ONE MAN'S VIEW

MIKE O'CALLAGHAN

The campaign for city offices in Henderson has really started off with lots of fire. The race between incumbent Councilman Larry Scheffler, and challengers Claire MacDonald and David Wood, with some outside help, created the highest flames.

There's no doubt that the three people in this race can take care of themselves and answer charges and counter charges. If they can't, then they shouldn't be in the race. Wisely, Scheffler put the charges and rumors about him in the hands of the Nevada State Ethics Commission and is willing to let the chips fall where they may. The sooner the chips fall, no matter how or where they fall, the better it will be for the people of Henderson.

The real problem, created by heated political campaigns, is the great possibility that innocent bystanders will get hit with hot grease from the political fires. A good example may come from the campaign for the Ward IV council seat.

I've read the complaint written by local businessman Ron Coury who has had a long war with Scheffler. Coury believes Scheffler has been unfair when voting against his request for gaming at Thirstbusters. That's between Coury and the councilman and is also now in the hands of the Nevada State Ethics Commission where Coury sent it.

What bothers me and several others who have read the complaint is what appears to be the unnecessary dragging of Henderson City Attorney Shauna Hughes into the mess. She's a professional person and a public servant who has done an outstanding job for the residents of Henderson. She doesn't deserve this kind of public abuse. But now that she has been splattered by the fight between Coury and Scheffler, we must wait and see how the Nevada State Ethics Commission rules.

Former police officer Gallagher acquitted

Jocelyn Blutt
News Staff Writer

After deliberating for 11 hours, a jury found former Henderson police officer William Gallagher not guilty of giving false testimony that led to the arrest and jailing of an innocent teen. Gallagher, 32, was by a grand jury last counts of perjury and one of oppression under color of office. The charges refer to an incident in January 1994 when Gallagher identified Eddie Charles Hill Jr., 18 at the time, and chase. Hill was arrested at his home in North Las Vegas later that night after a positive identification by Gallagher. months later, police Kevin Sandifer, who at the time, on another and matched his finger to those on the stolen Gallagher claimed was ridden by Hill on the night of his arrest.

Sandifer admitted to police that he was stopped by the officer and ran on Jan. 12. He said he identified himself as Hill to

Rec Center addition ready

Kathy Streeter
News Staff Writer

The Silver Springs Recreation Center, sporting a spacious, 14,000-square-foot addition, is now open to the public with an expanded number of services.

The Henderson Parks and Recreation Department added three racquetball courts, three meeting rooms, a new reception and office area, restrooms, a snack machine area and a new parking lot with the $1.5 million addition.

Tanya Richburg, assistant recreation coordinator, said the expanded recreation center is able to better accommodate the growing number of users. The new meeting rooms are partitioned and can be expanded into one or two larger rooms as needed. And the spacious lobby and hallways will facilitate check-in and program registration.

"This is the first time in four years we've been able to add more classes," Richburg said. Beginning this month, 12 additional classes will be offered, with the number expanding again this summer.

Every summer the HPRD offers day camps at their recreation centers. Last summer, the demand at the Silver Springs location was so great many classes had to be held on nearby church and school properties. This year, the center will be able to accommodate all the campers at one location.

"We will be able to accommodate more diverse programs," said Sue Weakland, recreation coordinator. "We will be able to better meet the needs of the day campers and provide more services."

Candidates file financial disclosure statements

Roy Theiss
News Staff Writer

Eleven of the 12 candidates running for City Council have filed their Financial Disclosure Statements, listing sources of income and property.

According to the requirements, candidates have to file the financial disclosure no later than 10 days after the last day to file for office. The statements had to be filed with both the City Clerk and the Nevada Ethics Commission by April 10.

This is the first in a series of four financial disclosures candidates must make. The first concerns personal income and real estate and the other three list contributions and expenditures at different time periods.

Alice Wagner, who is running for Ward II, has not filed her statement with either the City Clerk or the Nevada Ethics Commission.

A spokesperson for the Nevada Ethics Commission said the statements have to be post-marked by April 10. If the Ethics Commission does not receive the statement in the next few days, it will send a reminder to the candidate.

Ward I
Candidates running for Ward I include incumbent Paul Ruth, Amanda Cyphers, Marsha Jefferies, John Norman Kaye and Leonard J. DeJoria.

According to Ruth's financial disclosure statement, his sources of income include the Public Employment Retirement System of Nevada, grazing land and oil royalties in Oklahoma, Social Security and the City Council. Ruth owns

1-1/4 acres of unimproved land in Clark County and he is not a member of any businesses.

Jefferies' income stems from Marsha's Mini-School and her husband works for Delta Airlines. She has a time-share condominium in Flagstaff, Ariz.

Kaye is a real estate agent and entertainer at Caesars Palace. He has property on Pueblo between London and Madrid Avenues. Kaye is also a secretary for Creative American Builders and is the sole proprietor for Creative Independent Artists.

DeJoria's income is derived from All-Rite Lock, the DeJoria Family Trust and Diamond Construction. He has five rental

Sims remembered with living tree memorial

Kathy Streeter
News Staff Writer

One year ago Preston Sims' life ended without warning. The dreams of a 23-year-old who was very active in his community, who loved children, who planned to be a sports broadcaster, would never be realized — except perhaps one.

He wanted to be remembered as someone who cared.

At age 16, Sims began working for the Henderson Parks and Recreation Department. He worked as a pool attendant, lifeguard, swimming instructor, field monitor, and a field manager for soccer, baseball and football. He also worked in the Henderson Safekey program.

"Preston's favorite times were playing with the kids," said his mother, Kay Worwood. "Preston felt for kids. ... He tried to make a difference."

Esther Cothrun remembers how Sims made her son, Miles, feel special. "He thought Preston was the greatest guy there ever was," Cothrun said. "He was great with kids. My son still refers to him all the time."

A year has passed since Sims' heart suddenly gave way and the active 23-year-old's life came to an end. Yet the man who gave so much of himself to Henderson youth will leave a legacy of growth.

In his memory, a field where Sims played as a boy will be improved to better accommodate the public. A joint venture between HPRD and the Clark County School District will improve the section of Sewell Elementary School grounds between Lake Mead Drive and Center Street.

Trees, planted in Sims' memory, will shade the activities of future generations of children as a Celebrate Life Living Tree Memorial. New playground

ONE MAN'S VIEW:

The fat's in the fire and during the next few weeks, we will probably see other people splattered with hot political grease flying around Ward IV. Let's hope too many others aren't burned by a race for a City Council seat.

Races for three Boulder City seats on the City Council won't warm up until after the primary because the city won't have a primary election this year. There are six candidates for three seats so they will all run in the general election.

Boulder City political races always appear to be more friendly than they are in Henderson, North Las Vegas or Las Vegas. Is this because it's a smaller city and most residents know each other? This could be one of several possible answers. A Boulder City resident told me that "we are smaller but also more mature." Could be, but BC isn't that much older.

Maybe it's the dynamics of rapidly growing larger cities that brings politics into higher stages of excitement. Then again it could be that residents of smaller cities look upon public office as a chore more than they view it as a power position.

Another reasonable answer could be that people living in small cities realize when the votes are all counted, they will still be living but a short distance from their opponents and will be facing them in local stores, restaurants, school affairs, church services and on the streets.

A study of this would be most interesting except some of the meanest recall movements and campaigns in Nevada take place in sparsely populated counties and small towns. Sometimes those places make the larger cities look like pussy cats during political campaigns.

Maybe it's just Boulder City.

Meanwhile up in Carson City, the Nevada Legislature got between the Attorney General and the courts by condemning her challenge of Lincoln County's attempt to establish a temporary high level nuclear waste dump. It's a matter that must be decided by a district court and eventually the Nevada Supreme Court, not by an eager bunch of political partisans in the Legislature.

Local Assemblyman Richard Perkins told his colleagues:

"Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to this resolution, as drafted, for a number of simple reasons. First of all, I cannot buy the argument this is a free speech issue. I strongly support our First Amendment right to free speech as I am sure does everyone in this body.

"Mr. Chairman, on Jan. 16, 1995, I took my third oath to support, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of the State of Nevada. My second oath was taken on Jan.

18, 1993, and my first oath, Mr. Chairman, was taken a little over 11 years ago when I embarked upon my law enforcement career. I believed then and continue to believe, that it is my duty to defend our guaranteed freedom, including the freedom of speech, to the death, if necessary.

"Free speech is simply not the issue. What we have here is an Attorney General and Governor who did what they honestly believed was in the best interest of the safety and well-being of the people of Nevada. Was the Attorney General's action legally correct? I am a police officer, not a constitutional attorney, and I cannot answer that but the courts will and that is the proper place for that decision to be made, not in this Legislature. I strongly believe in the separation of powers and in fairness and I do not believe that this resolution represents either.

"As a strong opponent of the nuclear dump, I am also concerned about the message that this will send about our state's commitment against the dump. At the very time we finally have some hope of keeping it from coming here, those who support this resolution can repeat over and over and over that it does not mean that they support the dump, but I am concerned that it is not the message that will be ultimately heard in Washington, D.C. Anyone who believes Commissioner Culverwell's statement that in the event the Nuclear Waste Policy Act is amended was not to encourage the federal government to place the dump in Lincoln County is naïve.

"I can tell you when I tell my children when I leave for this body on Monday morning, in the event their room is clean when I come home they will get their allowance, they are certainly encouraged to clean their room. Again, I believe this resolution is an unfair attack on a constitutional officer who did what she believed was in our best interest, an unnecessary act because the legality of her actions will ultimately be determined in the courts anyway, and most of all a dangerous message to those in Washington, D.C. who are determined to make Nevada the nation's nuclear dumping ground. Thank you, Mr. Chairman."

Despite the intelligent argument given by Perkins, the silly and meaningless resolution was passed.

Now where's the original issue? In the courts where it should be despite all of the nonsense in Carson City.

DeJoria runs for Council seat

Leonard "The Locksmith" DeJoria is a candidate for Council seat representing Ward 1.

He has lived in the community for 30 years and has been a small business owner for 15 years, with his business located in downtown Henderson.

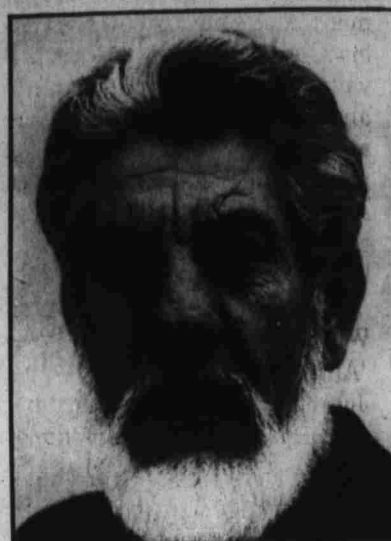

His business and educational experience includes owning and operating All-Rite Lock Shop and the ATS Trade School.

DeJoria's trade school was one of the first private trade schools in Henderson, and is licensed by the Commission on Post Secondary Education for the state of Nevada.

He was also a member of the Clark County School District's Vocational Education Advisory Committee. DeJoria served for five years on the Citizens Advisory Committee.

He is a past president of the Nevada Professional Locksmith Association, and has served as chairman of the Henderson Small Business Owners Association.

DeJoria is an honorably discharged veteran of the U.S. Air Force. DeJoria said he wishes to serve all the residents of Henderson and has made a decision not to accept contributions from anyone. He wants to serve the community without being obligated to any special interest groups.

"I wish to represent the majority of the people in this community who have no special financial interest other than a concern for the best use of their tax dollars," he said.

DeJoria's locksmith business enables him to meet both the long-time residents of Henderson, and those new people moving into the community. He said his unique relationship and understanding of people all over this community puts him in a position to help serve all the citizens of Henderson.

Principal appointed for Basic

A new principal for Basic High School was appointed Tuesday during the School Board Trustee meeting.

Horrace W. Smith, an assistant principal at Rancho High School since 1992, will replace Steve Augspurger, who is transferring to administration at the school district.

Smith earned his bachelor's degree in zoology and physical education at Brigham Young University at Provo, Utah, in 1970.

Smith began employment, with the Clark County School District in 1970, teaching health and drivers education his first four years. He taught physical education for another 12 years at Western High School before transferring to Bonanza High School.

Smith moved into the administration capacity in 1991 when he became a dean at Rancho High School.

Perkins, Titus host meeting

Assemblyman Richard Perkins and Sen. Dina Titus will hold a town hall meeting from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Saturday, April 15, at the Gibson Library, 280 S. Water St. in Henderson. The public is invited to attend. Perkins serves as the Democratic Floor Leader in the Assembly, while Titus is serving her second term as the Democratic Minority Leader in the Senate.

The town hall will provide the two legislators the opportunity to talk with constituents about what the Legislature is doing on a number of important issues, including crime, education and the economy.

avoid being taken to jail for violating curfew. Sandifer denied trying to stab Gallagher during the pursuit.

All charges against Hill were dropped and he was released.

One count of perjury stemmed from a statement Gallagher gave his fellow officers which led to Hill's arrest. The other stemmed from testimony Gallagher gave during Hill's preliminary hearing.

Defense Attorney Leon Simon said Gallagher should not have received all the blame for Hill's arrest.

"It is not just Gallagher's fault Eddie Hill sat in jail. Kevin Sandifer was caught telling several lies," Simon said. "When he was first questioned about the incident, he kept his mouth shut. [Sandifer's friends] when they were questioned by the police, they kept their mouths shut. They knew it was Sandifer pretending to be Hill. Any one of them could have opened the door and let Hill out of jail, but everyone kept their mouths shut.

"Sandifer finally did confess, but only after he was promised not to be prosecuted. I asked the jury was it fair for Gallagher to receive all the blame, and they felt it wasn't," Simon said.

Gallagher was dismissed from the police force in August 1994 after the investigation showed discrepancies in his story.

The city of Henderson cleared Gallagher of any civil liability by paying Hill a settlement of $125,000 last December. Gallagher agreed not to contest his dismissal as a condition of the settlement.

Simon said Gallagher has no plans to take action against the city to be reinstated as an officer.

Cooperation, patience needed when Shakespeare returns to Fox Ridge

Cooperation and patience are urged during the annual Shakespeare in the Park this year at Fox Ridge Park. Organizers had hoped to use the new Arroyo Grande Sports Complex but due to delays, the complex's amphitheater may not open in time.

Nearby residents at Fox Ridge Park have complained about yards being trashed and congested traffic and parking on streets during the three-day event which has grown each year of the production. The city and the Arts Council for Henderson and Green Valley have worked to resolve the problems, but they need community support.

Thousands flock the neighborhood park in September for the annual tradition. What may seem like a little transgression can quickly become a major problem through the sheer numbers involved with the event.

Respect for the neighborhood and park is paramount to continuing to bring culture to our community. Responsibility is also a key factor. Notifying authorities of people who are either leaving garbage behind or tossing it into homeowners' yards can stem the senseless problems.

Traffic is another major concern associated with the play. Crowded streets with vehicles clogging every inch of space turn the daily lives of nearby residents into headaches.

The city and the Arts Council started a bus shuttle last year to alleviate the crowded parking on neighborhood streets. In addition to sparing festival-goers the hassle of walking several city blocks carrying picnic gear, the shuttle bus also provides a mini-lecture during the ride.

People planning on attending the play should take advantage of the free shuttle. It will only make for a more festive time by sharing the experience with new friends shuttling to the park.

It's a shame the new park will not be ready in time for September's event, but planning and courtesy will make it a little smoother for the residents near Fox Ridge Park.

Don't get rid of 'None of these candidates'

There is something wrong with Nevada's "None of these candidates" option, but it is not what Assemblyman Lawrence Jacobsen thinks. Jacobsen thinks this voter option is bad business and should be removed from the voters' hands; that is why he has introduced SB325, which would wipe the option from the books.

But it is not bad business. It is very good business because it lets voters vent their frustration with what they see as lousy candidates and dirty campaigns. It sends a clear message that voters are fed up—a message they almost shouted during the seedy 1992 Supreme Court race between Miriam Shearing and Charles Thompson, when "None" got 86,862 votes; and during the equally seedy 1994 Supreme Court race between Bob Rose and Myron Leavitt, when "None" got 89,235 votes—one quarter of all votes cast.

If "None" counted, you might well see it get the majority of votes cast. And that is the problem—that it doesn't count. Under existing law, "None" could get all but a handful of votes, and the politician who got most of the remainder would ride into office like a champion.

What this state needs is not to eliminate the option, but to permit it to eliminate unpopular candidates. If all candidates got less than "None," they would all be defeated. A new election would be held, and none of the defeated candidates could run in that election.

Maybe then we would have better candidates and cleaner campaigns. And wouldn't that be nice.

RICHARD COHEN

Washington's Other Circus

WASHINGTON—For years, many Washingtonians have longed for statehood without realizing the city's gone one better. It's become a republic, a banana one at that. It has the requisite lousy city services, pitted streets and cronyism and, now, the allegation that a member of the mayor's own security force attempted to intimidate a whistle-blower. If George Bush were still president, he's invade Washington.

The whistle-blower talked to the Washington Post. She is the former housekeeper for Mayor Marion Barry and his wife, Cora Masters Barry. She said she was used to launder campaign funds which, in turn, wound up in the hands of Mrs. Barry's brother. After that, she said, she was visited by a member of the mayor's security detail and told to keep her mouth shut. She was also offered a job.

Barry's reaction to all this was silence. He wanted to talk about other matters, the city's financial situation, for instance, which is nothing short of desperate, thanks partly to him. Mrs. Barry at first denied all and then she, too, clammed up. To the great inconvenience of the Barrys, one job offer to the whistle-blower—although not from a cop—was made in the presence of a Post reporter. As for the former housekeeper herself, she was in protective custody and the U.S. attorney was looking into the matter.

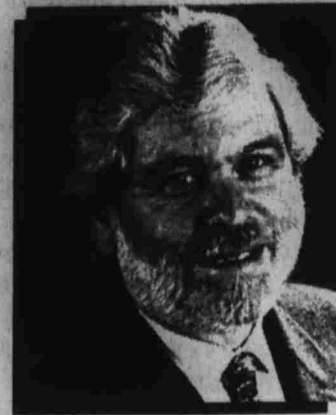

The allegations, of course, remain precisely that. But since this is a newspaper column, and not a trial, we can discuss the Barrys' records. Before becoming the city's first lady, Mrs. Barry was the city's boxing and wrestling commissioner. This is a very important job which required much travel and somehow—maybe the pressure of finding yet another out-of-town meeting to attend—the then Cora Wilds submitted expense statements for charges that had already been paid. She called this to a bookkeeping error but the law had a different term for it: second-degree theft. After a plea bargain, she resigned.

In the previous Barry administration, the one that ended on videotape and in something of a haze, the mayor's security detail drove him to assignments with women and were in the vicinity when he allegedly abused drugs. They were with him the night he picked up a campaign donation at a strip joint that was at that very time under surveillance by the feds and the local cops. With the exception of some splendid citizens interred in various memorial parks, all of Washington knew the mayor was using drugs. Yet the security detail, not to mention the police force at large, never noticed a thing.

Now, once again, we have the implication that a cop—or cops—abused their authority. It is probably germane that Barry's former maid talked to the Post and not to the police. If she's telling the truth, how could she trust the cops? Already, they have earned a reputation for corruption and incompetence. One of them pleaded guilty just this week to murder—conspiracy charges. And some 200 have faced criminal charges since 1989.

The nation chuckles at Washington, but it ought to take note. Just recently, for instance, we poor Washingtonians learned that two cops accused of bribery were given "early-out" bonuses of $20,486 each when they left the police force. They have both since pleaded guilty. A junior high school principal, caught taking boxes of cafeteria food and loading them into his van, was merely transferred to another school.

Corrections Department officers ran so-called auctions of new female prisoners taking their pick based on seniority, assigning the more fetching of the women to their detail in the hopes of sexual favours. A supervisor allegedly exposed himself to a subordinate and she retaliated with a blazing cigarette lighter. Had the sprinkler system gone off, someone would have been instantly called to account. As it was, though, it took a civil trial for the details to come out. Anyone who thinks local government is invariably the best government should live here awhile.

Now, though, things have gone from the scandalous to the downright chilling. The alleged use of the Praetorian Guard, part of the police force and presumably armed, to intimidate a citizen who has gone to the press is truly troubling. Yet the mayor, exhibiting the characteristic hesitation of a man caught between principle and his wife, emitted not a peep of outrage.

Washington is broke, racially divided and about to lose much of its municipal independence to Congress. But all of that pales in comparison to the abuse of police power. That is Third World stuff and shows, if anything does, why Congress has to exercise more supervision over the capital city.

Send in the feds, the clowns are already here.

Don't bet on early end to session

When the Senate Finance and Assembly Ways and Means Committees start closing budgets, the news goes through the legislative building like a breath of fresh air. It's a sure sign to some observers of the grinding, tangled, Rube Goldberg operation of the law-making process, that the end of the legislative session is in sight.

But it's not a sure sign to all. The seasoned (or cynical) observers tend to see it more as wishful thinking than as reality. Yet they, too, admit there's always the temptation to bet that it's true—and with good reason.

After all, the two money committees are the engines that power every regular session of the Nevada Legislature, which then approve it before it can take effect. Getting to that point is no snap. The two money committees are required to examine that blueprint in deep detail, holding hearings every working day with state agency representatives and a thousand witnesses.

This is a time-consuming job under the best of circumstances, and no legislative session ever finds the best of circumstances; it's too back-breaking a task to rate that definition. The committees sift through the arguments for and against the requests of each agency, assessing the fiscal impact of virtually every item. It's an unpleasant process because it often ends with sometimes ruthless cutbacks in programs many consider vital. The lawmakers usually have not choice: The state constitution requires that Nevada must have a balanced budget.

By its very nature, this is such an intricate, complicated, time-consuming process that the committees don't start closing budgets of the smaller agencies until well into the session. It was not until last week that whiffs this time had come in the 68th session spread through the legislative building.

Note that this was in the third month of the current gathering, well beyond the 60-day limit (20 days beyond, to be exact) that the constitution tells us a biennial session should last. However, this length of time has been about average in recent years, thanks to the skyrocketing population and the demands it makes for the subsequent expansion of state government—and the need for more money to run it.

OK, so what does all this have to do with the outlook for an end to the current legislative session?

Very little. In the past, the start of budget-closings has been a fairly good guide to guessing at least the final week, if not the final day or hour of sine die. The reason is that getting a budget passed is the most essential job a session has, the one it can't avoid. Although there are myriad other matters on the calendar, many of the remaining bills are killed or abandoned along the way as soon as the budget work is finished.

There can be and usually are exceptions. Often, at the last minute, some unexpected issue shows up from left field, or some technical but highly important political glitch shows up to bring the effort to end a temporary halt monkey wrenches like that are a dime a dozen.

Behind the scenes are the lobbyists or individual legislators with a vital bill or two that's caught up somewhere in the circuitous path toward passage. You find them working frantically to make deals to get their bills out.

Sometimes the best strategy is to wait until the pressure to end the session becomes its greatest. The theory is that everybody is tired out and haggard enough to be a pushover to vote for or against a certain bill.

It works. Unusually. But this is a different year. Not for the money committee—they have worked at their usual steady pace, for long hours and days, and may well be ahead of schedule as of this writing, thanks mainly to Sen. Bill Raggio, chairman of Senate Finance.

He is also majority floor leader. In both capacities he has put the screws on his fellow Republicans in both houses to try to keep this session shorter than has been the case recently. The budget won't interfere with that goal.

But a lot of other things might. One is that a huge number of bills are not being reported out of the Assembly committees. Possible reasons: (1) The 21-21 tie between Republicans and Democrats, meaning there can be no strong leader. (2) The co-chairmanships in every committee—a Republican one day, a Democrat the next, leading to the potential for all kinds of uncontrollable situations. (3) The "I-hate-Government" mood has terrorized politicians into avoiding as many controversial issues as possible.

So the session may end early. Or maybe not. So don't bet on it. Either way.

'Schindler' in schools

Editor:

My tradition says that "You shall teach them diligently unto your children." It also states "Education above all else."

Certainly the Clark County School Board does not believe this.

To not permit a group of high school students, with parental consent, to see "Schindler's List" is an affront to our educators and to all people of faith. Indeed, to all those who feel a need to remember those who perished in the Holocaust and to say "Never Again." It also does not allow us to learn about, nor remember those "Righteous Gentiles" who saved so many lives during this period of inhumanity.

It was M. Sulzberger, who, over 80 years ago, said "Learning is the raising of character by the broadening of visions and the deepening of feeling." The School Board has done much to not broaden visions nor deepen feelings. They have gone a long way to say that there is little importance in remembering the Holocaust. If you will note, in many history text books, only one or two paragraphs are devoted to the period of shame to the world. What a wonderful opportunity has been missed to educate our students. Certainly, we have not given to the young adults of Las Vegas enough credit.

Here we have an opportunity to teach our students about one of the most horrible periods in the history of humanity. "Schindler's List" is done with taste, with compassion, with emotion and with pathos. Our school board seems to believe that because there was an R rating that our students should not get the visual viewpoint as told in this wonderful film. Indeed, it is my belief that this film should be required viewing for all high school students.

I cannot help but recall the words of Albert Einstein, who at the beginning of the holocaust said, "Education is that which remains when one has forgotten everything learned in school." What an impact could have been made? The school board has not fulfilled their obligation of educating.

A famous Jewish philosopher once said "As the day adds to the vision of the seeing, and the blindness of the bat, so does instruction help to enlighten the wise and bewilder the fool. I question, in the Board's action, who are the wise and who are the fools?"

Fiber-optics would end crazy school schedules

Editor:

Deconsolidating the Clark County School District may turn out to be a mistake for a technical reason which is not commonly known. Three years ago the CCSD applied to President Bush's New American Schools Development Corporation for $11,897,000 to build a prototype "fiber-optic network of computer-based segmented courses."

If the pilot program was successful, it would have been expanded to link all the junior and senior high schools in the district with fiber-optic cables into one massive network.

A 500-channel cable TV system and a three-layer computer hierarchy would connect tens of thousands of computer terminals, each with a monitor capable of displaying video as well as computer data. One result would be an end to crazy schedules.

Hardware performance/cost ratios have improved dramatically since then. For instance, a fiber-optic pair will shortly be able to transmit 320,000 conversations versus the present capacity of 80,000 conversations.

Thus the CCSD may soon be able to economically replace its present agrarian-based educational system with a modern engineering marvel.

Parents must police Net porn

Cybersmut. Denizens of the Internet know there's plenty of it online, some of it tame, some of it degrading and disgusting. Cyberspace knows no geographical bounds, so Net cognoscenti can tap into hard-core images from anywhere, watching pictures that approach snuff movies in their grotesquerie.

Enter the children, probably the most computer-literate group in America. Comfortable with the technology, having grown up with it, kids prowl the Net, finding easy access to all kinds of hard-core porn.

Senator J. James Exon, D-Neb., wants to censor the Net to protect kids. His Communications Decency Act, an amendment to an omnibus telecom reform bill, would make it a crime to transmit "obscene, lewd, lascivious, or indecent" images over the Net. Good intentions notwithstanding, Exon's bill is the wrong solution. Parental, not governmental, supervision is the answer. It's impossible to control tens of thousands of interconnected networks with information flowing among 30 million computers. It is not impossible for fathers and mothers to monitor what their kids do in front of their computers just as they monitor their TV viewing.

Here's the solution. The three major online services, America Online, CompuServe, and Prodigy, all have parental-control devices that restrict access, especially to chat rooms. They should use them. Parents can restrict kids from receiving instant messages and from conducting one-to-one chats in private rooms.

There's no way to stop the flow of pictures being passed back and forth as E-mail, but children who do not have their own screen names must first get Mom or Dad to get them online. Finally, cutting back on direct access to the Internet means curbing the raunchiest stuff. Don't give your kids a separate Internet account. Let them come to you.

The Net is already aflame with organized efforts to stop any government censorship. But libertarian principles, worthy though they may be, do not provide sufficient answers to the problems associated with pornography and children. There's no question that supervision is needed, but it should come from parents, not government acting in loco parentis.

Education is not about politics

There are two axioms in education that most of us know and agree with. They are education equals opportunity, and the teacher is the program.

The importance of the classroom teacher cannot be underestimated. The first question parents of elementary school students ask at the end of a year is not, "What will you learn next year?" It is: "Who's your teacher next year?" Parents know how important it is to have a good teacher, and that is why they ask.

The Secondary Schools Task Force was established in 1993 to do a comprehensive review of secondary school standards in time to develop model legislation for the 1995 session of the Nevada Legislature.

The Task Force membership consisted of a broadly representative group of secondary teachers and administrators, local school trustees, State Board representatives, higher education staff, parents, students and business representatives.

The Task Force also recognized the importance of classroom teachers in education. Their recommendation #11 recommends a review of teacher licensure standards by the Professional Standards Commission and make suggestions necessary to support and encourage school restructuring.

Changes may include: Institution of reciprocity agreements with other states; alternative licensing; and expansion or revision in the Commission make-up.

According to a 1990 report completed by the Council of Chief State School Officers, Nevada has the lowest standards of all states reporting for teacher licensure. In fact, when teachers go to renew their licenses, they are not required to take coursework in the areas they teach. Clearly, this is not in the best interest of the students.

The task force recognized how the state teachers union controls the Professional Standards Commission and they recommended expansion or revision in membership so regulations could be changed that would accommodate a child's education.

Realizing the importance of teachers, Sandra Tiffany and Bill Harrington have introduced legislation in line with the recommendations set forth by the Secondary Task Force. Naturally, the state teachers union is fighting it.

AB220 requires teachers to take 3 of the 6 credits needed for relicensure in the areas they are teaching children. It simply requires teachers to stay competent and current in their fields of specialization. AB291 allows for reciprocity and alternative licensure of teachers. It simply allows people that have gained their expertise in some other forum entry into education.

The reason our standards are some of the lowest in the land is because of the make-up of the Professional Standards Commission. The state teachers' union controls membership because our esteemed education governor won't make strong choices.

During the last legislative session, it was recommended that the Professional Standards Commission be abolished by the Guinn Commission. The governor did, in fact, take it out when he was reorganizing state government. However, after some arm twisting by the state teachers union, he not only put it back in but he also named the state teachers' union president to the Commission.

That stinks, but the stench gets worse when you find out that the union president is also responsible for nominating others to the commission. That's not ethical!

Miller's silence on issues that the state teachers' union does not agree with makes him the teachers' union governor — not the education governor as he'd like to think. His silence is deafening.

His silence concerning AB 290 and AB 291 is typical and places every child's education in jeopardy. His actions with regard to the Commission prove his allegiance is to the leadership of the state teachers' union and not to the children of our state.

It's about time Bob Miller realized education is not about politics. It's about opportunity. It is also time he realized that the teacher is the program—the teachers' preparation will determine the students' achievements.

It's time the governor made hard choices. In the past, he did as the union dictated. Now it's time to do what is in the best interest of the children of Nevada: Support AB 290 and AB 291 and expand or revise the make-up of the Professional Standards Commission.

The hidden costs of term limits

The U.S. Constitution says nothing directly on the subject of campaign finance. Otherwise so concerned with maintaining checks and balances on the various forms that political power can take, the framers did not anticipate the way that mass media would make it possible to exchange wealth for influence virtually overnight—and then continue to do so for years and even decades. In this area, some kind of correction is called for.

One correction would impose term limits on the Congress. Unfortunately, this correction, for all its superficial appeal and wide popularity, has many hidden costs. It engineers the defeat of legislators who would win reelection on the merit of their performance, frustrating the will of voters who want them. It treats expertise acquired through on-the-job legislative experience as worthless. Perhaps worst it favors candidates wealthy enough to take six to 12 years out of their lives without risking their own and their families' welfare.

For these and other reasons, a constitutional amendment imposing term limits on Congress was defeated in the House of Representatives.

Several items in the "contract with America," backed so heavily by freshman Republicans in the House, now either have been or are likely to be stopped in the Senate with the, help of veteran Republicans. This time, however, veteran Republicans in the House itself stepped in, most especially an aroused Henry J. Hyde, R-Ill.

Now what? Constitutional amendment should always be seen as radical, last-resort correction. When it comes to the problem of entrenched and unresponsive political majorities, if a more conservative remedy than constitutional amendment is available it should be used. Two conservative remedies are indeed available. First, campaign finance reform: Make politics affordable and ordinary people will get into politics. Second, a strict ban on political contributions by lobbyists: Force lobbyists to argue the merits of issues rather than simply pay the bills and many an invulnerable, lobbyist-supported incumbent will instantly become vulnerable.

But if campaign finance and lobbying cannot be reformed, and perhaps they cannot be, then term limits may be the second-best correction. In that case, however, a matter patently affecting the federal government must not be parceled out for the states to settle one at a time. That would lead only to chaos. And so long as seniority rules apply in Congress, any state that unilaterally imposes term limits on its legislators guarantees that its representation will always be junior. Seniority as a fact of political life needs to be factored in.

In the best of times, term limits is a cure that may be worse than the disease. Still, by taking the trouble to think things through beforehand, Congress can at least reduce the baneful side effects of this radical change. A bum's rush to throw the bums out is no way to run a republic.

Sheahan places third in Fair

Thorpe Elementary School second-grader Brittany Sheahan, a student of Patsy Horvath and Tonya Carlin's class, placed third in the Southern Nevada Science Fair at Cashman Field March 20-23.

More than 1,000 entries were submitted from private and public schools across southern Nevada.

Bette Johnson, science committee chair, said Sheahan's project was a first-place winner at Thorpe Elementary School's Science Fair on Tuesday, March 7. Ken Hamilton's science students from Clark High School served as judges. There were 90 individual student entries and each class submitted a science project. Johnson coordinated the school fair.

Dr. Cathy Conger, assistant principal, noted that the school's philosophy is to provide enrichment for all children. Thorpe, a primary school with students in early childhood through second grade classes, is unique in that it has a science lab with equipment and resources that enable teachers to provide hands-on science activities in the lab or in their classrooms. Prior to the school fair, Sheri Tapani and Johnson provided a night for families to explore science together and talked about how to develop a science fair project.

Sheahan's science project involved the use of drinking straws. She said she got her idea while at a local McDonald's. She wondered about how strong straws were. Could they support her father's weight? Her problem was "Can I hold my Dad up with straws?" Her hypothesis was "I think straws can hold my Dad."

Brittany is the daughter of John and Heidi Sheahan.

She said that this was the first time she had ever entered a Science Fair. In addition to the third-place certificate, she received a medal and a participation ribbon. As one of the winners she has been invited to attend a special recognition event at Desert Research Institute.

The existing building was renovated to house a gameroom and police community response center. The gymnasium, swimming pools and tennis courts remain as they were. New multi-purpose flooring was placed in the original classrooms making them better suited for dance and other classes; and new equipment is on the way for the fitness room. Use of the fitness room is free of charge until April 15.

The Silver Springs Recreation Center expansion and renovation has been under way since last June. The facility re-opened in mid-March and is now fully equipped and ready to serve the community.

An expanded staff will help things run smoothly. Five new employees were hired to accommodate the growth. The recreation center is open from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturdays and 1 to 5 p.m. Sundays. The swimming pools will open Memorial Day weekend.

She said she did not realize how many lives her son had touched, until his funeral services at Palm Mortuary. The chapel was overflowing.

Jerry Woods, HPRD recreation coordinator, said Sims was a great instructor. He gave children the time and attention they needed, he said. Woods' 3-year-old son, Bobby, was afraid of the water. Sims worked with Bobby, Woods said, and he soon became a very good swimmer. "He really took the time and worked with him," Woods said.

"He just lived life," Worwood said. "He was comfortable with any age group. ... A lot of people talked about wanting to do something in Preston's memory."

The Celebrate Life Living Tree Memorial, an HPRD program, was a natural fit. Steve Rongyocsik, superintendent of parks and facilities, said HPRD is now collecting donations for the living tree memorial. When sufficient funds are received, trees will be purchased for planting. PLAY: To remain at Fox Ridge one more year

Ridge, so in order to maintain marketing we decided to stay with Fox Ridge."

The Arts Council didn't want to confuse people by initially telling them the play, "Henry the Fourth, Part I," would be held at Arroyo Grande Sports Complex and later having to tell everybody the play has been switched to Fox Ridge Park.

Construction on Phase II of the Arroyo Grande Sports Complex began in January, said park planner Jack Reynolds,

The project has a 240-day calendar contract with two completion dates, he said. The first part, which includes four softball fields and the amphitheater is scheduled to open Aug. 15.

The entire project is scheduled to open near October.

One of the major delays for the Arroyo Grande Sports Complex, Reynolds said, was the project had to go out for re-bidding to cut some costs. That put the project 30-45 days behind schedule.

Henderson Parks and Recreation Department Director Dundee Jones said the initial bids were over budget. In order to meet the budget, the city deducted several items from the second phase including a monument sign, picnic shade structures, and trees and shrubs. Jones said as the money becomes available, they will incorporate those items.

Another major delay for the sports complex was the removal of the silt. Contractors were afraid their equipment would get bogged down in it and the original land-owner, Bonanza Materials, didn't fulfill its agreement with the city, Jones said.

Rob Weidenfeld/News Staff

UNDER CONSTRUCTION — Employees from Modern Tech work on Phase 2 of the Arroyo Grande Sports Complex. Construction began in January and is scheduled to be completed by the end of the summer.

Bonanza Materials had to turn over some land to let it dry. "They put it off to the last minute," Jones said. "We didn't get the cooperation and they waited until the last prodding."

Reynolds said the silt removal problem pushed the project back 30-60 days.

Although Steele couldn't get a guarantee for the Arroyo Grande Park, she said the Arts Council is extremely grateful for the city's cooperation, especially the Parks and Recreation Department.

"With the extra support the city gave us last year, it worked out wonderfully."

The city alleviated parking and traffic problems in the neighborhood by shuttling people on buses from Green Valley High School to the park. A bonus for people using the shuttle were mini-lectures on the buses to provide insight for the theatergoers.

Steele urges more community support for the play, especially in light of possible federal funding cuts for the arts. Anyone wishing to volunteer time or donate money can call 458-8855.

Davis attends judicial education course

Pro Tem Judge Terry L. Davis of the Municipal Court in Henderson, Nevada has completed the "Drinking Driver Cases" course March 26-31 at the National Judicial College.

High-volume DUI caseloads present unique challenges to both special and general jurisdiction courts. These cases have a higher incidence of jury trial than other criminal cases. Judge participants in "Drinking Driver Cases" learned how to oversee evaluations for chemical dependency and make informed dispositions to include in-patient or out-patient treatment as necessary.

Graduates learned how to develop an action plan to introduce new ideas into court procedures and to ensure change at the fastest possible rate, including the development of management techniques and strategies to manage DUI cases more efficiently and effectively from filing through sentencing.

Judge Davis' attendance at the "Drinking Driver Cases" course was made possible by a special grant from the State of Nevada Department of Motor Vehicles and Public Safety, Office of Traffic Safety. The grant also allowed another six judges from other communities to attend the course as well.

Located on the campus of the University of Nevada, Reno, the Judicial College was featured on CBS' "60 Minutes" as the leading national training and education center for trial judges.

This perception was further endorsed in the "Eye to Eye" segment on violence in the courtrooms.

Since the College was founded in 1963, more than 55,000 certificates of completion have been issued to graduates, including U.S. Supreme Court Justices Sandra Day O'Connor and David Souter.

Easter fun planned at Center

SENIOR CENTER HIGHLIGHTS

27 E. TEXAS ST.
565-6990

The Center is open for all activities Monday through Friday 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Thursday evenings 6 to 10 p.m. and Saturdays 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Easter Fun

Get fixed up in your Easter finest and come to the center on Friday, April 14. At 11 a.m., there will be a grand celebration with lots of goodies, and decorations from the students at McCaw Elementary School. Volunteers from Nevada Power Company and the Levi Community Involvement Team will also be here. When was the last time you had a root beer float? Stop by and celebrate!

Election Day Practice

The Clark County Election Department will set up a new voting machines at the center at 9:30 a.m. Friday, April 14. Last election, the new machines were only used in Assembly District 22—this time, all voters in Henderson will use them.

The machine will be set up between for anyone who would like to try it out before the Primary Election. Reminder: The Primary Election is May 2 and the General Election is June 6.

Spring Cook out

Get ready for a wonderful time at our annual back yard Barbecue from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., Saturday April 22. Master Chef Leonard Hagar will cook up the hot dogs and hamburgers to perfection and we will have all the trimmings. Our famous local Karaoke singer George Homol will be in the back yard by the barbecue grill. So stop on by for a great time and all you "wannabe great singers" step up to the mike and help us entertain.

Boss for a Day

Saturday Brunch regulars will have a special treat this week. The "bosses" from Levi Strauss will be here cooking up brunch. All you at Levi, this may be your only chance to have your bosses wait on you for a change! We are currently taking bets on who gets stuck on the dishwasher... Brunch is from 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. every Saturday for $1.25.

Stroke Support Group

Doris Schult, community liaison for the University Medical Center Rehabilitation Center, holds a monthly meeting for stroke survivors. The group's next meeting is 12:30 p.m., Tuesday, April 18.

Birthday Party

Once a month, the super cooks from Black Mountain Senior Nutrition make a beautifully hand-decorated cake to celebrate the birthday of everyone born in that month. With cook Sally Lambert out these past few months, the center would have been without a birthday party had it not been for our good friends coming to our rescue. Thanks to Senator Dina Titus, and Councilmen Paul Ruth and Larry Scheffler, we didn't miss

Engleman resigns from Press Association

The Nevada Press Association has accepted the resignation of its executive director, Ande Engleman. Citing exhaustion and an ever-increasing workload, Engleman submitted her resignation to the board and will be leaving her position April 14.

NPA President Sherman R. Frederick praised Engleman for her years of service to the people and newspapers of Nevada.

"The board thanks Ande for the many years of work on behalf of open government in Nevada. The work has been intense and important. Ande could not have performed the tasks with such zeal without deep convictions," Frederick said.

An appreciation dinner for Ande's contributions will be scheduled for later this spring.

Engleman has served as the NPA's executive director for over a decade and has helped guide the association to become a stronger and more effective organization.

Frederick, who is publisher of the Las Vegas Review-Journal, said the board is conducting a search for a new director.

Lady Gators second in tournament

Bill Bowman
News Sports Editor

If practice makes perfect, Samm Iuli has done a lot of practicing.

The right-handed pitcher for the Hilltop girls softball team threw two perfect games in the Green Valley Easter Softball Tournament to lead the Lancers to the championship.

In Wednesday's title game, Hilltop won 3-0 against Green Valley as Iuli threw a one-hitter.

Iuli was the winning pitcher — again — and was 4-0 in the tournament, throwing the two perfect games and two one-hitters. She did not give up an earned run.

Green Valley's lone hit against Iuli in the championship game was a fourth-inning double by Robyn Houldsworth that was a flair over first base.

Green Valley's Michelle Gutierrez suffered the loss, giving up three runs on five hits.

Going into the title game, Iuli had thrown perfect games against Cim-Memorial and Green Valley.

Tuesday against the Lady Gators, Iuli threw just 59 pitches in the six-inning 4-0 victory.

"She's phenomenal," Green Valley coach Cindi Davis said after Tuesday's game. "And, she's just a junior."

In Tuesday's perfect game, Hilltop scored the only run it would need in the first inning as Liz Silva drew a one-out walk from GV's Joni Scoville. Lieleini Reynolds also walked and Iuli followed with a blistering single up the middle that loaded the bases.

Melanie Ostberg then lashed a line drive to right that Green Valley's Rachel Mohler flagged down, but her throw to the plate was too late to get a sliding Silva. "Joni looked a little tired," Davis said. "We got out of it with just one run, but we needed to hit the ball."

That proved to be difficult as Iuli fanned 13 batters.

"We can hit the fast pitching," Davis said. "We knew she was going to be tough. They said she's ranked 12th in the state of California, so we knew she could pitch. We just needed to get the bat on the ball."

The closest the Lady Gators came to a hit was in the fifth when Gigi Burroughs rifled a shot to right, but Hilltop's Reynolds fielded the one-bounce shot and threw Burroughs out at first.

"She hit it hard, but right at her," Davis said.

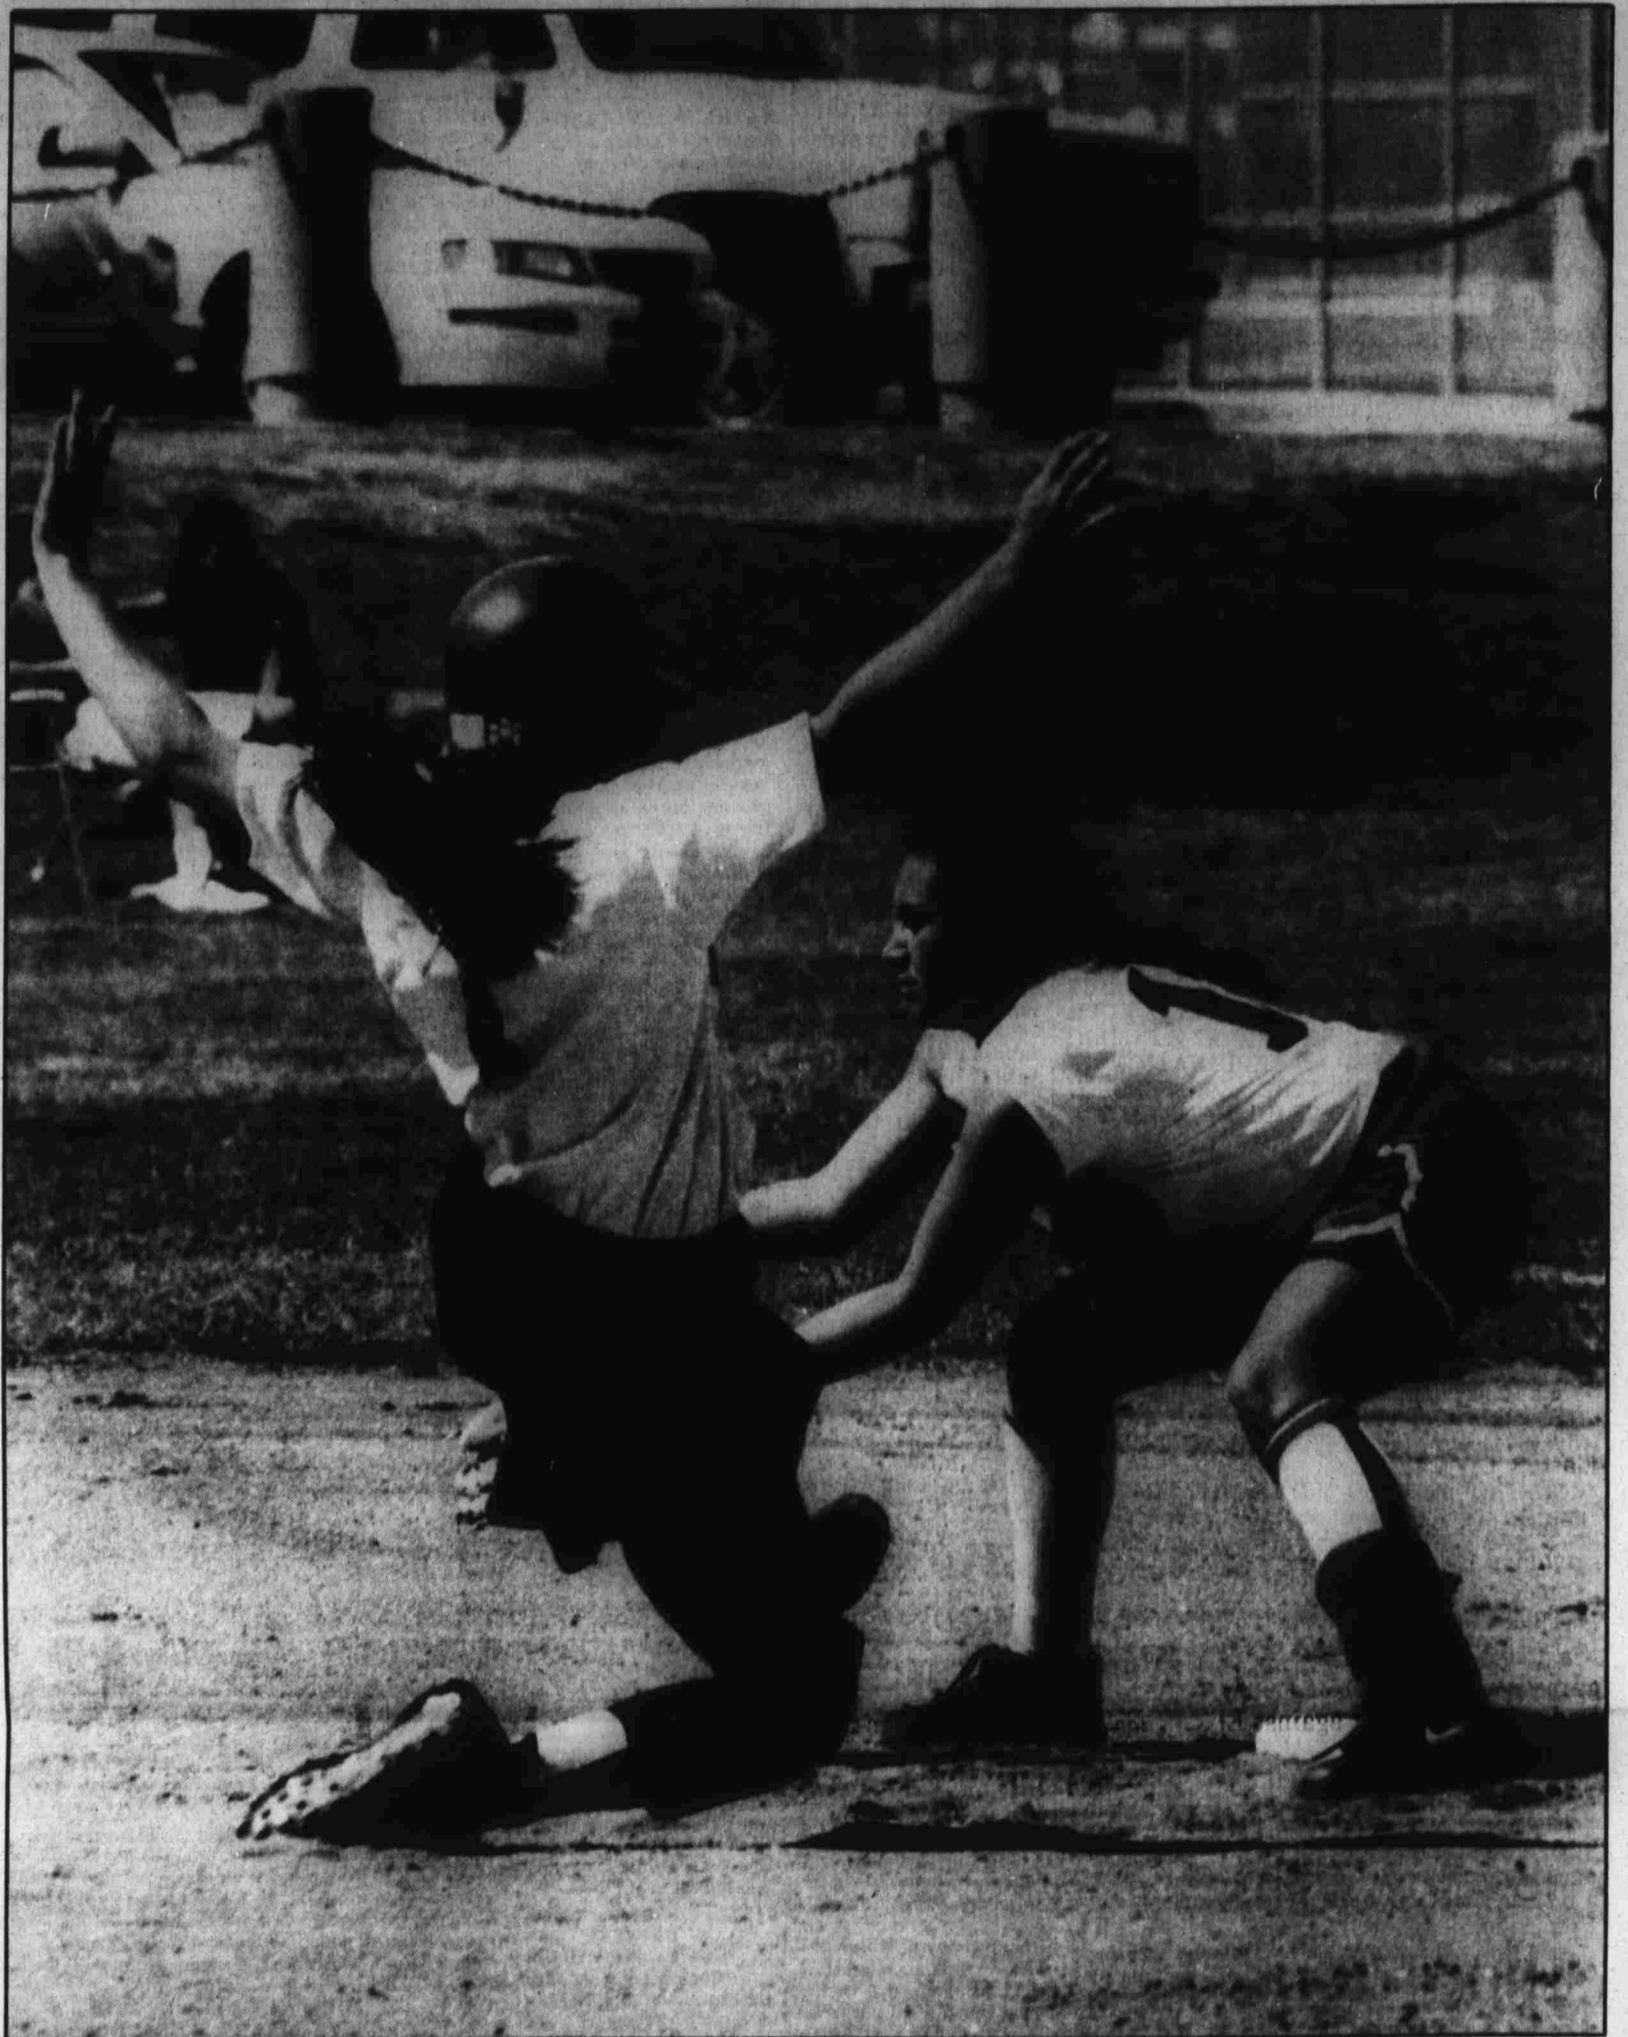

Burroughs said the team has to adjust to fast pitching. "If we're going to play in college, we're going to face that type of pitching all the time," she said.

Burroughs had been 5-for-6 in the tournament before the team faced Iuli.

"We were late getting around," Burroughs said. "I need to choke up and get the bat around and just make contact. You've got to adjust."

Iuli then struck out two of the final three batters to complete her second perfect game. On Monday, she threw a five-inning perfect game against Cim-Memorial.

The Lady Gators opened the tournament with a 4-3 loss to Santana, from California. "We outhit them 16-10, but we couldn't get runs across," Davis

Bench-clearing brawl ends Basic game in double-forfeit

D.J. Allen
News Staff Writer

A bench-clearing brawl in the top of the seventh inning at Burkholder Field on Wednesday stopped play between Basic and Bingham, Utah.

With Bingham on top 4-3, Bingham's starting pitcher, after being hit by a pitch from Wolves starter Ricky Hunt, charged the mound which led to both benches being cleared.

With the umpires calling the game, the game will be a double-forfeit, according to Basic coach Anson Jones.

There were no injuries in the brawl.

Baseball

Jones said he has never seen an incident such as that at the prep level.

"You'll never see that again in high school baseball. You just don't do that," said Jones about the batter charging the mound. "He's just watched too much TV."

In the bottom of the sixth, Basic third baseman Kevin Elliott, who had hit a home run his previous at bat, was brushed back with a fastball high and inside.

Bingham's pitcher felt he was hit intentionally in retaliation for coming inside on Elliott.

If the game would have been a game in league play, for leaving the dugout, the Wolves would have had to forfeit that game and the following game, according to Jones.

Elliott also had an RBI double in the first as he collected two of Basic's four hits in the shortened contest. Jeff Novak added an RBI for the Wolves.

Basic had a 3-0 lead after three innings of play before Hunt got touched up for a pair of runs in the fourth and sixth. Hunt only allowed four hits in the contest.

Basic will begin play in

Former Gators spur UNLV baseball sweep

Shortstop Shaw Casey and pitcher Tom LaRosa, both 1993 Green Valley graduates, helped UNLV to a three-game sweep of New Mexico State last weekend at Wilson Stadium.

Casey hit two three-run home runs in the series and LaRosa picked up his second consecutive win in relief as UNLV topped the Aggies 11-9 on Sunday.

The Rebels (25-12 overall, 6-3 in conference) will begin a three-game series against Cal-State Fullerton — the No. 1 ranked team in all three national poles — tonight at Wilson Stadium at 7:05 p.m.

Friday's game will begin at 7:05 p.m. and Saturday's at 1:05 p.m. LaRosa is a probable starter for Saturday.

Gorman's Easter Tournament today at 9 a.m. against West Torrance, Calif.

On Friday, Basic will play Burroughs, Calif., at 9 a.m. and West Jordan, Utah, at noon.

The Wolves will conclude tournament play Saturday at 9 a.m. against Kennedy, Calif.

All four tournament games for the Wolves will be played at Basic.

Jones hopes to be competitive in the tournament to prepare for the second half of Sunrise play beginning Tuesday at Boulder City.

"We just want to do the things we've done that have gotten us the wins early," Jones said. "Just throw strikes and make the routine plays."

Area sports results: If you fax them, we'll print them

Bill Bowman
News Sports Editor

OK sports fans, here's the deal. If you send us your results, we'll publish them.

It's that simple. Whether it's golf, tennis, baseball, water skiing or whatever, we want the results.

With summer near and school out, we know there are a lot of activities going on that we don't hear about.

We need your help. It's simple. Just print — that's PRINT — the results and standings (if there are standings) and fax them to 434-3527.

There are very few things we won't print. After all, we are a community newspaper. We're here to tell the community about our community.

It takes a team effort and everyone has to call every week. We need the results and standings by noon on Tuesday.

If you have a question, please call the News sports staff at 564-1881 and we'll see what we can work out.

Circle May 8 on your calendar.

It's the day Basic and Green Valley will meet for the second time in boys volleyball action.

The first meeting was a stunning three-game Green Valley victory.

It was one of the best volleyball matches I have ever seen.

Both teams had chances to win and fought off match points. Both teams had players making diving saves, high-flying spikes and picture-perfect serves.

It was a shame one team had to lose.

And Basic will be out for revenge.

It will be a home match for the Gators but the Wolves will be hungry for a victory.

If it's as good as the first match, it will be memorable.

While you're circling dates, mark April 26.

That's the showdown between the Green Valley and Silverado girls softball teams.

It should be a dandy.

Both teams feature power-pitching and timely hitting.

It also helps both are on top of their divisions.

Green Valley is 8-0 in Sunrise and Silverado is 5-0 in Sunset. Something's got to give.

Give Green Valley a hand.

The girls softball team staged a first-rate tournament that featured some top talent.

The six-team tournament will probably be expanded for next year according to GV's Cindi Davis.

If Hilltop from San Diego returns, don't miss the tournament.

Hilltop's Samm Iuli is one of the best pitchers around and also swings a mean bat at cleanup for the Lancers.

She had batters consistently swinging late with her blazing speed.

She's the best women's softball player I've seen — and she's just a junior.

said. "We left a lot of base runners and you can't do that and win." Burroughs had three hits to top the Lady Gators. Green Valley then breezed past Fremont, also from California, 25-0, scoring all 25 runs in the first two innings. "I was surprised it was that easy," Davis said. "We had 14 hits and there were a lot of walks and errors." Gutierrez had three hits and scored four runs to lead the Lady Gators' attack. Five Green Valley players added two RBI each. "The tournament has been a great experience," Davis said. "We need to get in the groove of playing teams that are pretty high quality."

The Lady Gators have run across that this week. "I'm real pleased with the caliber of teams," Davis said. "We're already looking at a few more teams next year."

In Wednesday's matchup, Green Valley got revenge against Santana, winning 6-4.

Jenn Dover picked up the big hit, a bases-loaded triple in the fourth that gave the Lady Gators the victory.

"It was nice to see her get her arms extended and make good contact," Davis said.

That set up Green Valley and Hilltop for the title game.

Sophomores Jess Prisbrey and Jeff Rednour and freshman Eric Wise will be called up from the JV squad to strengthen the Wolves' bullpen for the tournament.

Silverado will also play four games at home in the Gorman Easter Tournament beginning today.

Today, the Skyhawks will face Highland at 9 a.m. and East Lake at noon.

The Skyhawks will conclude the tournament with a 9 a.m. game against Mohave on Friday and a 9 a.m. contest against El Camino on Saturday.

Professor Christopher Kearney will speak on "Issues Regarding the Effectiveness of Psychotherapy for Children and Adolescents: Time to Move On" at 7:30 p.m. April 13 in the UNLV Classroom Building Complex, Auditorium A-110.

Part of the University Forum lecture series, his presentation is open to the public free of charge.

Kearney, an assistant professor of psychology, will discuss the challenges therapists face in providing treatment to children.

Among them are analyzing why some existing treatments are not effective when dealing with minorities and then finding ways to make treatments more effective by making them more culturally sensitive, he said.

FOR HENDERSON CITY COUNCIL • WARD 4

Dear Friends and Neighbors,

No doors.

The first thing I will do if I am elected to the Henderson City Council is remove the doors from my office.

I will put them into storage for as long as I serve.

It's a simple thing but a profound beginning...

If something can't be overheard, it shouldn't be said. If something can't be watched, it shouldn't be done.

Making gardens

GROW

Compiled by Kathy Streeter
 News Staff Writer

Rev up the rototiller, grab your hoe and don your gardening hat — April is the perfect time to plant a patch of warm-season vegetables.

Soil Preparation

A garden does best if located in a portion of the yard which receives at least six hours of sun each day, said Aggie Roberts, horticulturist with the Nevada Cooperative Extension.

Local soil is notoriously low in organic matter, and high in salts. Organic matter must be added or the soil will lack important nutrients, have unsuitable texture and drain poorly.

Compost, rotted manures, peat moss, potting mixes or forest mulches are good sources of organic matter. The Extension Service recommends that the organic material be spread three to four inches deep over a cleared planting area.

One to two pounds of fertilizer, such as ammonium phosphate (16-20-0), per 100 square feet should be spread on top of the organic matter. Then top those two layers with two to three pounds of soil sulfur per 100 square feet. Till or spade the organic matter, fertilizer and sulfur in the top foot of soil. Level and moisten the improved soil, and you're ready to plant.

Planting

Southern Nevada heat can create problems for vegetables. Cool weather plants such as beets, carrots, lettuce and others become tough and bitter if planted too late. All vegetables show signs of stress once temperatures exceed 90 degrees. Therefore, it is important to plant in the proper season.

Asparagus, beans, cantaloupe, corn, cucumbers, eggplant, muskmelon, okra, peanuts, peppers, sweet potatoes, pumpkins, summer squash, winter squash and watermelon can be planted in April.

Some varieties of vegetables are more adaptable to Southern Nevada. See the Suggested Vegetable Variety Chart for those the Extension Service has found to be the most successful.

Some plants such as tomatoes, peppers, squash and watermelon do better if they are started indoors, then transplanted outside when they are several inches tall.

Roberts said the planting instructions on the back of seed packets should always be followed — no matter how many times you've planted in the past. Larger seeds need to be planted deeper than small seeds. Corn should be planted in double rows; plant in blocks if necessary, and make repeated sowings until Aug. 15.

Squash, pumpkins, cantaloupes, cucumbers and watermelons are space-users. On the ground, the vining types need 10 feet or more between rows, according to Roberts. They can be grown in less space by training the vines or pruning.

To promote rapid seed germination and assist transplants in making new growth, keep soil moist until seedlings are established; then mulch.

Mulching and Fertilizing

In May, when the plants are two to three inches high, place mulch around them. This will keep in moisture and help keep the plants cool. It also decreases the number of weeds.

Fertilizer should be applied once a month after the plants are established. The Extension Service offers these tips: There are always three numbers on a fertilizer bag, 16-20-0 for example.

The first number is the percentage of nitrogen. Nitrogen promotes plant growth. The second number is the percentage of phosphorous which promotes roots, flowers, fruit and seed production. The third number represents the percentage of potassium.

Potassium improves plant quality and builds resistance to pests, heat and cold. Desert soils generally have sufficient potassium for most plants.

When preparing the soil, use a fertilizer high in phosphorous, such as 16-20-0. But for established plants use a fertilizer high in nitrogen such as 22-4-6.

Fertilize once a month with a fertilizer that is high in nitrogen. Spread the fertilizer at least three inches away from plant. Follow with deep irrigation.

Watering

Water is the life substance of plants. It accounts for 90% of the weight of the leaves, flowers, roots and green stems.

Every time you water, enough should be applied to wet the entire root zone. Vegetables generally require water to a 12-inch depth. To determine if you are watering properly, insert a screw driver in the soil. Resistance will increase as it reaches dry soil.

Roberts said a gardener can also dig down in the soil and remove a small handful of dirt. If it forms a muddy ball when pressed together, you are watering too much. If the soil falls through your fingers, you are not watering enough. And if it forms a compact, moist ball, you are watering appropriately.

Too much water in the soil can be as harmful as too little. Too much water means the plant is getting too little air and also encourages disease organisms to attack healthy plants.

Roberts said the most common mistake gardeners in Southern Nevada make is over-watering their plants.

Diseases and Insects

Iron chlorosis, the yellowing of plant leaves, is a common problem of plants growing in wet soils. Excessive soil water reduces root growth and iron uptake and results in chlorotic foliage.

Close inspection of the plant reveals that the yellowing occurs between the veins of the leaf; the veins remain green. As this condition worsens, leaves turn yellow, scorch on the edges and drop.

Iron chlorosis can be countered by applying iron fertilizers to the soil or spraying the plant with iron solutions.

Aphids, cutworms, mites, corn earworms, earwigs, sowbugs, and tomato hornworms are some of the more common insects this time of year. There are many pesticides available to kill unwanted pests, the Extension Service has a complete list. However, you might try some organic methods first.

Spading or tilling the soil can expose insects to adverse weather conditions and they will die. Remove dead crops and weeds. Remove fruit, leaves and stems infested with insects or insect egg masses. A stiff stream of water may also remove insects. Simple water sprays with a small amount of detergent added will dislodge aphids and spider mites.

Parasites or predators may also be used, but do not guarantee total control. Lady beetles prefer aphids and will feed on mealy bugs, spider mites and other soft-bodied pests.

Lacewings, commonly referred to as aphid lions, prefer aphids, spider mites, leafhopper nymphs and small larvae.

Insecticidal soaps have low toxicity for humans and pets. However, they must contact the insects or they lose their "punch" after drying.

The Nevada Cooperative Extension service has many master gardeners on staff, and they are willing to answer any gardening questions. Call 731-3130. They also have cabinets full of helpful gardening information. The documents, written by staff, are the result of numerous tests and lengthy research.

Flower choices in the desert

Flowers thrive in Southern Nevada when planted at the right time. There are many choices for summer and fall color.

Prepare the soil as you would for a vegetable garden. Add organic matter to keep the soil open and friable. Then add fertilizer such as ammonium phosphate and work the layers in together. Keep the soil, moist, but not too wet.

Here are some of the flowers the Extension Service recommends be planted in April for summer blossoms:

•Asters, Celosia, Cosmos, Four O'clocks, Gaillardia, Marigolds, Morning Glory, Periwinkle, Strawflower, Sunflower, Verbena and Zinnia.

•Geraniums, Salvia and Sweet Peas should be planted in an area where they will receive morning sun. Plant Columbine, Nasturtium, Oxalis, and Wax Begonia in full shade.

•Clarkia, Forget-Me-Nots,

Lobelia, Petunia, Phlox and Salpiglossis can also be planted in April, after any danger of frost, for fall color.

•Amaryllis, Caladium, Cannas, Dahlia, Daylilies, Gladiolas, Lily of the Nile, Lycoris and Zephyranthes bulbs should be planted in the spring for summer color.

For a complete list of flowers to plant in Southern Nevada, and when to plant them, contact the University of Nevada Cooperative Extension, 731-3130.

Enjoying new tastes at Bangkok Orchid

Located at 4662 E. Sunset Rd. in Henderson, near Mountain Vista, is the Bangkok Orchid, specializing in Thai and Chinese cuisine and offering a reasonably priced and varied menu. Our family decided to drop by on a recent evening.

Appetizers, ranging from about $3 to $6, included Mee Krob (crispy noodles mixed with shrimp, chicken and bean sprouts) and Satay (grilled beef or chicken marinated with spices, peanut sauce and cucumber salad).

Wonton soup and egg flower soup share the menu with Tom Yum soup (shrimp and mushrooms in a spicy-sour soup), seaweed soup (with tofu and vegetables) and coconut chicken soup.

There is no children's menu, so the four of us decided to share a tureen of soup (War Wonton) and share three main entrees. It worked out perfectly. The soup was excellent and included wonton, vegetables, shrimp, chicken and pork.

LET'S EAT OUT!

PHILIP GOLDSTEIN

For dinner, we had glass noodles with shrimp at $8.95, strawberry chicken at $6.95, and beef broccoli at $6.95.

The very fine glass noodles looked almost clear in the shrimp and vegetable sauce. The food was lightly seasoned with some new flavors we didn't recognize. The strawberry chicken was a plate of batter-dipped chicken covered in a surprisingly mild and not overly sweet strawberry sauce. The beef broccoli was also very good and offered a new taste from that of a typical Chinese dish.

My wife Julie especially liked the strawberry chicken and said it was definitely worth ordering again next time. Our son Matthew and daughter Marcie seemed to enjoy everything and liked being able to pick and choose what to eat.

Other entrees, ranging from about $6.95 to $8.95, included

Mongolian beef, beef pepper steak, almond chicken and chicken with bamboo shoots.

Thai specialties, offering a choice of beef, chicken or pork, could be ordered with either Thai red curry sauce (with coconut and bamboo shoots), yellow curry sauce (with pepper, onion and mushroom), a chili mint marinade or even a ginger saute (with soy bean sauce). Perhaps one evening, without the kids, we may go back to try some of these spicier dishes.

Another menu section offered vegetarian specialties. Priced at about $5.50, broccoli with oyster sauce, yellow curry with vegetables and stir-fried vegetables were also available.

All in all, we enjoyed some new tastes and had a pretty good meal.

Goldstein, an attorney who lives in Henderson, writes about his dining experiences with his wife Julie, and young children Marcie and Matthew.

The trials of paramedic training

Bodi Wallace
Firefighter/Paramedic Trainee

Calls for assistance are made to 911 dispatchers may times every day in our city. Nearest units then respond to the scene and assist the injured or ill patient. Depending on the severity, the patient may be loaded into the ambulance and transported to the hospital. With more people moving to Henderson, the number of 911 calls for help have been rising steadily.

The Henderson Fire Department strives to meet the demands placed on its Emergency Medical Services (EMS) Division by ensuring it has an adequate supply of Paramedic-trained firefighters and equipment.

Paramedic training varies across the United States but any program that certifies paramedics must include The U.S. Department of Transportation curriculum for paramedics. Prerequisites for becoming a paramedic include current certification as an Emergency Medical Technician—Intermediate (EMT-1) and current Ambulance Attendant license as an EMT-1 in Clark County.

Currently in Southern Ne-

HENDERSON FIRE DEPARTMENT

vada there are two programs to certify Emergency Medical Technician-Paramedics (EMT-P) in Advanced Life Support. The first is offered by a local hospital and provides the student with a certificate upon completion. The second is offered by the local community college and offers a certificate and a two-year Associates of Applied Science degree in Paramedicine.

Currently, the minimum number of hours needed to become a Paramedic includes 1,360 hours of training (67 credits at CCSN), not including prerequisites. Areas covered include human anatomy and physiology (structure and function), pharmacology (medications), and pathophysiology (diseases and degenerative processes). Additional course work includes electrocardiography (study of electrical currents originating in the heart), pediatrics for paramedics (care of acute medical illnesses and trauma in children), paramedic skills practice, Advanced Cardiac Life Support (ACLS), Pre-Hospital Trauma

Life Support (PHTLS), and Pediatric Advanced Life Support (PALS).

After the paramedic student successfully completes school, he/she must successfully complete a 480-hour internship where the paramedic student cares for patients under the supervision of a senior firefighter/paramedic.

Ongoing training is also conducted for paramedics and Henderson firefighter/paramedics must complete 40 hours per year of continuing education, most of which is provided by the department.

Also, in Henderson, fire fighter/paramedics function as firefighters and paramedics; they have a dual role. This makes for a highly efficient use of personnel, and it is popular among cities that want to provide paramedic services to its citizens while making the most of the fire department's budget.

Because of firefighter/paramedics' extensive training and dedication to the health profession the city of Henderson receives a high standard in patient care in an expedient, appropriate and professional manner.

Time IRA withdrawals for optimum savings

When it comes to withdrawing funds from Individual Retirement Accounts, timing is everything. Withdraw too soon or too late, too much or too little, and you will be subject to tax penalties. According to the Nevada Society of CPAs, there are three basic rules governing IRA withdrawals, each tied to the age of the owner.

•Rule number one: Generally, if you withdraw funds from your IRA before you reach age 59 1/2, you'll face a 10% penalty on the premature distribution. This rule is intended to discourage taxpayers from using IRAs as short-term tax shelters. However, exceptions apply for distributions that are (1) made upon your death; (2) because you become disabled; and (3) part of a series of substantially equal (annuity-type) payments over your life.

•Rule number two: In general, after you reach age 59 1/2, you may withdraw your IRA dollars at any time without IRS penalty. If you made tax-deductible contributions to an IRA, your withdrawals are taxed as ordinary income. If you made nondeductible deposits to your IRA, a portion of your withdrawal is tax-free. Keep in mind that if you withdraw nondeductible contributions, you'll need to file Form 8606 with your tax return.

•Rule number three: You must begin to withdraw money from your IRA by April 1 of the year following the year in which you reach age 70 1/2, and by each Dec. 31 thereafter. The minimum withdrawal schedule is designed so that you can begin pulling money out—and paying taxes on it—before you die, or your designated beneficiary dies.

Waiting too long to begin the payout process carries stiffer penalties than withdrawing too soon. If you don't take out the minimum sum required each year, the IRS will take 50% of the amount you fail to withdraw.

Calculating life expectancy
Minimum withdrawals are based on your life expectancy or on the joint life expectancy of you and your designated beneficiary. To estimate withdrawals, you must use life expectancy tables that appear in IRS Publication 590, Individual Retirement Arrangements.

Once you choose to use single or joint life expectancy method, you cannot switch from one method to the other. To determine how much you must withdraw, add up the balances in all your IRAs as of the end of the calendar year, and divide that total by the number of years you are expected to live. A 70-year-old, for example, has a single life expectancy of 16 years according to the IRS tables. So, if you are 70 and have $100,000 in your IRA, the first required withdrawal would be one-sixteenth of that amount, or $6,250.

Should you decide to calculate your minimum required distribution based on the joint life expectancy of you and your designated beneficiary, your minimum withdrawal would be based on a longer life expectancy. In effect, using joint life expectancy reduces your required minimum annual distribution and extends the payout period. To be certain you don't underestimate your minimum withdrawal—and risk facing costly penalties—you may want to consult a CPA.

Computing your payout
If you have several IRAs, the IRS requires that you compute the minimum distribution for each separate account. This can be complicated, particularly if the beneficiaries of your different accounts are not the same age.

Once you determine the minimum withdrawal required for each account, add these amounts to get the total required withdrawal for the year. You can withdraw the total amount from one account or from any combination of them.

To estimate minimum withdrawals for subsequent years, you simply reduce your original life expectancy number by one year—taking one-fifteenth the second year, one-fourteenth the third year—or you can recompute your life expectancy each year.

Finally, CPAs point out that you can choose to withdraw all your IRA funds at once. However, this may subject you to a large tax bill and possible penalties. What's more, you'll need to carefully manage those funds to ensure you don't deplete them too quickly.

Program (Drug Awareness Resistance and Education), Lied Discovery Museum, S.P.I.C.E. (Seniors Participating in Children's Education) and the Friendship Center, an inner-city after-school program in conjunction with the Frontier Girl Scouts. All these projects used funds raised by JLLV through events such as the "Roaring '20s" Gala.

Autism workshop April 19

Associated Counseling and Therapy Services is presenting a one-day workshop, Autism Revisited, Identifying and Working with High Intelligence and High Functioning Individuals with Autism, Wednesday, April 19, 1995.

The workshop will be from 8:45 a.m. to 4:45 p.m. at the Nevada Garden Club, 3333 W. Washington.

High functioning autism is an often overlooked, misdiagnosed and mistreated form of autism.

While often seen as somewhat different or unusual in early childhood, individuals are able to function adequately in elementary school. Problems frequently develop in middle and high school.

The disorder is characterized by difficulty in social situations, trouble adapting to change and sensitivity to sensory stimuli. Albert Einstein, Donna Williams, author of "Nobody Nowhere" and "Somebody Somewhere," Bill Gates of Microsoft and actress Darryl Hannah represent people with autistic-like behaviors.

Presenters are Peggy Joyce Main and Susan Main. Peggy is a psychotherapist in private practice in Las Vegas. She and Susan co-produced the opening video for the 1994 Autism Society of America Conference and Susan was a member of a panel of young adults with autism who spoke at the conference.

Lloyd High: Last resident of Cortez

Some weeks ago, we had occasion to chronicle the last years of the last residents of the mining camp of Fairview, Ed and Sylvia Stratton. Another Nevada who stuck it out in a long-abandoned camp was Lloyd G. High who made his home in Cortez from 1919 to 1970.

Born in Marcellus, Mich. on Nov. 5, 1892, "Hi," as he was known to his friends, knocked around the West as a lumberjack, merchant seaman and hardrock miner for several years prior to his 1917 enlistment in the American army.

Following a year at the front in France, he was discharged and made his way to Grass Valley, some 20 miles south of Cortez, where he worked on a ranch. In 1919, he placed several gold claims at Cortez before the Cortez Silver Mines Inc. came in and took over the major mines.

High took a position as a geologist and mining engineer with the company and was involved in the construction of a 100-ton concentration and cyanide mill in 1923. The values of the ore did not hold up, however, and the mines and mill closed in November 1929.

Within six months, the company was in receivership and the 150 men and their families who resided in the town had departed. But not Lloyd High.

THIS WAS NEVADA

PHILLIP I. EARL

With a small military pension sufficient to meet his simple needs, he fixed up a cabin and settled down. Over the years, he made a little money cutting fence posts for ranchers in the vicinity, but his efforts to promote another boom did not pan out.

He had hopes however. "The best is still here," he told a visitor in 1956, "Why two-thirds is still here—they haven't begun to go into the mountains yet—these later diggin's was strictly a stock proposition. Anyone who can recognize the float can pick up enough of it off the ground to clear $10 a day."

He was living alone with two cats at that time, an old cookstove, a cot, a rough hewn table, an old Victrola record player, a radio and a battered typewriter being the only amenities in his dwelling.

He had also acquired an ancient 1932 Model B Ford pickup truck in which he hauled fence posts or navigated the 20 miles or so of dirt road to the neighboring camp of Tenabo where he could get a drink at a saloon. He also spent time in Beowawe procuring supplies.

Despite his lack of education and his isolated circumstances, High had an interest in music and composition. When visitors came, he entertained them on an ingenious contraption consisting of an ancient guitar, attached harmonica and a set of Christmas bells.

His ballads, self-written, consisted of either weepy ballads or jumpy old square dancetunes which he delivered with an energetic, foot-tapping accompaniment. He also had a supply of old phonographic records for his Victrola, mostly hillbilly and western ballads, and was able to pick up stations from Elko and Reno on his radio.

Over the years, High also became known as "The Bard of Cortez" for his poetic missives and long odes on anything that happened to capture his imagination. His literary compositions took the form of rough couplets, rhymed and metered, and short stories which amused those who read them in the Reese River Reveille, Austin's newspaper, and other publications around the state.

Some of his writings evidenced penetrating psychological insights on his part and he might have succeeded as a literary figure had he been willing to surrender his isolated habitat for life in a city where he could have made literary contacts.

When writer Nell Murbarger visited in fall 1958, he expressed a wish that he could have seen Cortez in the boom days of the 1880s. They visited the old cemetery and had supper in his cabin later in the evening. As Nell drove out a few hours later, she had some long thoughts.

"As I started down the dusty trail," she later wrote, "I looked back to see my ghost town friend standing in the open doorway, the yellow lamplight spilling over him and across the yard. Except for the groping headlights of my car and the winking stars in the dark sky, that friendly glow from Lloyd's cabin door was the only gleam of light I could see in Cortez, and from the top of Mt. Tenabo to the highest summits of the sleeping Toiyabes."

In 1970, High abandoned Cortez for a friend's ranch in Crescent Valley. He fell ill of the infirmities of old age in fall 1971 and died of heart failure on Dec. 28 of that year, survived only by a nephew in Barstow, Calif.

Burns Funeral Home of Elko took care of services for him and he was buried there a few days later. A memorial service was also held at the hall of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Eureka since he was a member of that community's chapter.

WELLNESS DR. BILL ANDRADE

Stress management needed

We live in a fast paced, stressful culture. But what type of stress takes the biggest toll on health in the long run? Loss of a loved one? Loss of a job? Unexpected illness? Surprisingly, none of these. Research scientists believe that momentary frustrations that we face everyday year in and out are the most health damaging.

Anyone who is plagued on a regular basis by insomnia, irritability, belching, or headaches may be suffering from chronic stress. And chronic stress, if left unchecked eventually can lead to high blood pressure, heart attack, stroke, physical and emotional burnout.

Is there a strategy to deal with stress effectively and escape the medical consequences? Here are 6 suggestions that I offer my patients:

1. Stay in charge: No matter what "stressful circumstances" surround you, choose to stay in charge of your own feelings and actions.

2. Live one day at a time: There are two days out of the week that you can completely stop worrying about—immediately. One of these days is yesterday: it is beyond your control. You can't undo a single act, or take back anything you said. Yesterday is gone. The other day that we shouldn't be overly concerned with is tomorrow. Don't be a victim of anticipation anxiety.

3. Take a mental break: Anyone can learn to concentrate better, be more focused and deal with stress by taking a short break from rational thinking altogether. The best kind of mental break is an activity that engages the non-rational part of your mind—whether it is an internally focused activity, such as meditation, or listening to your favorite music, or a creative pursuit, such as painting or physical exercise.

4. Stay refreshed—protect your sleep: Many people become trapped in the habit of hashing over problems late at night.

5. Exercise regularly: What you do is less important than whether you can relax and unwind while you exercise.

6. Don't sweat the small stuff: Prioritize—don't concentrate on ant-stomping when you should be elephant hunting. By focusing on what really matters, the important things are more likely to get done... without procrastination.

Don't let chronic stress keep you from your goal of enjoying optimal health.

HEART FACTS DR. ALAN STELJES

Women and Heart Disease III—Taking control

The common belief that heart disease is a problem only of men is a myth. Heart disease has proven to be the "equal opportunity killer." Heart attacks and stroke kill more women in the United States each year than all forms of cancer combined.

Fortunately, even modest changes in lifestyle, and modest reduction of risk factors, may lead to a significant reduction in susceptibility to heart disease. For example:

- A 1% reduction in total cholesterol reduces the risk of coronary heart disease by 2%.
- Lowering blood pressure 5 to 6 points reduces the risk of a stroke by 40-45% and the risk of dying from heart disease by 14%.
- Quitting smoking for a year reduces the risk of heart attack significantly after one year. After three years, the risk is the same as if you had never smoked.

Taking control begins with taking heed of your own risk. Cardiology Associates of Lake Mead offers an excellent coronary risk profile analysis.

Obesity is a prime factor in elevations of blood pressure, blood sugar (diabetes), and triglycerides (blood fat), all of which lead to heart disease. As much as 70% of coronary heart disease among women is attributed to their being overweight; however, yo-yo diets with weight fluctuating up and down by 10% or more may also increase risk of coronary disease by 50%.

First, set realistic goals. Even a 10 pound weight loss will significantly reduce blood pressure. Next, establish healthy eating practices. Weight control is a lifelong commitment. Leave the salt shaker off the table. Reducing salt intake from 1.5 teaspoons to 1 teaspoon a day will significantly lower blood pressure.

Start a program of light but regular exercise. Even exercising once a week lowers the risks of diabetes 40%. Physical activity burns calories and reduces stress. As importantly, exercise leads to a sense of well-being and a feeling that you are in control of your life.

Quit smoking! Easier said than done. For help in stopping, consult your doctor or local Heart Association or Cancer Society.

Hormone supplements for women after menopause may reduce the risk of heart disease by up to 40%. Medications for lower cholesterol may be required where diet and exercise has failed to lower the level satisfactorily. Watch this column for specific advice or consult your physicians.

Fun is key to children's nutrition

Pretending the spoon is a choochootrain or an airplane probably won't get young children to eat their veggies after the tenth try. That's why it's handy to have a variety of "tricks" to make eating healthy food more fun.

Children ages two to five will probably like to eat more healthful grains, fruits and vegetables if they are cut into fun shapes with cookie cutters. Sandwiches can be made on whole-wheat bread spread with low-fat cream cheese, grated carrot, and raisins, for example, and cut them into star shapes.

Or spread a rice cake with a tablespoon of peanut butter and help your child make a face with a slice of banana for a nose, raisins for eyes, and a strip of carrot for a mouth.

Asking kids to help prepare meals by doing simple and safe tasks can make them more interested in the food being served, and proud that they helped. Buy some small pans or bowls and give them small portions of a side dish or dessert you are going to make.

Show them how to fill their pan with the ingredients and how to decorate the top with some cut-up fruit or vegetables. There are cookbooks designed for children to learn how to make simple dishes, with adult supervision.

Vegetables are often thought of as the biggest challenge when it comes to good nutrition for small children. But you can help get your kids used to new vegetables they might resist (such as broccoli, Brussels sprouts or spinach) by serving them with others that are favorites, such as potatoes, peas, corn, and carrots.

Your children might have fun choosing differently colored vegetables for a salad, such as orange shredded carrots, red chopped beets, yellow corn, and green chopped celery. They'll also find it easier to eat vegetables that are chopped.

Cooked vegetables may go down easier if you give them a creamy texture by using just a little low-fat cheese, non-fat cream cheese or sour cream, or a spoonful of part-skim ricotta cheese.

This also makes them good for stuffing into another type of vegetable, something your child might find fun. Mushroom caps, raw green pepper halves, raw halved scooped-out tomatoes, and celery sticks are all good for stuffing with other fillings.

A fruit salad can use favorite fruits and also introduce children to new fruits they haven't yet tried. Mix it with a bit of low-fat vanilla yogurt, and sprinkle with a dash of colored sugar sprinkles to pique their interest.

When kids resist new foods, childhood nutrition experts advise patience and not forcing the child to eat. Repeated exposure to new foods at mealtimes will encourage children by seeing other people enjoying them.

Brood mare adoptors sought

The Bureau of Land Management is seeking special adoptors for brood mares now being cared for in Oklahoma.

"We are now accepting applications for brood mare adoptions, with the horses available for placement about June," according to Bruce Dawson, head of the BLM's National Wild Horse and Burro Team.

"A group of 160 mares, ideal for brood mares, will be the first to be placed," he said, adding the mares are in excellent condition and will be at their peak in June.

Qualified individuals may adopt up to 40 mares at a cost of $75 each, but may receive title to only four animals per year. BLM will inspect all facilities and require signed agreements. Quarterly inspections will continue until all mares are titled.

Potential adoptors should request a copy of the adoption terms and submit proposals by the end of May to the National Wild Horse and Burro Team, P.O. box 12000, Reno, Nev. 89520, or call (702)785-6457 for more information.

Mares will have updated inoculations, tests and veterinary care prior to transportation.

The Bartlesville, Okla. sanctuary began operation in 1989, and includes 18,000 acres of lush prairie grasslands.

Originally, there were three sanctuaries for wild horses gathered from public rangelands in 10 states when the wild horse population became too large for the land to support.

Since 1973, BLM has placed more than 130,000 wild horses and burros in private care.

Adoptors acquire a living symbol of the "historic and pioneer spirit of the West," as Congress designated these animals. The program helps the Government fulfill the mission of maintaining healthy herds of wild free-roaming horses on public lands.

Big game hunts scheduled

A youth deer hunt and the first Rocky Mountain bighorn sheep hunts in three years were among the 1995 big game seasons adopted by the Nevada Board of Wildlife Commissioners at a recent meeting in Henderson.

Deer hunters will see seasons similar to those adopted last year. Most of Nevada's 1995 general buck hunts will be held from Oct. 7 - Nov. 5.

A very limited but increased number of antlerless (doe) hunts over last year will be held in 1995. NDOW reported that additional antlerless hunts will be proposed in the future as mule deer herds recover from near record low levels documented three years ago. Most doe hunts will also run Oct. 7 - Nov. 5.

Archery deer hunts will generally open on Aug. 12 and run through Sept. 8. Most muzzleloader deer hunts are scheduled for Sept. 9-24.

A new hunt, requested by the Nye and Clark county wildlife advisory boards, is a deer depredation hunt for young hunters only that is planned for Aug. 5-13 around the Cherry Creek drainage in management unit 132. The special hunt would be limited to young hunters, ages 12 through 15.

Because commissioners raised questions about the legality of approving such a hunt at the meeting, a query is being made to the Nevada Attorney General's office. If the youth hunt is not allowed, the depredation hunt will then be open to all hunters.

It is estimated that 30 to 40 tags will be issued for the special youth hunt.

There will also be few changes in other big game seasons, with one exception being the addition of a pair of hunts for Rocky Mountain bighorn sheep. Those hunts will be held from Aug. 26 - Nov. 5 in management units 079, composed mostly of Pilot Peak, and unit 102 at the north end of the Ruby Mountains.

Non-residents will have their first hunt ever for California bighorn sheep in Nevada, with a season approved for unit 035, extending from Sept. 16 - 30. It is believed that one tag will be issued.

Mike Hess, NDOW acting chief of game, said tags are typically issued to non-residents for a game animal when the resident quota reaches 20 tags.

An either sex elk depredation hunt was approved for the Ruby Mountains of Elko County from Sept. 30 - Nov. 19. NDOW estimates 20 to 30 tags will be issued for this hunt.

Most general antelope buck hunts will last from Aug. 26 through Sept. 4. Antelope archery hunts will generally be held from Aug. 5 - 20.

Bull elk hunts are scheduled for Sept. 16 - Oct. 1 in most units. However, the season is Sept. 16 - Oct. 6 in unit 072, and Nov. 18 - Dec. 3 in units 111 through 115, 221, 222 and unit 262.

Desert bighorn sheep hunts will run from Nov. 11 - Dec. 10. Hunts in units 281 and 282 will be held from Dec. 16 - Jan. 1.

Rocky Mountain goat hunts will be held from Aug. 26 - Nov. 5 in management units 101 and 102.

In response to a request from hunters, the commission directed the Application Hunt Committee to explore the possibility of offering muzzleloader tags for elk, bighorn sheep, antelope and mountain goat in future years.

Applications and regulations for Nevada's 1995 deer and big game hunts should be available at NDOW offices and at most stores that sell hunting licenses by mid-March.

In early April, NDOW will establish recommendations of the actual number of tags—by hunt area and unit—that will be available for each hunted species. These proposals will then be reviewed by county game boards at meetings in April. The commission will then establish tag quotas at their May 6 meeting in Reno.

Integers - Multiplication and Division

By Bill Hanlon

Up to this point, we have looked at the three rules for adding signed numbers and one rule for subtracting. Today, we'll look at multiplication and division of signed numbers and see what kind of shortcuts we can uncover to make these problems easier.

Remembering that mathematics is used to describe events, we will again use the number line as we did with adding and subtracting integers. Here is how we will describe multiplication of signed numbers:

1. Traveling to the LEFT (west) means moving in a negative direction, traveling to the RIGHT (east) means moving in a positive direction.
2. Future time is designated by a POSITIVE sign. Time that has passed will be designated by a NEGATIVE sign.
3. You are at position zero.

ILLUSTRATION 1

If you are at zero and move east at 40 mph, where will you be in two hours?

Moving east means you are +40 mph, we are looking at future time, therefore the time is +2.

Now, standing at zero, heading in a positive direction for 2 hours you will be 80 miles east of zero or +80. Using mathematical symbols, we have $(+40) \times (+2) = +80$.

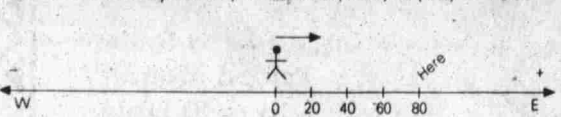

ILLUSTRATION 2

If you are at zero and move east at 40 mph, where were you two hours ago?

Moving east means you are +40 mph, we are looking at past time, therefore the time is -2.

Now, standing at zero, heading in a positive direction, you would have been 80 miles west of zero or -80. Using symbols, $(+40) \times (-2) = -80$.

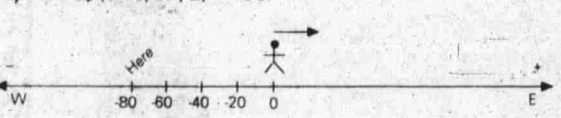

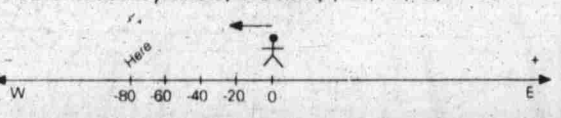

ILLUSTRATION 3

If you are at zero and move west at 40 mph, where will you be in two hours?

Moving west means you are -40 mph, we are at future time, therefore the time is +2.

Now, standing at zero, heading in a negative direction, you will be 80 miles west of zero or -80. Using our mathematical symbols, we have $(-40) \times (+2) = -80$.

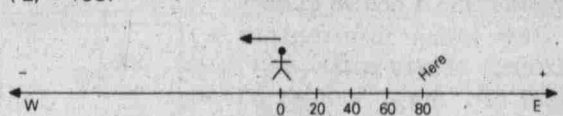

Now, have we left out any other possibilities in our travels? Yes, let's look at another way we could describe our little adventure.

ILLUSTRATION 4

If you are at zero and move west at 40 mph, where were you two hours ago?

Moving west means you are -40 mph, we are looking at past time, therefore time is -2.

Now, standing at zero, heading in a negative (WEST) direction, two hours ago you would have been 80 miles EAST which is positive. Using symbols we write $(-40) \times (-2) = +80$.

Keeping in mind that mathematics is used to describe events, and if we accept our original agreement, then we might be able to see a pattern developing. You might need to try a couple more examples on your own to see this pattern, but what seems to be occurring is:

1. a positive times a positive is positive
2. a negative times a positive is negative
3. a positive times a negative is negative, and
4. a negative times a negative is positive.

Writing that a little more simply:

1. Like signs are positive
2. Unlike signs are negative

We now have six rules for working with signed numbers: three for addition, one for subtraction, and two for multiplication & division.

The model we used for addition was walking on the number line starting from zero. The model for subtraction was finding the distance between the two numbers, then standing on the second number, looking in the direction of the first number. And today's model, standing on zero. Let's look at our six rules (shortcuts)

ADDITION

1. To add two positive numbers, find the sum of their absolute values, the answer is positive
2. To add two negative numbers, find the sum of their absolute values, the answer is negative
3. To add a positive and a negative number, find the difference between their absolute values and use the sign of the integer with the greater absolute value.

SUBTRACTION

4. Change the sign of the subtrahend, then use rule 1, 2, or 3 for addition—whichever one applies.

MULTIPLICATION/DIVISION

5. Same signs are positive
6. Different signs are negative

These rules work for only 2 numbers at a time!

Reid offers free catalogues

To help Nevada businesses operate more profitably, U.S. Senator Harry Reid is offering free information catalogues that provide lists of publications containing business statistics, census data, export agreements and international business information.

"In today's competitive marketplace, Nevada business leaders need extensive information to keep their business a head above the rest," Reid said.

"The Business Catalogue brings an abundance of information to your fingertips to give your organization an edge over the competition. I encourage business owners, large and small, to call my local offices for a free copy of the catalogue."

It lists more than 75 books and 35 periodicals from the Departments of Commerce, Housing and Urban Development, labor, State, Treasury and smaller agencies. It also features new sections on the Federal Register, Code of Federal Regulations, Congressional Record, Congressional Bills, plus Vice President Gore's National Performance Review publications.

Reid said, "The Catalogue's latest edition provides vital, timely and accurate information on new regulations that affect businesses and organizations." For a free catalogue, call Sen. Reid's office at (702)784-5586 in Reno, or 474-0041 in Las Vegas.

Searching lineage for medical problems

In one of my past columns, I've delved into the importance of tracing your ancestors' health and physical problems. Since then, more coverage and research has been devoted to this effort with amazing results. It used to be that tracing your family tree meant finding out where your ancestors hailed from, when they set foot in America and where they first called home.

Now research is being done for a different reason; to see if you can control your own medical future by learning what ailed your relatives in the past. Whether you get heart disease, diabetes or cancer, whether you live a long life or die an untimely death, is dependent at least in part on the genes you inherit.

Before, genealogy was "just concentrating on who came over on the Mayflower" or the John Winthrop fleet of 1630. Well, forget the Mayflower, says Josephine Wagner a cancer genetics counselor at Fox Chase Cancer Center in Philadelphia. More important is "What does your family's medical history say about you?"

The interest in understanding your own genetic stock is being fueled by a medical revolution in which one disease-causing gene after another is being identified, tests are being developed for a long list of inherited disorders and scientists talk of when, not if, some diseases will be cured.

Anita A. Lustenberger, a certified genealogist and genetics counselor at Columbia University in New York, said that, until recently, people figured there wasn't much point in knowing what medical problems lurked in their past. Taking medical histories was a task reserved for the family doctor.

"What's the use of knowing

FAMILY HISTORY

your ancestors died of cancer if there isn't much you can do about it?" But now, knowing that your grandmother and aunt died of breast cancer may not only make you more diligent about getting mammograms, but it might also lead you someday to be tested for the defective gene that causes the hereditary form of breast cancer.

Likewise, knowing that dangerously high cholesterol and heart disease run in the family may make you aware now for the need to watch your diet. In the future, you could be candidate for gene therapy to fix an inherited form of high cholesterol.

"If people care about themselves and their children, about their health and welfare and ultimate survival, they will find out their pedigree," said Dr. Aubrey Milunsky, director of the Center for Human Genetics at Boston University School of Medicine.

Wagner also said that something as simple as finding out "there is a strong family history of diabetes, lets you know you should watch your diet...If you know in your family history that there are several individuals who have brittle bones, you know not to go into football," she said.

Lustenberger said that, until recently, even trained genealogists weren't all that interested in what medical problems their ancestors had and how they died. Now, the National Genealogical Society — convinced that every family should have a "health historian" — is launching a new educational effort.

Carolyn Nell, the society's president, said the society was developing a blueprint to help people go about drawing up a family health history. In June, the society devoted its quarterly publication to the topic, noting that "in fascinating ways the lines between hard science and social history are blurring...I expect that with the study of genetics and family histories, genealogy will become a household word," she said.

"Genealogy is so much more than just the linking of one generation to the next...We are what they were!" Nell would like to see that every family has documented a thorough health history that can be turned over to the family doctor and used both to promote well-being and to prevent disease. "This is going to help us," she said.

But digging up the information can be difficult. Family lore about what killed Grandpa or Great Aunt Emily may not be accurate, and some families simply don't like to admit that relatives suffered from mental illness or alcoholism. "Grandpa may have fallen, hit his head and died in an accident, but the fact that he was drunk is never mentioned," Lustenberger said.

Moreover, past generations often weren't comfortable talking about the fact that someone had cancer or that a child had died in infancy. A range of gynecological problems, including ovarian cancer, often were politely referred to as a "female problem."

Even death certificates in family lockboxes can be deceiving. "Cardiac arrest" or "heart failure" may be listed as the cause of death — not surprising, since everyone's heart stops at death — but something else, such as lung cancer, may have been the real cause. Death certificates from years ago might just list "old age," she said. And as a courtesy to the family, coroners sometimes would not specify "suicide" on the certificate. [Your columnist notes that these omissions were sometimes related to insurance claim payments otherwise voided.]

For those adopted and have no idea who their birth family is, the task can be most difficult. Wagner said that when genetic counselors are trying to get the history of someone who is adopted, they will attempt to work through the adoption agency to get the information. Despite the potential obstacles, talking with relatives and sorting through family papers is the way to begin a health history.

How much information a person is able to gather will depend on how cooperative relatives are and how close-knit a family is.

Ideally, the history should include information on the person's mother and father, brothers and sisters; as well as grandparents, aunts, uncles, first cousins, great-grandparents, and great aunts and uncles when possible. Even the illnesses of your own children are important to know for your own health.

Finally, it is a good idea to also pin down a family's ethnic and religious background, since certain diseases are prevalent among people of a certain heritage, Lustenberger points out.

Ethnic background is not always apparent because families may have Anglicized their names or switched religious affiliations. [Listed sources and material from The Philadelphia Inquirer]

Birdhouse auction benefits historic Boulder Dam Hotel

More than 20 entries have already been received for the Birdhouse Auction on April 29 to benefit the Boulder Dam Hotel restoration project, according to Darlene Burk, event chairman.

"These are not your ordinary birdhouses," she said. "We have lighthouses, as well as replicas of Grace Community Church and the Boulder Dam Hotel."

All birdhouses have been donated and will be judged in the Birdhouse Design Competition in four categories: Originality, Creative Use of Materials, Most Whimsical and Best Overall. The deadline for submitting completed birdhouses is April 27, followed by judging on April 28 and the auction on April 29.

A silent auction for bird-related items—bird feeders, artwork, china—starts at 3 p.m. Saturday, April 29, in the Boulder Dam Hotel lobby, 1305 Arizona St. in Boulder City. The live auction, conducted by Darwin Bible, follows in the hotel courtyard. Refreshments will be served and a $5 donation is requested at the door.

Visitors will be able to see results of the first phase adaptive rehabilitation of the hotel by that date with the opening of the Boulder City Art Guild Gallery. The charming hotel, which first opened in 1933, has been acquired by the non-profit Boulder Dam Hotel Association to preserve, restore and operate for the benefit of the community.

Recognized as a national historic landmark, the hotel will eventually house the Arts Council, the Boulder City Hoover Dam Museum, the Chamber of Commerce, small shops, offices, hotel rooms and a restaurant/lounge.

PACC donates $2,000 to museum

On March 27, Dr. Cathie Kelly president of the Preservation Association of Clark County, presented a check for $2,000 to the director of the Clark County Heritage Museum, Mark Ryzdyski, and to other county officials for the restoration of Heritage House, a 1930s Tudor Revival residence.

In 1987, PACC sponsored the first Old Fashioned Christmas Party at the museum as a fundraiser for the house. In recent years they have joined forces with the county and the event is now one of the best-attended functions at the Clark County Heritage Museum.

The proceeds of the annual party and a donation from PACC will be used for interior repairs and other work required before the house can be opened to the public.

Although not a mansion by today's standards, the large house that once stood on the site now occupied by a parking lot across from the high school on 7th Street is an excellent example of the architectural diversity of early Las Vegas, a spokesman said.

To many people, Las Vegas appears to be a late 20th century city that sprang up overnight. But behind the flash of neon and the fictions of the hotels and casinos there is a real city.

Las Vegas, as we know it today, was born in 1905 with the auction of the parcels of Clark's original townsite. In less than 30 years a tent city evolved into a full-fledged, but small American town complete with government and professional buildings, schools, churches, homes, businesses and a hospital.

The downtown area is a mosaic of architectural styles current in the United States during this period. High styles, such as Classical Revival and Art Deco, intermingle easily with the vernacular from the modest bungalows constructed for the early railroad workers to the Tudor Revival and mission-style homes of the more affluent. These buildings remain as testimony to the history of the city before the gaming industry changed the complexion of the Las Vegas valley.

The mission of PACC, a private non-profit organization, is to identify historical structures and sites and to encourage their preservation through the education of the community and the public at large.

On May 14, PACC and the Historic Preservation Commission of the city of Las Vegas will co-sponsor a block party to celebrate the 95th birthday of the city in front of the former Las Vegas High School to kick off National Historic Preservation Week.

On Wednesday May 17, Dr. John Hohmann, who is conducting the archaeology at the Old Fort, will report on the new discoveries at the Lied Museum as part of PACC's annual meeting. Details about times for both events will be announced in the near future.

PACC also publishes a quarterly newsletter and a brochure, "Guide to Historic Las Vegas" which is currently out-of-print.

For membership and other information contact PACC at P.O. Box 96686, Las Vegas, NV 89193-6686.

Bob Miller and his family and Elaine Wynn of Mirage Resorts. President Clinton, Elizabeth Taylor, Clint Eastwood, Kevin Costner, Leroy Neiman and others have contributed autographed pictures or memorabilia.

The live auction will include works by Robert Bateman, Erte, Mark Kostabi, Peter Max, Otsuka, Remington, Renoir and Colleen Ross. Art will be on display from April 15-21 at DIVA Art Group, 3200 Polaris Ave., Suite 4. Call 227-3342 for a preview appointment.

The "Color Your Cake and Eat It Too" luncheon, cake auction and raffle will be held from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Friday, April 21 in the Las Vegas Hilton Grand Ballroom. Tickets for the luncheon are $15; $150 for a table of 10.

Applications for entering the cake auction can be picked up at the foundation office, 3196 S. Maryland Pkwy, Tower IV, Suite 307. The entry fee is $5; prizes will be awarded in several decorating categories.

During the "Color Out," hair stylists will donate $1 for each hair coloring and ask customers to donate the same. Manicurists will donate 50 cents for each polish and ask customers to do the same.

Prizes, including trips and gift certificates from major suppliers, will be awarded to the salon, stylist and manicurist donating the most money. Participating salons include Studio 302, 2235 E. Flamingo Road, and Diva Hair Salon, 3159 W. Tompkins. Salons or individual stylists or manicurists interested in participating should call the Foundation.

The Foundation operates two women, infants and children's clinics (WIC) in Clark County in conjunction with the Nevada State Health Division. WIC is an educational and nutritional supplement program for mothers and infants.

Other programs include CPR education and forums ranging from pre-natal nutrition to teaching how to care for children who are physically or mentally challenged.

Local therapist's book published

"Old Counselors Never Retire, They Can't Just Stop Caring," Barbara Dan says about her husband of 36 years, John Dan, a licensed marriage and family therapist who has spent the last 26 years serving the needs of local residents.

"When John retired from the state two and a half years ago, I thought we'd finally get to do all those delightful things other retirees do, like travel, hang out together, and visit grandkids." Barbara recalls. "Boy, was I ever wrong!"

Not long after leaving Southern Nevada Adult Mental Health Services in 1992, where for the last five years of his tenure he directed Henderson Counseling Services on E. Lake Mead Blvd., he began seeing new clients at two private agencies, as well as slipping in an occasional former client at a different location.

And while doing all this, he wrote "Power to Change," which sums up the ideas and insights that have made him one of the most sought after therapists in Las Vegas. Many colleagues have acknowledged that the book has made a major contribution to the field by demonstrating important areas of agreement between behavioral science and Christian theology.

"They share many of the same views about human nature, its trinitarian make-up, and the hang-ups and flaws that immobilize and prevent healthy living," Dan said.

An ordained American Baptist minister, Dan has served in a number of church-related ministries before focusing on counseling in clinical and mental health settings.

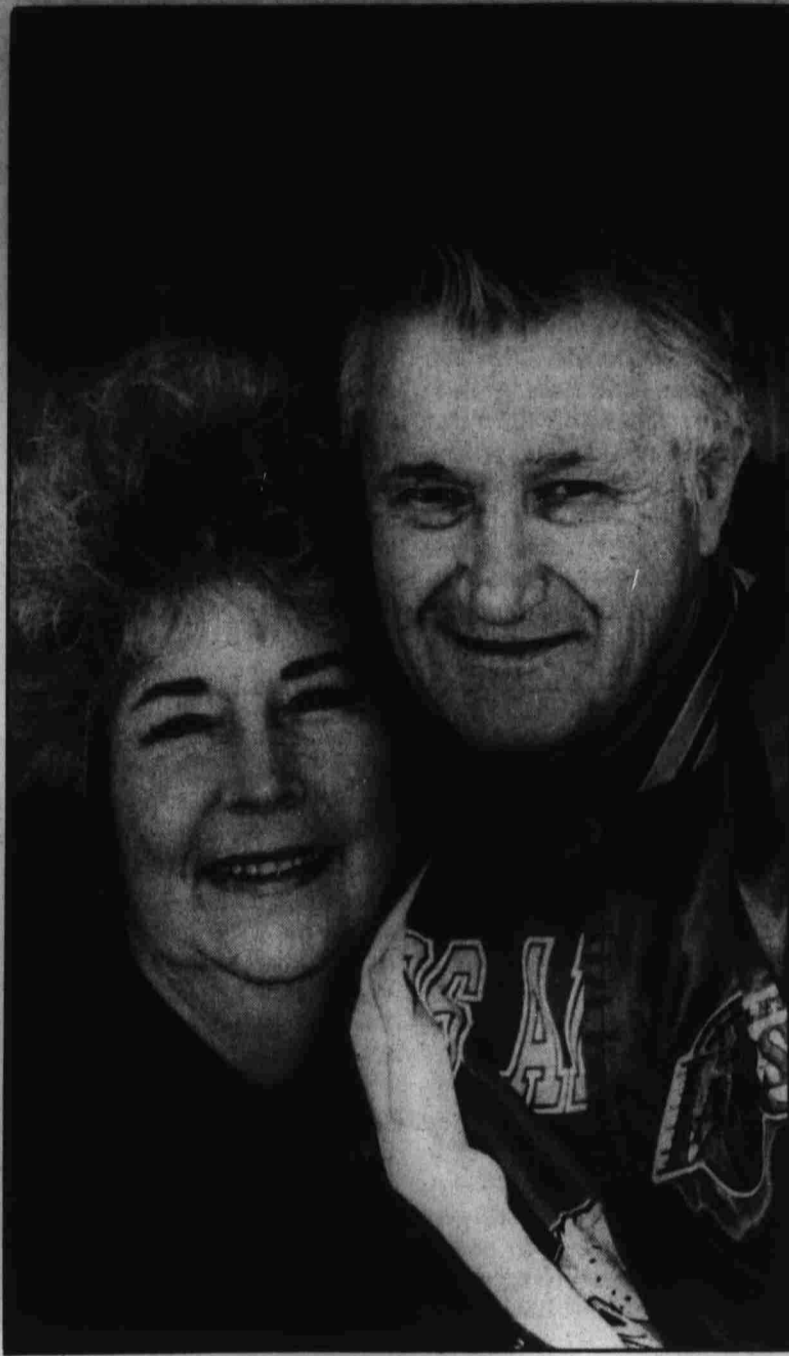

Prior to coming to Las Vegas, he served as a prison chaplain in the Los Angeles County Jail system and two years as chaplain of the Salvation Army's alcoholic rehabilitation center in Van Nuys, Calif.

He has pastored four churches, including four years during the late '60s at Homesite Baptist Church, and more recently 15 months as interim pastor at Faith Baptist Church in North Las Vegas. This last he did while also holding down a full-time counseling position at the Holman Agency.

Currently he's working part-time in the Mental Health Department at St. Rose Dominican Hospital in Henderson. He has also been invited to run workshops for Christian pastors in Tanzania and Romania this summer.

"John was so busy," his wife confides, "that I had to shelve my own plans, which included a cottage on the Oregon coast and writing the Great American Novel."

Instrumental in starting two writers' organizations in Las Vegas, Barbara Dan's scheme won't seem so outlandish to other local writer friends. Writing has been in her blood since her first cartoon commercial for coffee came out in an ad for the Ladies Home Journal.

Week highlights cancer awareness for minorities

In conjunction with National Minority Cancer Awareness Week, April 16-22, Sunrise Hospital and Medical Center will offer free information to increase awareness and knowledge of cancer within minority communities.

An educational resource center will be available from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. in the main lobby of the hospital, 3186 S. Maryland Pkwy. The resource center will include literature on early detection of specific types of cancer, good nutrition, survivorship issues, stopping smoking and other tobacco-related issues, and preventative care information.

Nurses and other oncology personnel will be available to answer questions. For information, call 731-8788.

"The goal of National Minority Cancer Awareness Week is to send important messages about cancer prevention and detection to minority communities which continue to have disproportionately high cancer incidence and mortality rates," said Marla Weber, oncology program coordinator at Sunrise Hospital.

Specific NMCWA objectives include raising awareness among African-Americans, Hispanics, Asian-Americans and Native Americans regarding:

- Early detection and up-to-date treatment of breast cancer, especially for women aged 50 and over;

- Early detection in the successful treatment of cervical cancer;

- Avoiding tobacco use and being aware of the health risks smoking poses to individuals and their families; and

- Making healthier food choices and modifying traditional foods for high fiber and low fat content.

According to the American Cancer Society, 120,000 African-Americans will be diagnosed with cancer in 1995. Other minorities will account for 35,000 cases. In Nevada, nearly 7,000 new cancer cases will be reported; approximately 8% of those patients will be African-American.

The incidence rate is higher for African-Americans than Caucasians at 439 per 100,000 as compared to 406 per 100,000. Additionally, the African-American mortality rate is higher and survival rate is lower than those of Caucasians.

The mortality rate differential is 228 per 100,000 compared to 170 per 100,000, and the survival rate differential is 34% compared to 55%, respectively.

Weber said the lower African-American survival rate is mainly due to late diagnosis.

New York Life gives $10,000 to UNLV

New York Life Insurance Company has contributed $10,000 to the UNLV music department for its assistance in developing a musical piece for the company's 150th anniversary celebration this year.

Two UNLV music students won prizes in a musical composition competition sponsored by the company.

The celebration will culminate with a star-studded gala at Madison Square Garden for its agents and employees in July.

New York Life contacted eight leading music schools to offer them the opportunity to prepare a thematic musical segment for a "Sesquicentennial Suite" to be performed live.

The "Sesquicentennial Suite" is an original musical composition consisting of eight movements, each representing a New York Life value.

Jie Bu, a graduate student studying composition at UNLV, won $1,000 and a trip to the celebration in New York for his contribution to the suite. He based his movement on the New York Life's value of personal and professional growth.

Eric Whitacre, a UNLV senior music major, won the $500 second place in the composition competition.

"I'm honored to present this contribution to Dr. Isabelle Emerson, chair of the UNLV music department," said John Habermehl, managing partner of New York Life's Las Vegas general office. "By drawing on the outstanding creative talent of the department, our 150th anniversary will be that much more special."

Other schools that contributed music for the suite include UCLA (accountability), Middle Tennessee State University at Murfreesboro (have fun), the University of Indiana (teamwork), Carnegie Mellon University (innovation), the Manhattan School of Music (openness/trust), the Juilliard School (sense of urgency), and the Royal Academy of Music in London (integrity).

Smokey the Bear celebration at UNLV

An exhibition celebrating the 50th birthday of Smokey the Bear will be on display at UNLV's Marjorie Barrick Museum of Natural History from March 17 through April 29.

"Happy Birthday, Smokey" features 50 years of memorabilia connected with the bear, one of America's best-known and best-loved characters. Displays will include posters, songs, radio spots, television ads, comic books, coloring books, and Smokey teddy bears.

More than a nostalgic look, hands-on, interactive displays will inform people about the importance of forests in today's world and explain the impact of accidental forest fires on both people and wildlife.

Since 1944, Smokey has gently asked the public to prevent accidental wildfires and has reminded people of their responsibility to protect forests for future generations.

The campaign has been an unqualified success. Accidental wildfires caused by humans have been reduced by half since the campaign began, even though 14 times as many people visit forests today as in the 1940s.

While 95% of adults and 85% of children ages 8 to 12 recognize Smokey's timeless message "Only YOU can prevent forest fires," few know his unique history.

In 1942, shells launched by a Japanese submarine landed near a forest in Southern California, bringing national attention to the importance of fire prevention. Because nine out of 10 forest fires were caused by people, the U.S. Forest Service worked with the Wartime Advertising Council to develop Smokey.

Over the years, Smokey has visited millions of school children and has starred in his own Saturday morning cartoon show. He has been joined by celebrities including Norman Rockwell, John Wayne, Raymond Burr, Red Skelton, Ella Fitzgerald, and Ray Charles.

His friends, most notably Woodsy Owl, will be introduced in the exhibit. Woodsy, with his slogan "Give a Hoot, Don't Pollute," was created in 1970 by the Forest Service to promote the wise use of the environment.

The exhibit is organized and circulated by International Cultural Communications through a cooperative agreement with the Forest Service. It was designed by the Fernbank Museum of Natural History in Atlanta and curated by Jean Pablo, president of Historic Preservation Associates.

The UNLV presentation is sponsored in cooperation with the Spring Mountains National Recreation Area Toiyabe National Forest.

The Marjorie Barrick Museum of Natural History is open 8 a.m.-4:45 p.m. Monday through Friday and 10 a.m.-2 p.m.

Underwriters donate to education foundation

The Southern Nevada Association of Life Underwriters recently donated the proceeds from their bowling tournament to the Clark County Public Education Foundation in support of "Library Power!"

According to Dennis Cournoyer, SNALU president of this is the second year that the association members have participated in a fund-raising project that benefits the Public Education Foundation specifically in the area of books for school libraries.

"Members of SNALU feel very strongly about community participation and we can think of no better community service than that being done by and through the Clark County Public Education Foundation," Cournoyer said.

Harry E. Hinderliter, III, foundation treasurer, commented: "We deeply appreciate the contribution of SNALU toward our Library Power program. Every dollar that is donated to the Public Education Foundation, like these dollars, go for materials, books, and programs within the District that are not funded by tax supported dollars."

For more information about the activities of the Clark County Public Education Foundation, call Judi K. Steele, 799-1042.

Easter is God's way of saying 'Amen'

Finally the other disciple, John, who had reached the tomb first, also went inside. He saw and believed. They still did not understand from Scriptures that Jesus had to rise from the dead. (John 20:8-9)

Every prayer ends with an Amen! Many hymns end with a hearty Amen! Every sermon ends with an Amen! And perhaps, in some churches, is interspersed with more than a few Amens! It is a cry of certainty. It is an expression of hope. For people subjected to overly long-winded preachers, it is a yelp of joy that he's kicked a dead dog long enough and now is willing to sit down. "Yea, yea, so shall it be!" God has heard my prayer and will answer it. God has listened to my song and received it favorably. We believe this sermon preached from the Bible is the true exposition of God's will for us. Amen!

He had commissioned his Son, Jesus, to be his spokesman to the world, revealing most clearly the only way to heaven—faith in him for complete forgiveness of sins and the righteousness God demanded in his law. He had punished his Son, Jesus, on the cross by pouring out all the torments of hell on Jesus as our Savior hung from that horrible tree those terrible hours on the Friday we now call Good.

Was that the end of God's plan of salvation? Had Jesus really gotten rid of the sin of the world? Was the holy and just God now reconciled to the world? Listen for the Amen.

John heard it loud and clear in the empty tomb of Jesus. The women had told them angels appeared to them and told them Jesus had risen from the dead.

John and Peter ran all the way to the cemetery. It was true! The tomb was empty. But no grave robbers had been at work. No thieves would have unwound the burial clothing and then neatly folded it all up again. The soldiers hadn't taken Jesus—you could still see Pilate's seal, now broken, on the threshold of the tomb. They were commanded to make sure Jesus' body stayed in the tomb. The disciples hadn't stolen the body.

They were so discombobulated by their fear of arrest that they didn't even show their faces outside. Jesus had risen! Jesus had won the victory over death! Jesus had offered the one and only perfect sacrifice for sin to God the Father and the Father had accepted that offering and raised his Son back to life again. John didn't even have to page through the Bible to look at all the passages in the Old Testament which predicted Jesus the Christ would rise from the dead. John could

LV brings the 'Big Apple' to town

Executives of MGM Grand, Inc. and Primadonna Resorts, Inc. officially broke ground last week for the $350 million New York New York Hotel and Casino. Former New York Mayor Ed Koch made a special appearance to emcee the event.

Expected to open in late 1996 on the Las Vegas strip at the northwest corner of Tropicana and Las Vegas Blvd., the 2,119-room property will recreate traditional New York City landmarks and attractions.

It will include a towering 150-foot-tall Statue of Liberty, which will greet visitors at the pedestrian walkways, a Coney Island "Cyclone"-styled roller coaster traveling around the resort, and the food, atmosphere and spirit for which New York City is best known.

The port-cochere entrance will replicate the New York Public Library with its distinguished beaux-arts design of exposed metal and glass-domed construction, and a 300-foot-long Brooklyn Bridge will serve as the street level sidewalk entrance to the casino.

New York New York will feature a classical Manhattan skyline with 10 high-rise buildings housing guest rooms and suites. The interconnected architectural icon structures will be approximately one-third the actual New York City size.

The tallest skyscraper will be the structure replicating the Empire State Building at 525 feet, 48 stories, making the new resort the tallest in Las Vegas.

"The structures and themes of New York New York represent the diverse architectural history of the great city of New York," said Robert R. Maxey, president and CEO of MGM Grand, Inc.

and chairman of the board of New York New York Resorts, Inc.

"We will recreate the best of New York City on the Las Vegas Strip and give our visitors a powerful visual experience that they won't soon forget," he said.

"After countless hours of research—literally walking the streets of New York City, tasting the food, seeing the sights, reviewing the history and holding on while riding in the back seat of a New York cab, we have created the best of the Big Apple, a property that every New Yorker will be proud of," said Gary E. Primm, chairman and CEO, Primadonna Resorts, Inc. and president and CEO of New York New York Resorts, Inc.

Other buildings will include 55 Water Tower, Century Building, Lever House Soap Company, Municipal Building, Seagram's Building, AT&T Building with its famous grandfather clock face, Chrysler Building and CBS Building.

The resort's low-rise buildings, surrounding the tower hotel from street level, will also depict the city's colorful architecture with the recreation of such landmarks as Radio City Music Hall, The Guggenheim Museum, The New York Botanical Gardens, the Museum of Modern Art, the Former U.S. Customs House, the Soldiers & Sailors Monument and the Haughwout Retail Store.

Public areas totalling 298,664 square feet, including casino and food/beverage, retail and entertainment will feature 35-foot ceilings.

Guests will be greeted in the registration area with a large diorama of the Manhattan night skyline and an animated New York City subway system.

SERMON: Say 'Amen'

tell Jesus had risen just by looking into the empty tomb.

Amen!
Each one of us has our prayers to pray and our hymns to sing. Each one of us has our sermons to preach. We're not all behind a pulpit, but we certainly are behind the desk we work at, behind the wheel of the truck we drive, behind the front door we call our own. The way we live is our sermon. The thoughts we think are often our prayers. The satisfaction we feel are the hymns we give to God in the cathedral of our heart.

I don't know what your personal worship schedule is, but I know what is going on in my heart. I see people going in for heart surgery and I worry that I am overweight and eat too much fatty foods. I joke that it won't happen to me, because grimly I think it will rather be one big blow-out done before the paramedics get there. Will my God really bring me back to life again at the Last Day and put this shattered body I call my own together again?

Jesus resurrection says Amen! God will.

I see the growth of my family and my kids reading like crazy—even their beginner's Bible (without me, telling them to!). Will God work with me in this great endeavor, raising the next generation to be loving and kind, faithful and good?

Jesus resurrection says Amen! God will.

I remember all the times I have not practiced what I've preached. Will God reject me as a hypocrite, even though I come to him and tell him the deeds I now hate and cling to Jesus' cross for forgiveness? Will he continue to call me his own? Jesus' resurrection says Amen!

I have looked into Jesus' empty tomb and believe. Take a look for yourself and see God's Amen!

Elachi named Nevada medal winner by governor

Gov. Bob Miller announced recently that Dr. Charles Elachi will receive the Desert Research Institute's 1995 Nevada Medal on April 26 at the Nevada Medal Awards dinner at the Reno Hilton.

The medal and a $5,000 prize are sponsored by shareholders of Nevada Bell, a Pacific Telesis Company.

Elachi, the director for Space and Earth Science at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., is NASA's leading scientist in the development of space-based radar technology for analyzing Earth and other planets.

"Each year it is a privilege for me to announce the winner of the Nevada Medal," said Miller. "In an increasingly competitive world, we need to do all we can to support and recognize top-level scientific work. It is with great pride that the State of Nevada is associated with advancing science and technology."

The Nevada Medal activities include a lecture, "Seeing the Unseen: Radar Imaging from Space," to be presented April 25 at UNLV and April 26 at UNR.

Elachi is NASA's team leader for space imaging radar and synthetic aperture radar technologies which produced thousands of breathtaking images during Earth-mapping shuttle flights last March and October.

The volume of data acquired in the shuttle flights is so immense that another generation of scientists will be needed to fully exhaust the information.

Environmental information obtained by recent shuttle flights is already in use by scientists at DRI and at universities and research organizations worldwide. It is also finding valuable application by natural resource managers and land use planners. Archaeologists have used imagery to find what are believed to be the ruins of the fabled lost city of Ubar under the sands of Sahara Desert.

The 1995 Nevada Medalist is also the radar team leader for the Cassini mission to Saturn and is a member of the science team for the Magellan Project, which radar-mapped the surface of Venus.

Elachi has been at JPL since he received his Ph.D. in Electrical Sciences at the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena, Calif. in 1971.

He has also earned three masters degrees (electrical science, geology, and business administration) and initially received the equivalent of dual bachelors degrees in physics and engineering from the University of Grenoble in France.

Among many other honors and accomplishments, he is a member of the National Academy of Engineering, a Fellow of the Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers, holds four patents for his work and has authored more than 200 publications, including six books.

FHP Health Care celebrates anniversary

FHP Health Care, the nation's third largest health maintenance organization, is celebrating its third year serving the health care needs of Nevada residents.

"The success of the Nevada Region has been the result of team effort," says Lyle Luman, president of FHP's Nevada Region. "When we opened our doors in Southern Nevada on April 1, 1992, we had 20 employees and no members. Today, we have 328 employees and more than 44,000 members across the state."

The HMO also provides Worker's Compensation coverage to more than 7,000 companies in Clark and Washoe Counties. With the acquisition of CDS of Nevada, FHP now provides third party administration for more than 100,000 lives throughout the state.

It provides quality, cost-effective health care by emphasizing prevention, and attributes its growth in Nevada to the efforts of employers, seniors and individuals to control their rising health care costs.

According to Luman, "Our low co-payments encourage members to make routine doctor visits, so that we are able to detect potential health problems and prevent them from becoming costly."

A strong commitment to health education is also key to controlling escalating medical costs. "FHP health education classes teach members how to become effective partners in managing their physical and emotional health," says Luman.

Health education classes cover topics including weight management, stress reduction and diabetes control, plus health management seminars on issues such as how to choose a doctor.

FHP provides its members with health care through contractual arrangements with private physicians and hospitals, known as independent practice associations and through FHP Medical Centers. It contracts with more than 600 independent physicians, in Northern and Southern Nevada, including primary care physicians and specialists.

The organization also has health care agreements with Valley Hospital Medical Center, University Medical Center, Desert Springs Hospital, St. Rose Dominican Hospital, Desert Community Hospital (Needles, Calif.) and St. Mary's Regional Medical Center (Reno).

The company's cost-effective, prevention-oriented health care was originated by Dr. Robert Gumbiner, who in 1961 converted his California medical practice to a pre-paid health care program serving 2,000 members.

Founded in 1961, FHP is a diversified health services company headquartered in Fountain Valley, Calif. Through its health maintenance organization, it serves more than 1.7 million members in 11 states and Guam. It is the nation's third largest HMO, and one of the largest Medicare risk contractors.

FHP, Inc. is a wholly-owned subsidiary of FHP International Corporation.

LAST WORDS

DEAR DEBBIE

DEBORAH WHITE

Dear Debbie: I am in love with a guy. We have been together for three years now. He acts like he loves me a whole lot. We are even considering marriage in August. Do you think there is a chance eventually he will break my heart?

I love him an awful lot, and don't want to get hurt by him. Do you think I'm in the clear of all that, or should I be worried?

WOMAN IN LOVE

Dear Woman in Love: It's hard for me to give you advice without knowing any details. But in general, a relationship is based on mutual trust. If you suspect him, you'll always look for signs there's something wrong and it will ruin your relationship. Nobody likes to be treated like they're dishonest and untrustworthy.

If this man is treating you with respect and wants to make a commitment, and you're just afraid of the emotional risk, there's nothing more you can do. There are no guarantees. Trust your instincts. If you're not sure of him, don't marry him until you are. Have the courage to take a chance on living.

It's worth it.

Dear Debbie: My new next-door neighbor appears to have mental or emotional problems. Sometimes she's friendly and chatty. Other times she'll run to her car with her head down trying to avoid any interaction.

Her husband and kids are always friendly, but they don't seem to want more than a "hello" relationship.

We're a close block. Most of the couples see each other socially. I don't want to leave them out, but I've been reluctant to invite them to join us because of her behavior. Am I being overly cautious?

CONCERNED NEIGHBOR

Dear Concerned Neighbor: You have several options. If they get friendlier, include them in the neighborhood social club. If not, don't. Or, the next time she's in a friendly mood, tell her about the socializing and ask her if she wants to be included. But if your instincts are right, be prepared for them to change their mind.

Don't make her erratic behavior a subject of gossip or speculation. Leave them alone. They have a right to privacy.

Write to Dear Debbie, P.O. Box 4328, Chicago, 111. 60680.

HOROSCOPE

LINDA BLACK

Weekly Tip: Focus on practical matters like how to pay for whatever you just agreed to do. It'll be hard to talk your friends into anything, so stay home and rest!

Aries (March 21-April 19). You may get off to a slow start but you'll be a powerhouse. Challenge your competition to a match.

Taurus (April 20-May 20). Bide your time. Don't be pressured into spending more than you can afford. You'll come into your own, as the sun goes into your sign. Don't follow an older person's whim unless it's going to work.

Gemini (May 21-June 21). Make the most of your time. This is your best chance to make inroads with a social group, and eyes at an attractive antagonist. Your work should be relatively easy, so kick it into overdrive!

Cancer (June 22-July 22). A strongly opinionated boss could be downright annoying unless, of course, you agree. If you can hold your temper you may be vindicated by the circumstances.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22). You should feel like a million bucks. And you may feel like you owe somebody about that much! Don't incur too much debt or make promises you can't keep.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Your luck changes for the better and everything seems to fall into place easily. Fix stuff to save money. It might even be fun!

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You may notice an intrusion upon your privacy. Financial difficulties could rear their ugly heads, adding to your woes. Ask your partner for moral support.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Don't let an overexuberant co-worker push you into buying something you can't afford. Regain control of the situation, and of your budget. Stick to your position. You might as well; everybody else will be sticking to theirs!

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You should feel on top of the world. Your luck's great, so push for what you want! Get as much as possible accomplished. You may also notice the bills are starting to come in!

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Meet with compatriots and set your course. Creativity counts. Launch new money-making projects. Go shopping for an expensive technical toy and find the best deal.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Don't tangle with a stubborn older person just do as you're told. Do your entertaining at home, to keep expenses down.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20). Don't go shopping for books. You'll spend way too much on impulse purchases. Heed the advice of an older friend and get serious.

If You're Having a Birthday This Week: Be a little cautious this year; you're so powerful you could do damage! Travel is easy, but romance requires a tender touch.

Poisonous prophecies a dining nightmare

What a nightmare!

It all began when husband-son suggested that we go out to dinner.

"Great!" I said. "I feel like Italian. Fettuccine Alfredo would hit the spot."

"I can't believe my ears!" said my husband. He rolled his eyes and added, "Picture little globules of fat coursing through your arteries and I think you'll change your mind."

"Okay. Let's go Mexican. A taco or two couldn't hurt anybody." You guessed it. I would be risking uncertain death preceded by chest pains and protruding eyeballs if I ventured into taco land.

"How about that cute little French restaurant down the street?" I asked. "Believe me, the French would never put up with dying customers."

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY

CAROLYN DRENNAN BISHOP

Well! According to Mr. Food Nag, I'd be better off diving head-first into a vat of boiling oil than dine a la French.

"I give up!" I shouted. "If that's the way you're going to be I'll be happy to schlepp down to Dino's Deli and bring home a pastrami on rye."

That did it. Deli sandwiches are the worst of the worst, I was informed. Slathers of death-dealing mayo would bring on death rattles faster than drinking rat poison.

Before I could tell Mr. Nag what he could do with his poisonous prophecies, I was jolted awake by the alarm clock. It's a good thing. I was ready to sneak out the back door for a quick trip to MacDonald's.

I wouldn't have lived through the night.

Poems sought for contest

Celestial Arts is sponsoring a free poetry contest, open to all. There are 28 prizes are offered, including a $1,000 grand prize.

"This is the first poetry contest we have ever sponsored," says Ralph Kasper, the non-profit organization's director. "Poetry is the Cinderella of the Arts, and we think our contest will help change that. Nevada has produced many fine poets over the years, and we expect many in the Henderson area will take advantage of this fine opportunity to participate."

Poems may be written on any subject, using any style. The deadline for entering is April 25.

To enter, send one poem of 21 lines or less to: Celestial Arts, 11314 Ventura Blvd., Suite 112, Studio City, CA 91604.

Words of Wisdom

As seriously as we take life, it should be remembered that life is not a permanent state of affairs.

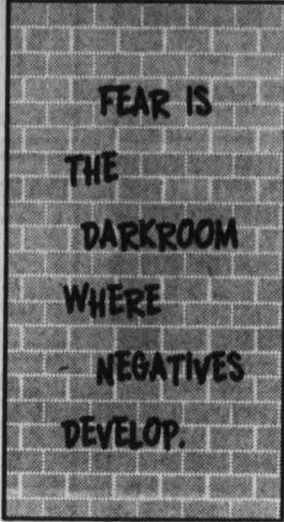

Listening is an art that we should all strive toward.

Obligation creates more enemies than friends.

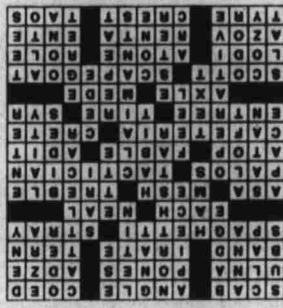

Genius may be the creation, but it is labor that provides the end result.

Character is our own opinion, while reputation is what others think.

MAGICWORD

HOW TO PLAY: Read the list of words. Look at the puzzle. You'll find these words in all directions—horizontally, vertically, diagonally, backwards. Draw a circle around each letter of a word found in the puzzle, then strike it off the list. Circling it will show a letter has been used but will leave it visible should it also form part of another word. Find the big words first. When letters of all listed words are circled, you'll have the given number of letters left over. They'll spell out your MAGICWORD.
