the game out of reach with a nine-run fifth inning. Henderson had only two hits in the inning, but used several walks and four stolen bases to make it 18-1.

Downey, Kevin Elloitt and Phil Silva each pitched an inning for Henderson.

TEARING UP PAHRUMP—Henderson Senior All-Star Brandon Mattingly (43) slides home safely against Pahrump during a 9-run outburst in the fifth inning. Mattingly scored on

Simmons: Majors will go for title

The Henderson Little League is hosting its first Major all-star tournament beginning Friday, and the host team doesn't plan on leaving early.

"We want it so bad and we are really going to go after it," Major all-stars coach John Simmons said. "We don't know much about the other teams and we don't care to know."

Simmons' squad has a bye in the first round and will play the winner of the Legacy-Red Rock game Monday at 5:30 p.m. Green Valley's major league team, which made the regional finals last year, opens against Central at 8 p.m. Saturday.

Simmons said the team's top pitchers are Eric Wise and Ryan Eves.

Simmons said Eves has been among the most improved players in the league.

"Eves can be so good at times. He gets better and better with every game," the coach said.

Simmons also said the team's strength will be its defense and that the Henderson team will have solid hitting.

Other all-stars include Zack Adams, Peter Alder, James Barnes, Jason Bitsko, Justin Botkin, Durrell Davis, Jason Goldsby, Travis Joyner, Paul Kirk, Ed McDermott and Josh Robinson.

League slates first tourney

By Terry Carter
News Staff Writer

While the host all-stars receive a first-round bye, the Henderson Little League adults will be busy hosting Henderson's first Major League All-Star baseball tournament at Morrell Park this weekend.

Fields one and four will be used for tournament play starting Friday night with opening ceremonies, league treasurer Ronda Garland said. The only changes to the adjacent fields will be the installation of temporary fences.

The Henderson Little League obtained permission to host the city's first local all-star tournament after petitioning the Nevada District 2, Little League office, Garland added. Knowing they would incur all costs incurred for the event, the league board members applied and were approved.

League president Dale Rednour said Tuesday 15 volunteers are needed for each night to keep the tournament running smoothly. The five-day event will be both fun and work for those hosting the event.

Friday's opening ceremonies will include the following list of events, in chronological order:

- At 5:30 p.m., a challenger game pitting two teams of handicapped players will be held on Field 4.
- At 6:30, colors will be presented by the U.S. Marine Reserve Corp.
- The National Anthem will be sung by Pizzazz, a group of 10 vocalists led by Basic High graduated Candie Dirk.
- League president Rednour makes opening remarks to the crowd gathered on Field 1.

The introduction of Henderson Mayor Lorna Kesterson, U.S. Senator Harry Reid and a surprise guest from Major League Baseball.

As a finale, a parade of teams and players, which will feature the individual introduction of each player.

At 8 p.m., the first games of the tournament will be played in Henderson. The pin-striped Henderson Major All-Stars, however, won't open play until Monday night.

A fireworks show completed this year's Damboree festivities and illuminated the skies over Boulder City.

Boulder celebrates Damboree

Water fights were common during the Damboree Parade. Here, an innocent bystander is blasted as the intended target ducks. The boy shooting is from the Boulder City Pool.

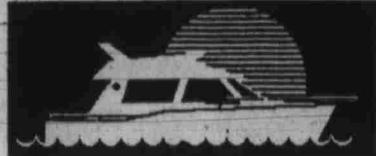

Winds kept crowds cool and flags flying during the 44th Annual Damboree celebration in Boulder City last Saturday.

I'd Rather Be Boating

By Don Holladay

There are certain combinations that keep me off the lake: questionable weather, including temperatures of more than 100 degrees, unpredictable winds and every boater in California, Arizona, Utah and Nevada planning on a beach at Lake Mead. The crowds we really don't mind, but the heat and wind can make every weekend activity seem like work.

If you are a boater using Lake Mohave and paying the Federal User fee, you might like to know that there is a big effort in Washington to repeal the bill starting Oct. 1. Don't know a thing about any refund you might have coming, but it is a very active drive.

We can't feel the emotions of the parents who lost their two-year-old at the lake last weekend; unless of course we have been subject to the same loss. It is a terrible way to learn the practice of keeping a life jacket on a youngster. How quickly a simple bit of fun and laughs can develop into a tragedy that will affect a family for the rest of its existence. As boaters and skippers, I am sure we each have times when we require a specific individual to wear a life jacket, but there should be no question when that individual is a baby whose only instinct toward water is to "dog paddle."

Once again my condolences to all marina concessionaires on Lake Mead. The lake seems to be dropping faster than normal. As I have mentioned before, it is Lake Mead that takes the brunt when more water is needed downstream of the Colorado. I would only hope that the Department of The Interior would make some allowance in rebate, credits or whatever in order to help these concessionaires cover their costs for moving their docks. Or am I being naive and asking too much?

Lake Mead Marina had some very large plans to re-format their docks in order to make it easier and less expensive to handle the moves. Apparently that plan has been shelved.

These marinas, as well as Park Service are running into money problems. To try to maintain some of the way of life we have enjoyed around Lake Mead, I again speak out for charging admission into the park; providing Washington would allow all those dollars to be spent on improving Lake Mead as well as passing some of it on to the concessionaires.

It is possible we may elect an independent as our next president, so what is so radical about the government changing some outdated policies of how they distribute some of their collected fees?

I recently saw some pictures showing pollution that is gathering on both salt and fresh water shores. It is pretty obvious that the salt water trash is coming from the larger vessels. But the trash is not from their cargo, but is made up of garbage and waste they deliberately toss over the side.

I must say again, I believe our Lake Mead skippers do an outstanding job of safety when operating their boats. It is very well known that Lake Mead, from a boating standpoint, has one of the best safety records in the nation. This is mainly due to common sense skippers. It is obvious that these same skippers also watch what goes over the side of their boats, or is not left on the beaches they enjoy. A few years ago many of our Lake Mead beaches were left in shambles on most weekends. Now, if you go out there now on a Monday, you will be pleasantly surprised by the lack of trash the boaters have left behind. I think much of this great attitude is due to the past "Keep America Clean" campaign when Americans became aware of the messes they were leaving behind on beaches, along their highways and in parks. And just for comment, I also credit the senior Americans who are using those areas as their fun places. They not only bring back their own, they usually pick up somebody else's trash.

BPAA and Swift are providing a coupon offer for one free game of bowling at thousands of BPAA bowling centers. Forty million of these coupons will be available on packages of Swift-Eckrich and Butterball franks, lunch meats and smoked sausages.

The promotion's concept is to introduce people to bowling and create awareness of the sport through product distribution.

BPAA requests that Women's International Bowling Congress, American Bowling Congress and Young American Bowling Alliance members support the purchase of Swift-Eckrich products. Coupons obtained by bowlers should be used to bring new bowlers and renew former bowlers' interest in the sport.

The program asks all WIBC league bowlers to contribute one cent per game per week, during the season. Thus we can all share in the teaching and instruction of the youth bowlers, encouraging them to hone their skills through the use of bumper bowling, for

1940s Reno caught by camera in new exhibit

By Phillip I. Earl

In 1938, Mildred and Jerry Cobb arrived in Reno from Milwaukee, invited out by Wally Warren and Merle Inch of Radio KOH, Nevada's first commercial station.

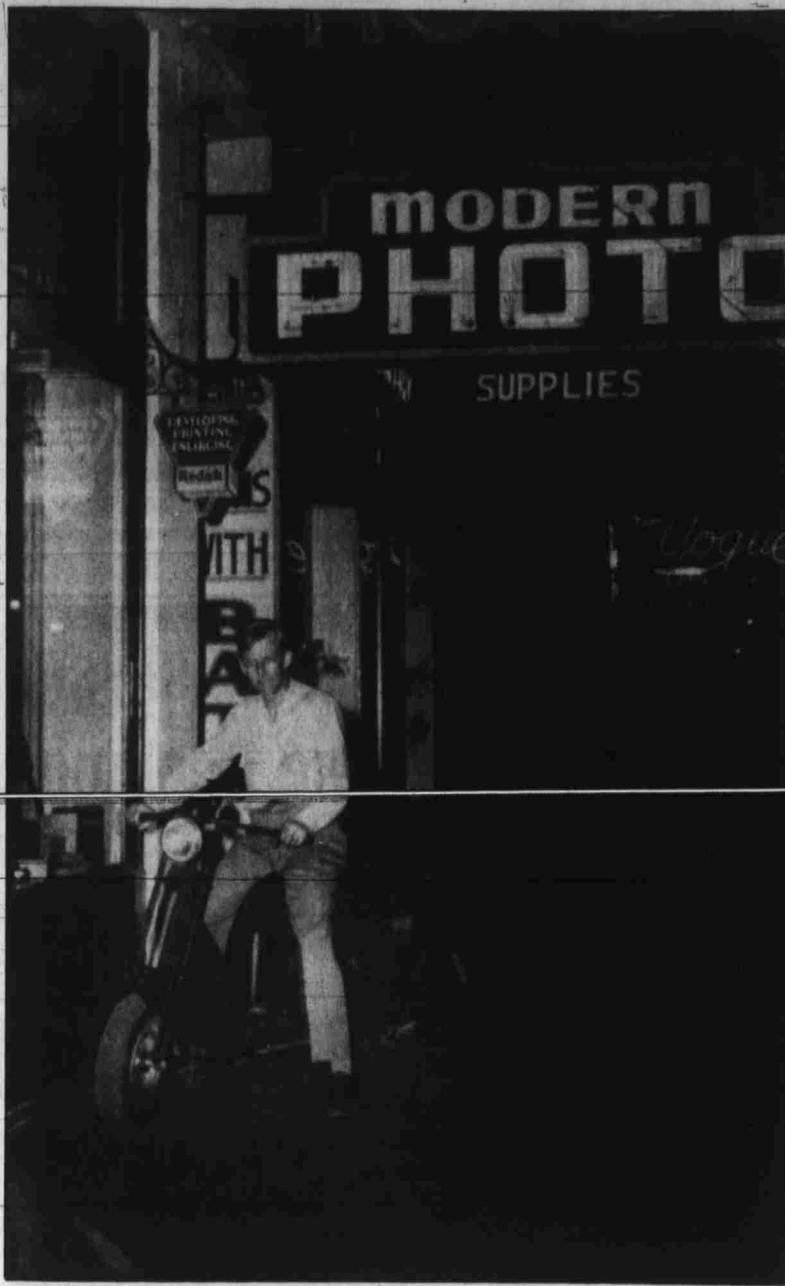

In addition to working for the station, Jerry developed several sidelines with Mildred, one of which was freelance photography. They also established Pacific Amusements—"Telephono," as older Renoites might remember the enterprise—a company which piped music directly from records played by operators in another building to restaurants in the downtown section. Later they pioneered elevator music and background music for grocery stores.

Second St. Over the next 10 years, they specialized in commercial photography and portraiture. They also had camera girls in the casinos and out photographing parades, street scenes, athletic events, floods, fires, distinguished visitors or anything else which struck their fancy.

After Modern Photo went out of business in 1954, the photos and negatives were stored at the home of their son, Neal. In 1991, he contacted the Nevada Historical Society about donating the collection. Since that time, the staff has been processing prints and preparing for a major exhibition which will open with a reception from 5 to 7:30 p.m. on Friday, July 17, at the Reno museum, 1650 N. Virginia St.

Entitled "Through the Lens of Modern Photo Studio: Reno in the 1940s," the exhibition captures the town at a moment in time that represents the city's apex of cultural and social prominence in Nevada. The public is invited to the opening reception, and there is no charge. For further information, call the Society in Reno at 1-688-1190.

Among the celebrities in the exhibit is Bing Crosby at Moana Park in a Pittsburgh Pirates uniform.

He was caught singing on a remote broadcast for Radio KOLO, but no one remembers what the occasion was for his being here. Pianist Liberace and cowboy actor Leo Carrillo were photographed at Reno's Club Fortune in 1948, as was comedienne Martha Raye at the Bonanza Club.

Reno's 1950 flood is also documented in the exhibit, as are several notable fires which altered Reno's downtown landscape. The photos of Reno's famed arch and scenes on Virginia Street remind us of how much the community has changed in 50 years, and a photo of what was once a Chinese brothel near the north end of the Lake Street bridge calls up memories of another aspect of Reno's history which is no longer with us. The parade scenes and such promotions as 1947's "Jam-Bo-Reno" remind us of what a lively town Reno has been.

Who remembers the Virginia Lake area before it was developed into a residential addition or the site of Park Lane Mall before Reno's downtown was abandoned by, merchants and shoppers? Where was Reno Hot Springs? Does anyone recall the airport at Greenbrae in Sparks? What about Reno's Sky Ranch? Who indeed?

Maddux, not Agassi, should be our local hero

Andre Agassi's stunning Wimbledon victory was the story of the day for many in Las Vegas last week. To me, though, it was only second best.

Nothing against the scruffy looking, pig tailed Agassi's accomplishment in jolly old England. I just think Greg Maddux's yeoman work in Atlanta later that day was more of a triumph.

True, Agassi was heroic during the fortnight of Wimbledon. He disposed of six opponents and, as the No. 12 seed, became the lowest ranked to capture the title except for the unseeded Boris Becker several years ago. Still, the boors of tennis leave a lot to be desired and for that reason the sport(?) turned me off a long time ago.

On to someone who should be recognized for accomplishment under pressure.

Greg Maddux started in Atlanta with a 9-7 record, facing a Braves team which had allowed only two runs against the Chicago Cubs in five games this year. Those two came across the plate the day before.

You would have to get into Maddux's psyche for true feelings as he warmed up. Goose eggs all over the place have to set you to wondering "what's going on?"

In four of the seven losses on the Maddux ledger the Cubs failed to score. It had gotten to the point that if an opponent scored just one runoff Maddux it was enough. The 26-year-old had legitimate

Brando's Turn

By Jim Brann

reason for taking a trip to the top of the Sears Tower.

Realizing baseball is a long season Maddux kept taking the ball in his turn and, giving it his all, kept the Cubs in every game he pitched.

This is proved by his league-leading innings pitched and his less than 2.50 ERA through the season. A hot head or immature hurler, would have the headlines to himself and justifiably so.

But Maddux, the consummate professional, blamed no one and went about his business. It had to turn around, he figured, and it did in his last two starts. Last week the Cubs pushed across five runs in the first inning of a Maddux start and Sunday two were on the board before he took the hill.

Sunday's start was important to Maddux in more ways than one. Sure, he was being called upon to stop another Cubs slide, he wanted to get in double digits in the win column and he wanted to solidify his position as a top National League pitcher.

Most important Bobby Cox was in the other dugout. Cox will be the manager of the NL All-Stars Tuesday in San Diego and it is he who will name the pitching staff.

If Cox had Maddux in mind as a team member before the start of the game he etched it in stone at the end. All Maddux did was make his Braves look silly for seven innings enroute to an 8-0 win.

Now Cox has another problem. Who to start in the classic. Tom Glavine leads the league in victories and is in the top 10 in ERA. Naturally the starter will be someone who doesn't pitch this weekend.

The trip to San Diego will be a joyous one for Maddux. His brother Mike, a pitcher with the Padres, and his parents, from Las Vegas, will be in attendance. So should Rick Sutcliffe, former teammate and close friend, now with the Baltimore Orioles.

Agassi earned his acclaim last week in England.

Maddux will earn his Tuesday in San Diego.

SOME OTHER THOUGHTS —Note to Joe Chevalier, host of the Sports Buffet on radio KVEG. As lead cheerleader of Pittsburgh sports teams be advised a storm is on the horizon headed toward the Steelers. USA Today football writer Steve Wesiman has issued a warning to new head coach Bill Cowher. "No first-year Steelers coach has bettered than .500 and only one (Buddy Parker, 1957) got as many as six victories." So Joe, in touting over/under win total as posted by some books, keep this info in mind when heading to the wickets for a possible laydown.

Don't look now, but we may be in for a great, exciting race in the second half of the baseball season. Keep an eye on the Padres boxscores as Fred McGriff and Gary Sheffield battle to become the first Triple Crown (average, RBI and homers) winner since Carl Yastrzemski in 1967.

And, that's as far as I go.

Golden files for Congress

Carson City businessman Don Golden has filed for Nevada's Second Congressional District. He is supporting "Bo" Gritz, Populist Party candidate for President.

"Gritz wants to copy what Lincoln and Kennedy both did to get our economy going—issue interest-free, United States Notes," Golden said. "The present Federal Reserve Notes are the issues of the private Federal Reserve Bank. We pay billions of dollars in interest tribute every year to the 'Fed' in order to use these notes," Golden explained.

"The Constitution, in Article I, Section 8, Clause 5, requires the Congress to issue our money. The Congress isn't doing it. That's why I'm running. If Gritz is elected, he'll get the economy going and get our Constitution back. If I'm elected, I'll help make it permanent," Golden said.

"It is idiocy to pretend that the present drop in interest rates will do the job. That's a good start, but with the capital requirements of the banks being increased at the same time, they can't lend more money into the economy, even though they'd like to. The economy needs more money to end the depression and put people to work. Every businessman knows the economy isn't getting the money. Our economy is being mismanaged with consummate ineptitude. Gritz will put an end to it and I'll help him," Golden concluded.

Golden runs the Econo-Lube and Tune on South Carson Street.

Donation benefits Junior Golf Association

The Las Vegas Founders' Club, host of the Las Vegas Invitational Golf Tournament, recently donated $30,000 to the Southern Nevada Junior Golf Association.

The donation will go toward sponsoring the Las Vegas Founders' Legacy Junior, which will take place July 7-10 at The Legacy Junior, which will take place July 7-10 at The Legacy Golf Club in Henderson.

The third annual tournament, part of the American Junior Golf Association, will feature 108 golfers from 12 states, including 11 from Las Vegas. The golfers will compete in three age divisions: boys, 15-18; boys, 13-14 and girls, 13-18.

The donation was made by the Las Vegas Founders' Golf Foundation, the arm of the Founders' Club established to aid charitable groups throughout Las Vegas with proceeds from the Las Vegas Invitational.

Bob Cole, a member of the Founders' Club board of directors, said the Las Vegas Founders' Legacy Junior brings some of the best junior golfers in the nation to Las Vegas.

"This year's event has an outstanding field and includes some young junior golfers from Las Vegas," Cole said. "The Founders' Club is proud to be a sponsor of this fine event."

Mark Mushkin, director of the tournament, said the Las Vegas Founders' has shown tremendous support for the Southern Nevada Junior Golf Association.

The 1992 Las Vegas Invitational is scheduled for Oct. 7-11 on three courses.

Weekly Sermon

What happened to Christianity?

By The Rev. Jim Serada
New Life Church & Literary Foundation

You tell me. Isn't this supposed to be a predominantly Christian nation? Didn't America start out as a place where people believed in God, prayed for His help and protection, tried to follow His commandments?

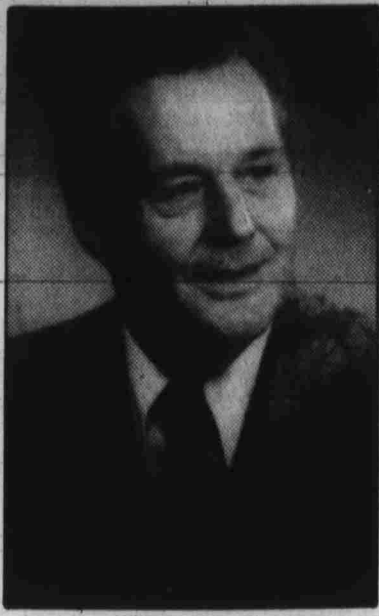

So, what happened? What went wrong?

Well, haven't you been watching the 6 o'clock News? Isn't it absolutely clear to you we have become a nation of greedy, care-less consumers and disposers, who think we can afford to get and grab and go... and let somebody else worry about it... tomorrow?

Oh, I know you have heard this before. You have come to expect a scolding from the pulpit now and then. So you are already tuned out to this message. And so, the destruction of this country will go on.

You say you had nothing to do with it? Weren't you the one who said we should live and let live? Didn't you say we should all be equal—or better yet: Let those who have not earned any privileges be given the highest positions and most favored legal status? Didn't you weep for the so-called disadvantaged and homeless and say the government should provide for them? Didn't you think the police and courts should go easy on criminals—poor mistreated victims of bad parents and poverty? Didn't you say homosexuality and "sexual freedom," and even obscenity and filth in print and movies and media should be allowed in a democracy—"to each his own?"

So here we are. Now that we have this wonderful license—how do you like it? How do you like not feeling really safe walking down the street even in broad daylight? How do you like having the bums move into your neighborhood and public buildings and parks? How do you like having your politicians lead marches of sexual perverts to somehow celebrate freedom in America? How do you like all the great benefits of equality? We now send our worst to the top of the class of engineers, yet wonder why our bridges are falling down.

Do you really like having youngsters in your schools and neighborhoods using the most disgusting language and displaying nothing but rudeness and contempt for other people? An educational system that is competitive—not in producing intelligent, manly and womanly young people eager to face and handle the challenges of managing a healthy future society—but in having the best football team or cheerleaders or skateboard facilities? And anything goes to win-win. Isn't teach such low-level victory for a misguided youth a defeat for all society?

A Christian nation? Come on, be serious.

What was it Jesus said to us? "You must lose your life in order to find it"? That is, lose our egotistical, greedy selves in order to find a life of wholeness and freedom? "The meek shall inherit the earth"? That is, those who are teachable? And, "... Strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it"? Are you one of the few?

We have all consented to this un-Christian life surrounding us now. Unless we make a complete reversal, this country is doomed. It may already be too late.

Permissiveness... uncaring... not counting the cost... just letting the machine roll on... If this continues, it means you and I really don't want a Christian nation, no matter what we say.

We have a choice... each of us. We can be godly people and give our primary allegiance to God, or we can be degenerate human beings ready and willing to follow the examples of Rome and other once-splendid nations. Not to mention Sodom and Gomorrah. Remember what happened to them? You might want to refresh your memory.

You also have the choice to become so individually strong in self-understanding. You are absolutely committed to live a truly Christian life and you are not afraid to stand up for Christian values. To exercise such choices, we need all the help we can get. Especially from God. A great place to begin is to call or come by or write New Life and ask for the booklet, "50 Ways to Get Help from God." It's yours free this month as a community service. Better yet, attend services at New Life.

It just so happens God is not bothered by anything. After making contact with God, you won't be bothered either. There will be no mental self that can be bothered. Just a spiritual self... which is pure Understanding. Understanding solves all problems. It is peace. Want it? The choice is yours.

How to research German immigration

By Ralph T. Briggs
Genealogist and Historian
In answer to many inquiries concerning research of German immigrants to Pennsylvania during the Colonial period, the following background and guidance is offered our readers:

During the Colonial period, German immigrants usually came to America in family groups and they had two things in common: the German language and a common European culture. Upon arrival the Colonial officials called them Palatines or Dutch (Deutsch). However, they came from the Germanic kingdoms, provinces and states of Switzerland, Austria, France, Czechoslovakia and other European countries.

In searching German heritage, it is important to find a correct starting point such as an actual or approximate date of a birth or marriage that occurred in Europe. You may find an exact date of arrival in America by consulting the "Passenger and Immigration Lists Index" with cumulated supplements (1981 & 1982-85) by P. William Filby and Mary K. Meyer. This may lead you to one of the books containing ship passengers lists. The three-volume "Pennsylvania German Pioneers," by R.B. Strassburger and W.J. Hinke, published by the Pennsylvania German Society in 1934 and reprinted in two volumes in 1966 by the Genealogical Publishing Co. Volume two of the three-volume set has the facsimile lists of signatures that may reveal additional information. Daniel I. Rupp's "A Collection of Upwards of Thirty Thousand Names of German, Swiss, Dutch, French and other Immigrants to Pennsylvania from 1727-67," published 1876 and reprinted in 1975 by Genealogical Publishing Co., Baltimore, should also be consulted.

Two major sources for German ancestral search are parish and court records. The Moravian Church records are among the best. A "Family Register" is often found in individual parish record books. These registers reveal family details, including place of origin in Europe. Family registers may be found in Lutheran church records, such as those kept by local pastors. Pastor Frederick S. Weiser has published some guides to central PA Lutheran church records. Pastor Paul Miller Ruff has published records of Lutheran churches in Western PA area. The "Journals of Henry Melchoi Muhlenberg," published in three volumes, contain records of baptisms, marriages and burials performed by him from 1777-1787. They may, in fact, be the only records for that period.

Parish records may include the following information: Baptisms (be sure to copy names of listed sponsors); Marriages (contained in personal records of pastors who served the parish); Burials (sometimes found in pastors' record books); Cemetery records or gravestones are often the only information available; Communicants' lists may help determine the denomination of a person; Confirmation Lists (sometimes gives age of child and/or father's name); and the Family Registers sometimes include names of wives, date of emigration and places of birth.

Court records include wills, estates deeds, orphan court records and naturalization records. In some instances orphan court records may reveal the name(s) of parents who died at sea. "The Statutes at Large for Pennsylvania," contain early naturalization records for the years 1709-1739. Another good source is "The Colonial Records" and "Pennsylvania Archives."

In searching your German ancestral ties in Pennsylvania, do not neglect the Pennsylvania State Library in Harrisburg. My spouse, Marie C. Briggs, and I have spent many fruitful hours there. Its titles, court house, cemetery, county and regional histories, surname and author index cards are available for immigrant research information.

The Pennsylvania State Archives, the LDS Family History Branch Libraries, the Western PA Genealogical Society Library, Carnegie Library of Pittsburgh, and the Hillman Library of the University of Pittsburgh are good resource centers for German American research.

Genealogy and Family History Seminar—Genealogists at all levels and writers of family histories will benefit by attending this year's BYU Genealogy & Family History Seminar. Basic courses will concentrate on understanding the major genealogy and family history sources for each geographical area. Intermediate courses will focus on case studies from the geographical areas selected. Students should have some prior knowledge of the major cover sources and methods for those students who have had experience in the geographical area. Students may use this information in preparation for accreditation by the Family History Department at Salt Lake City, or for gaining skills necessary for service as a professional genealogist. Special courses this year include British Military Records; German, British and U.S. Colonial handwriting; and Family

Search Update.

The seminar is Aug. 5-8. Call (801) 378-4853 for more information.

Volumes – prisms and pyramids

By Bill Hanlon

Last time we found the areas of some polygons. Namely squares, rectangles, parallelograms, and triangles. Before we start with volumes today, I want to be able to find the area of a CIRCLE.

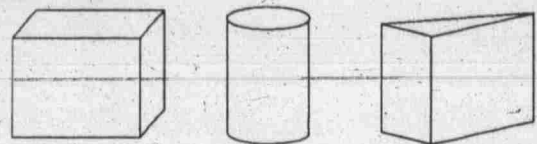

You might remember that formula;  $A = \pi r^2$ . "r" represents the length of the radius and we approximated pi,  $\pi$ , to be 3.14.

That number,  $\pi$ , comes from dividing the distance around a circle (circumference) by the distance across the circle, known as the DIAMETER. No matter how big or small the circle, the circumference divided by the diameter is approximately 3.1415926545... we call that  $\pi$  for short.

Now, before we get started, we need a couple of definitions. Volume—tells you how many cubes ( $\square$ ) will fit in a three dimensional shape.

PRISM—is a three dimensional figure which has two parallel, congruent bases. Or, simply put, they have the same top as bottom.

EXAMPLES

To find the volume of a prism, you find the area of the top or bottom, then multiply that result by its HEIGHT. You can see that it is necessary to know the formulas we looked at last time. If you do know them and you can use them, then all we do this week is find those answers and multiply that by the height. Don't you just love math?

EXAMPLE Find the volume of the following rectangular prism.

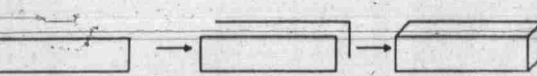

As you can see, the bottom of this figure is a rectangle. Last time we said the area of a rectangle was given by the formula  $A=LW$ . The length is 4 ft. and the width is 3 ft., therefore the area of the rectangular bottom is 12 sq. ft.

The height is 2 ft., we multiply that area by 2, the result is 24 cubic ft.

We call it cubic because volumes tells us how many cubes are in the 3 dimensional shape.

Let's take a quick look at how you draw these shapes.

EXAMPLE Find the volume of the cylinder.

The bottom is a circle, so we find the area of the circle; then multiply that result by the height. The formula for finding the area of a circle is given by  $A=\pi r^2$ .

In this case  $r=5$ , the area is  $\pi 5^2$ , which is  $\pi \times 25$ . Remember, we said  $\pi=3.14$ , multiplying that out we get 78.5.

Now multiply that result by the height, which in our case is 10.  $78.5 \times 10 = 785$  cubic inches.

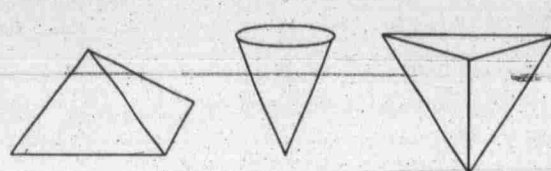

As you can see, there is a relationship between the areas and volumes of geometric figures. That relationship for prisms is multiplying the area by the height.

We can use triangular prisms, parallelogram prisms, trapezoidal prisms, etc. What we do is multiply that area of the base by the height. Piece of cake.

It's time for another definition. You can see knowing math vocabulary is as important as knowing these formulas.

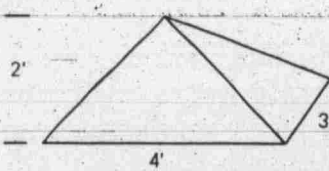

PYRAMID—is a three dimensional figure that has any shape for it's base and it meets in a point.

EXAMPLES

To find the volumes of these figures, we find the volume just like we did before, then divide that result by 3. No more. Yes, say it, you love math.

EXAMPLE Find the volume.

As we did before, we find the area of the rectangular bottom, then multiply that result by the top.

The area of the rectangle is 12, multiplying that by the height—2, we get 24. Now, because this is a pyramid, it meets in a point, we divide that answer by 3. The answer is 8 cubic feet. Check this problem with the first example so you can see the similarities.

EXAMPLE Find the volume.

From the second example, we see that the area of the circle was 78.5. We then multiplied that by the height and got 785. Again, since this is a pyramid, we divide that result by 3 and we get 261.66. Now, isn't this fun—math is your life!

Dear Debbie

By Deborah White

I'm 27 years old and have been going with the most wonderful guy for six years.

The problem is I don't have a relationship with his mother. She has never been to our place. I've been to her home a few times and I just feel out of place. I want to pick up the phone, but I don't know what to say to her.

She probably thinks I'm anti-social, but I wasn't raised in a close family and I have serious problems communicating. I wish I could get the motherly talk and advice I was deprived of.

WANT IN

Dear Want In:

If you're able to keep a relationship going with a man for six years then your social skills are better than you think they are.

Your first step is to talk to your boyfriend. The chill in the air may be coming from mom. If he says his mother would like to be friendlier, invite her over for dinner or coffee with other members of his family. Continue to see her in larger groups. That way the onus won't be on you to keep the conversation going.

As you get to know her better, it will be easier to find things to talk about. If you find yourself alone with her, ask questions and comment on them. "What do you like to do?" is always good for openers.

If you get stuck for something to say, remember the best listeners make the best conversationalists.

Dear Debbie:

I am in love with another man. I got married out of hurt and now I have a 9-month-old baby. When I got married I told my husband I still had feelings for this man. I want to do what is right, and I don't want to hurt either one of them.

WHAT DO I DO NOW?

Dear W.D.I.D.N.

The "right thing" to do is stay as far away as you can from the other man. Cry into a towel every night, if you have to, but stay away. You may never forget him, but in time the pain will go away.

Concentrate on your husband. Pay extra attention to him and your baby. Keep your mind occupied with new friends and new projects. That will get you through this difficult time.

Don't discuss this with your husband. No man wants to hear his wife wants another man. Talk to your most trusted girlfriends.

If you're strong enough to pull this off, you will never regret it. There's no way to go back to the other man without hurting your husband.

Once Over Lightly

By Carolyn Drennan Bishop

Communication is where it's at these days. Ask any psychiatrist. As a matter of fact, according to the internationally known psychiatrist, Dr. Carlyle Weedbottom III, at the top of the list is communication between parents and children.

Actually I knew that all along because we have lots of communication at our house. For instance, take the day the kids used dad's tennis racket to paddle their canoe in the swimming pool. Dad had a lot to say. He not only communicated his innermost feelings to his close family members, the neighbors were privy to his thoughts as well.

Husband and wife talk is important too, says Dr. Weedbottom. I say that's all well and good, but what about a husband whose idea of communicating is no more revealing than a conversation with a lamp post? For instance, take the other night at our house. The phone rang. "Hello," said my husband. This was followed by 10 minutes of grunts interspersed with a few "yeahs" and a "nope" or two. At the close of the conversation, he got really verbal. "It's been great talking to you," he said.

"Who was that?" I asked. "My brother."

Here was material for conversation! "What's new with him?" "He broke his leg and he's getting a divorce, that's all," he answered, and continued to read his newspaper.

That's all? Can you believe it? I mean, does he know how his brother broke his leg? Why he's getting a divorce? When did all this happen? Why? So much for husband and wife chit-chat at our house.

Then there's the man who talks too much. Get a load of this couple. I know they're for real because I see them on television all the time. Let me set the scene: It's night time. Harry and Bernice are asleep. Harry leaps up, runs into the bathroom, raises the toilet seat and shouts, "I've never seen our toilet so clean, Bernice!" That's not all! He wakes Bernice up three more times to tell her the same thing. Frankly, I think Harry carries the whole communication bit too far. Not only that, if I were Bernice I'd begin to wonder if maybe Harry had flown over the cuckoo's nest one too many times.

Frankly, with men like Harry and my husband around, the fine art of communication has taken a definite downhill turn. If Dr. Weedbottom would care to meet me and discuss my views, I'm available.

Who else do I have to talk to?

 Managing Your Biggest Investment

Finding The Kind Of Help You Really Need

By Jackie Wooldridge, GRI, CRS, CRB
 Of Century 21 JR Realty

Whether you're planning to sell your house, sell your house and buy another, or become a homeowner for the first time, the support of a good agent backed by a strong system can make all the difference.

How do you go about finding a good broker? You can hardly do better than by starting with what your eyes and ears tell you in your own neighborhood or home town. If you see a brokerage that's well established and apparently involved in a good many listings and sales, that's a good preliminary sign.

If you ask around and hear good things about a broker or agent, that too is a good sign. If your inquiries turn up evidence pointing to a history of good business performance and high integrity, you're probably on the trail of someone worth talking with.

And that's the logical next step: to visit and talk with the people who seem most impressive on the basis of what you've seen and heard.

Conduct your appointments with agents and brokers as interviews, remembering that you're the prospective employer and the broker or agent is the applicant. You're in charge - or should be.

Don't be shy about asking questions that really dig in. Ask the people you talk with about their experience - how many listings they've had in the past two or three years, how many houses they've sold in the same period, how much of the local market they handle. Ask for references, and check them out.

If you have some knowledge of contracts, financing, closing procedures and the like, put that knowledge into questions that will help you see who really is knowledgeable and who isn't. Ask something that will require getting back to you later - and see who's responsive and who isn't.

Ask for ideas on how to market your house. Ask whether that marketing will include open houses - and if so, how soon and how often. Watch for evidence of enthusiasm, creativity, and the kind of optimism that's firmly rooted in the realities of the situation. You want an optimist, but not a cockeyed optimist.

Finally, ask for a guarantee that everything promised will be delivered. And ask for that guarantee to be put in writing, with a written assurance that non-performance will free you from any and all contractual obligations.

Does this sound complicated and more time-consuming than just handing the job over to somebody your sister-in-law's manicurist recommended last year? Well, it is more complicated. And it does take more time - in the beginning. But it can pay off a hundredfold over the long term.

'Dames at Sea' to be performed at Spring Mountain Ranch

The musical comedy "Dames at Sea" will be performed at Spring Mountain Ranch State Park July 8-12, 15-18 and 22-25. A Department of Theatre Arts-UNLV Production, "Dames at Sea" is produced by Dr. Jeff Koep. This musical is based on the book by George Haimshon and Robin

Miller. "Dames at Sea" has six characters. There is Ruby from Centerville, Utah, who aspires to be a Broadway star. Then Dick, a young sailor from Ruby's home town, is the romantic lead. Mona, a temperamental 42nd Street theatrical star, and Hennessey, a hard-luck producer, complicate the plot when they need a location to perform their play. Commander "Kewpie Doll" Courageous, a former love of Mona's and Dick's commanding officer, happens to have the right ship for a theatrical performance. The two remaining characters are Joan, a dancer friend of Mona's, and Luckey, Dick's sailor buddy, who just happen to fall in love. Tickets may be purchased in advance for "Dames at Sea" at two locations: The Ham Hall box office or at Gemonte Jewelers across from the Flamingo Library. For further information call 594-PLAY.

Quiroz to exhibit paintings

The University of Nevada, Las Vegas' Department of Art will host "Alfred J. Quiroz: Contemporary Narrative Paintings," through Aug. 9 in the Donna Beam Fine Art Gallery. The exhibit, which is open to the public, will include Quiroz's latest moonprints as well as his three-dimensional, large-scale paintings. Quiroz is known for his depiction of religion, war and history through the use of exaggerated color, cartoon-like characters and their absurd, high-strung actions. His message contains a hint of stinging satire questioning the truth of past events, particularly war. "Quiroz's technique in painting is as clever as his ability to force the viewer to contemplate his or her own role and that of society in preserving humanity," said Jerry Schefcik, curator of the Donna Beam Fine Art Gallery. The exhibit is funded in part by a grant from the Nevada State Council on the Arts. Gallery hours are from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, Wednesday evenings until 8 p.m., and 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday.
