Diane Dietrich was one of my better students at Basic High School almost 40 years ago. Not only was she a good student, she was also a good person who showed signs of maturity beyond her years. After high school, she joined the Marines and her status in my eyes continued upwards.

A recent UNLV Foundation pamphlet titled "Generations" highlighted Diane who is a programmer at the University System Computing Services. She is creating two scholarship endowments through her estate plan after working at UNLV for 18 years. Typical of Diane, she is still thinking about the needs of other people.

Half of the estate given will be named after her parents, Dorothy R. and Robert W. Dietrich, and will provide a scholarship for adults returning to school to become teachers. Seeking education has always been a Dietrich family tradition.

The other half of her estate plan again shows the values she demonstrated back in her high school days. "Generations" relates, "in remembrance of her service in the Marine Corps, the Diane R. Dietrich Scholarship will benefit former Marines who enter UNLV to earn degrees. 'Once you are a Marine, you're always a Marine,' Dietrich said. 'I just wanted to do something to help young Leathernecks who want to go back to school.'"

Tomorrow, more than two dozen Clark County high school seniors will be on the University of Nevada campus in Reno. They will be meeting the students, faculty and staff and tour the campus. The Southerners will also participate in a panel discussion in the afternoon.

The students, all eligible to enter the University after graduation, are in Reno under the auspices of Nevada Bound. Other groups will go there Feb. 26 and March 5 and high school counselors should have information about the trips.

The Nevada Bound program gives seniors the following advice:

Wear your walking shoes and a jacket for your campus tour (all 200 acres). You'll tour the residence halls and classrooms, meet with a university student who will answer any questions you might have about college and have time to explore the campus on your

CUT! Council stops action on studio

Developer Doris Keating's dream of turning Henderson into another Hollywood suffered a near-fatal blow Tuesday night as Councilman Amanda Cyphers told Keating's attorneys "you appear to be a day late and thousands of dollars short."

That was the common theme behind the Council's decision to deny an extension of time for developing 85 acres of the Wagon Wheel Industrial Park into a $200 million film production studio.

The project was to be developed in six stages, each requiring certain deadlines of construction and permits to be met. Some of the initial deadlines have already failed to be met, leaving the Council to question their finances and organization of the project.

The Council voted 3-2 against the extension of time for the additional phases. Councilmen David Wood and Jack Clark dissented.

"What I'm troubled by is, when we sold the applicant the land, the agreement was that we work together to line out procedure and a time line," Mayor Jim Gibson told studio officials and more than 100 residents in attendance. "And we have blown right passed these critical dates. 'After the course of conduct ...

it comes down to have we seen evidence of good faith to develop the property?" Gibson said.

Studio officials claimed finances are not a question and that they were stung by a News article earlier this week which reported they were in default of $100,000, a down payment for a second parcel for development which was due to the city on November 1998.

Addressing the Council, Assistant City Attorney Andy

Urban said that was one of two breaches in the purchase agreement between the city and Black Mountain Studios.

Paul Larsen, an attorney representing the studio, said they had never received "a formal" notice of the default. However, the News did seek reasons for the default last week from Tony

Following the December lay-offs at Titanium Metals Corp., which left more than 100 people unemployed, The Reserve helped reduce the blow to many of those families during the holiday season.

They organized a Christmas party for the Steel Workers Union Local 4856, providing gifts for many of the families.

"They geared the gifts to the kids' ages. I remember at the party a little kid opened a box of baseball cards and the look on his face was just amazing," said Dudley Beatty, financial secretary for the USWA Local 4856.

Reserve spokesperson Gillian Silver said they

Contractor's Board investigates Rhodes Homes

Chuck N. Baker
News Staff

The State Contractor's Board may be taking action against Rhodes Homes after several complaints were filed against the homebuilder.

Although recent published statements announced that the board had fined Rhodes Homes and suspended that company's license for six months for violating sections of the Nevada Revised Statutes, the board later issued a correction notice to the Henderson Department of Building and Safety and to others who had received the erroneous declaration.

Thomas Knapp, director of investigations for the Las Vegas office of the State Contractor's Board, said, "The board did take the action they did at the public meeting," but "technically that is not correct. They [Rhodes] do not become suspended until they receive a decision and order, and that date is the date the suspension would take effect. It has not been completed by our legal staff. They have not officially been suspended ..."

Knapp confirmed that an area family had filed complaints against Rhodes, alleging violations of two state statutes. One, NRS 624.301 (4) is "willful failure to comply with terms of contract or written warranty."

The second, NRS 624.3017 (1) concerns "workmanship which is not commensurate with standards in the building or construction codes adopted by the city or country in which the work is performed."

Knapp said that in October of last year, the charge of violating terms of contract or warranty was dismissed by the board, but 15 complaint items were substantiated. The items involved dry wall repairs, proper air flow in a bathroom register and other accusations.

Knapp said the complainants, Gregg and Joyce Taylor Anderson, alleged that Rhodes representatives did not show up for scheduled appointments. But a Rhodes spokesman said the family provided only limited access to the home.

Although Knapp confirmed the Contractor's Board recently had as many as 19 pending complaints against Rhodes Homes, he said "some of those complaints have been closed, and we have opened some new ones."

Knapp said Rhodes has since requested an appearance before the board at 2 p.m. on Feb. 9 in Reno, "and the board has granted their request. So I would imagine Rhodes and their legal

High school zoning decision postponed

The Attendance Zone Advisory Commission held a meeting following the public input meeting at the Clark County School District Tuesday night.

The meeting covered two aspects of re-zoning in Henderson schools. The first part was the approval of proposed changes to existing elementary attendance zone, however, the second part of the meeting — the proposed changes in high school zoning — had the most public input but was tabled to later this week.

AZAC's follow-up meeting will be held at 6 p.m. tonight at Chaparral High School in Room 116.

The proposed changes to the zones for Kesterson, Lamping and Roberts were approved to go before the school board. The Kesterson zone will reach a southern boundary by the Henderson corporate limits and

The juggling of figures just months before the voters have their say about the future of the Boulder City library appears to be a rather haphazard approach. Furthermore, they also deserve to know that the sum they provide will actually complete the project. Or is it only the first step in a multi-phase construction plan? Will the new building require additional staff and operational funding? If so, how much? All of these questions should be answered during coming weeks and be presented to our readers for their consumption long before election day.

Watching John Elway pick the Falcons apart was exciting only during the first half of the Super Bowl. The second half became boring as he riddled their aerial defenses. And to think I used to feel sorry for him when he was a rookie quarterback getting hammered every week.

Rhodes situation leaves environmental issues teetering

D.B. Marciniak
News Staff Writer

Sometimes a person needs to take a step backward to take two steps forward. That may prove to be the case with environmental issues at Rhodes Homes' Palm City project in Henderson.

Palm City, located north of Lake Mead Drive and west of Olson Street on the edge of the Las Vegas Wash, is one of Rhodes' projects in the valley. The troubled project has been hounded by environmentalists and the state alike to assure the polluted water table is not disturbed.

Environmental groups view Rhodes Homes' troubles as a golden opportunity to solve environmental issues in the wash area. Friends of the Desert Wetlands Park said although progress has been made on getting Rhodes to deal with water issues, the possible revocation of their license may lead to a better environment for all.

"It's kind of ironic," said Larry Paulson, who is among valley residents championing water quality issues.

He said everyone thought it would be because of the environmentalists constantly arguing with the developer. Now it appears as though they have killed themselves, he said.

"Things have a funny way of working out," Paulson said.

For the past several months, he has roamed through the wash area keeping a watchful eye on the development. Any building at the site is a threat to the environment because of high levels of radiation and other chemicals in the ground water which is close to the surface.

"I never anticipated anything like this was ever going to happen," he said.

In past couple months, Paulson said, Palm City officials have begun to work in a cooperative spirit with environmentalists. Officials have met with Paulson and others to discuss what is important to preserve the area's sensitive water shed.

If new developer becomes involved in the project, they will have to face the same questions, but maybe they will be more likely to listen, he said.

The state is also concerned. "It'll present a lot more paperwork for us," said Dick Serdoz, office manager for the Las Vegas office of the Nevada Division of Environmental Protection.

The NDEP has been working with Rhodes on an application for a sub-drain system to assure ground water does not surface in the home development. The system is an important environ-representatives will be in front of the board at that time to appeal the action."

Representatives at Rhodes Homes did not return phone calls seeking comment.

Cindy Ingram, who handles public relations for Rhodes, issued a statement that said, "Rhodes has reaffirmed that no final decision has been made yet by the board."

Knapp said, "The board, rather than issue the order, wants to be as fair as possible and listen to what Rhodes has to say ... and make a decision at the Feb. 9 meeting."

But Knapp added that the board has "a lot of options" and could issue a ruling on Feb. 9 or could wait until a later date to announce its findings.

Rhodes has about one dozen subdivisions under development in the greater Las Vegas area. Dennis Smith, director of Home Builders Research Inc., confirmed that the homebuilder was ranked as the seventh largest builder in the area in 1998, registering 635 new-home sales.

Last August, Rhodes broke ground on the 598.6-acre Palm City project in Henderson north of Lake Mead Drive and west of Olsen Street. A mixed-use planned community, the project is being developed south of the Las Vegas Wash and the 3,000-acre Wetlands Park.

A golf course is in the middle of what will be about 2,277 homes. A majority of Palm City lies on the former Stewart Gravel Pit. An additional 72.5 acres for the project (located along the edge of the Sunset landfill) was obtained in a land trade with the city of Henderson. About 29.5 acres was added from Basic Management, Inc.

Yost accepts guilty plea in fatal Lake Mead boat wreck

News Staff reports

Henderson resident Michael Yost pleaded guilty of manslaughter in a boating accident in which his wife and three friends were killed on Lake Mead last spring.

Yost, 44, appeared in Mohave County Superior Court in Kingman, Ariz., Monday to accept a plea offer. In accepting the plea, he can face up to 12 years in jail. Yost will appear before the court March 3 to face sentencing.

The incident stems from a March 22, 1998, incident when the boat Yost was driving crashed into rocks near Burro Point on the Arizona side of the lake. He, his wife and three friends were returning from a trip to Hoover Dam when the boat struck ground around midnight.

His wife Camille, 41, Michael Kelly, 26 and Eugene Cason II, 27, both of Las Vegas, died after being thrown from the boat. Henderson resident Pearl Ewens, 47, died at the scene of the wreck.

National Park Service investigators alleged Yost was operating his 47-foot boat recklessly and was speeding in excess of 50 mph when his craft ran into the rocky shoreline.

In court Monday, Yost admitted to operating his boat too fast for the conditions.

Accepting the plea dismisses two aggravated assault counts and an endangerment charge. Under the plea agreement, Yost is also eligible for probation.

No one injured in Timet leak

News staff reports

A white cloud floating above Titanium Metals Corp. looked worse than it actually was following a chemical spill Monday, a spokesman said.

Monday, Clark County and Henderson fire crews responded to the Timet plant, located on county land within the city of Henderson, to investigate a small titanium tetrachloride spill.

The non-toxic spill caused no harm to workers at the plant. A white cloud hung over the plant for about 20 minutes. Officials indicate the cloud did not contain any contamination which threatens residents' health.

"They were attempting to move a titanium tetrachloride vessel when it was spilled," said Jay Silverberg, spokesperson for Timet.

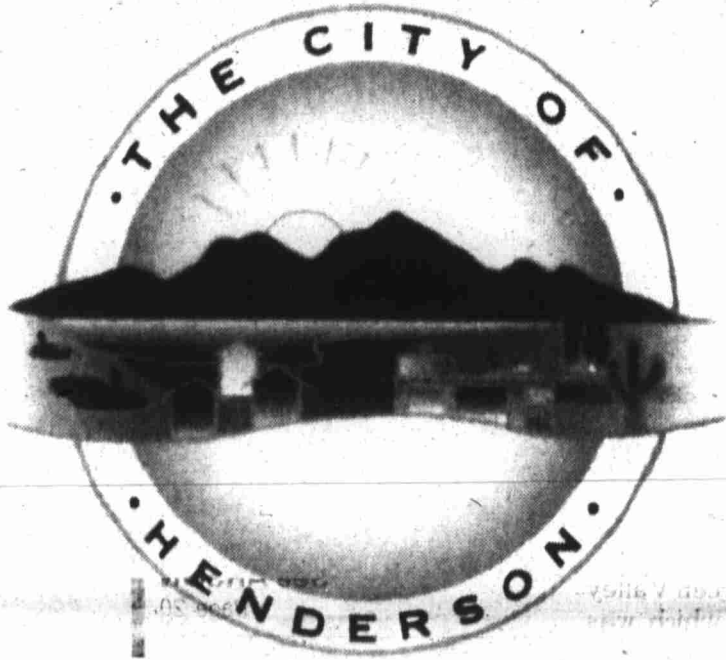

He indicated the spill occurred in the Unit 8 chlorination facility when workers were preparing to combine the tetrachloride with the titanium product. About five gallons of the liquid spilled. Tetrachloride is the basic building block in the titanium process.

The liquid is injected into the hot metal to form the metal compound.

Smoke is caused when the liquid reacts with the air.

Sentencing information in Tuesday's listing of DUI convictions was incorrect due to a transcription error. Robert M. Neal, 29, and Darrius R. Stewart, 20, were each sentenced to two days in jail.

ARSON SUSPECTED— The Albertsons at Windmill Parkway and Eastern Avenue was evacuated after a small fire broke out Monday.

Arson suspected in Albertsons fire

D.B. Marciniak
News Staff Writer

Fire officials are fearing additional strikes by an arsonist who targeted two Albertson's stores Monday and is still on the loose.

Monday morning, fire broke out in the paper towel aisle area of Albertson's stores at Green Valley Parkway and Warm Springs Road and Eastern Avenue and Windmill Parkway. Officials at the scenes indicated the blazes were intentional and ignited by an arsonist.

Henderson Police and Clark County fire investigators are seeking a suspect in the fires. The incidents are under separate investigations, although both agencies are collaborating.

"We have increased our security measures at our stores," said Jenny Enochson, a corporate spokesperson for Albertson's.

Enochson indicated the store has no leads on suspects, and it is not known if the person who set the fires is a disgruntled former employee of the store chain.

Police and county fire officials meanwhile are searching for clues.

Damage at the Green Valley Parkway store fire, which was set at about 9 a.m., was described by officials as minimal. Although smoke filled the store and appeared much more damaging at the Eastern Avenue store fire about an hour later, county fire investigators indicated that fire resulted in only $1,500 in damages.

The fires were started in the same way, however, the second one resulted in more clues, officials said.

"Usually we catch the dumb ones, and now we know some information so people will be a little more aware and looking out for her," said Mike Patterson, chief investigator for the Clark County Fire Department.

Patterson, who is investigating the incident at the Albertson's on Eastern Avenue, said the suspect is a white female between the ages of 35-40 with reddish hair and weighing about 120 pounds. He explained since the store was located within Clark County's jurisdiction, they are handling their own investigation. The agency, however, is collaborating with Henderson officials to share in-

Parents give AZAC another earful about zoning concerns

Eric Tischler
News Staff Writer

The Attendance Zone Advisory Commission held a public input meeting on Tuesday night at the Clark County School District building to receive input from parents, students and educators on the re-zoning of Henderson high schools. The AZAC members patiently listened as several irate parents lined up to speak their piece.

Due to the number of parents who came to voice their concerns, the AZAC committee granted only 30 seconds per speaker and most brought up a proposed change for the 1999-2000 school year.

Dusty Dickens of the CCSD's zoning office outlined the high school attendance zones and the proposed changes. She said two significant changes will affect Green Valley High School. The first would take a section north of the high school and re-zone it to Basic and the second would take a section south of high school and re-zone it to Foothill. The latter proposal brought the most fire.

Under the alternative zoning map, the residents of Emerald Valley and Castle Ridge communities will be rezoned to the new high school.

Both communities are located between Stephanie Street and Gibson Road on the east and west sides, and Warm Springs Road and American Pacific Drive on the north and south. Both neighborhoods are within one mile of GVHS and parents questioned the logic of busing their students to Foothill when they can already walk to their current high school.

Several parents said they bought their homes in the Emerald Valley and Castle Ridge communities specifically so their children can remain at GVHS.

One resident of Emerald Valley said his daughter can see GVHS from her bedroom window and it doesn't make any sense to bus children up to eight miles to Foothill. He suggested making American Pacific Drive the south boundary for GVHS because everything on the southern side of the street is an industrial area with no family housing.

"Any school district should be aware of its spending and the costs of running a bus to Foothill will add more financial strains to the district," he said.

One parent said that children of two-income families will miss out on extra-curricular activities by being re-zoned to Foothill because their time will be spent traveling longer distances to school.

"The simple argument is that both my wife and I work and my children can walk to school so they can participate in school activities," he said.

Lauren Longmire, liaison between AZAC and the transportation department, said it will be unfair to children to bus them long distances when they can walk to school.

Another parent of Emerald Valley noted it is unfair for her daughter to have to get up at 5 a.m. to be bused eight miles to Foothill to attend an early-bird class when she can walk two blocks to school.

A student affected by the proposed alternative said he wrestles on the GVHS team and won't be able to participate at the Foothill school due to the length of practices.

A parent of Emerald Valley cited the CCSD's Regulation 7111 that says, "Proximity of schools to where students live with a preference to students living closest to the school."

Mary Ann Cluff, a representative of 197 families who have children in Silverado, Green Valley and Basic, said the current attendance zone map will help alleviate high school overcrowding and she asked the commission to endorse the approved attendance map.

Those in favor of the proposed changes said the GVHS zone should be left untouched because the area has already seen its full growth and the issue shouldn't have to be revisited every year.

Parents affected by the proposed zoning changes in the Basic High area also voiced their concerns.

Marcia Rose, a parent of a Basic High student, said she would like the school district to admit that Foothill was built in the wrong location and the brunt of the zoning issue, not just Basic High, should be fairly distributed throughout all Henderson high schools.

Another Basic High parent with a custom home near the high school said he always stressed academic performance to his children and the proposed changes will destroy the community at Basic High.

Dickens reminded the parents of the decision the board reached on Jan. 14 that gives options for freshman and sophomore students to have the choice to be moved to the new school, however, the decision is not inclusive to siblings.

The board added a stipulation for students who opt to be moved will not be provided transportation to the new school and parents will have two weeks to notify administration officials whether or not they will want their children re-zoned.

Due to the number of concerned parents, another AZAC meeting will be held tonight at 6 p.m. at Chaparral High School in Room 116.

a northern boundary line at Warm Springs Road. Lamping's zone has been extended west of Lake Mead but shortened at east side by Pago Pago. The Roberts zone's western boundary has been extended to I-215.

Parent's reactions from the public input meeting held earlier in the evening continued into the AZAC meeting. The issue of busing Emerald Valley and Castle Ridge students to Foothill was addressed due to the two community's proximity to Green Valley High School.

Lauren Longmire, liaison between AZAC and the transportation department, pleaded to keep these communities zoned for GVHS.

AZAC member Colleen Hutchinson said that about 300 more students will enter the school district from the Emerald Valley and Castle Ridge areas once the areas finish building and GVHS can't handle any more students. She suggested to make Trail Canyon Road, between Stephanie and Gibson, the southern boundary for the GVHS zone.

"The truth is there is no good proposal," AZAC member Joyce Seegmiller said. "Unfortunately, somebody has to move but no matter who we move, there will always be somebody who will not be satisfied."

"When we look at these numbers for high school enrollment, we are very aware that every number are students and that their futures are in our hands," she said.

Stephen Rose, a parent of a Basic student, had his frustrations erupt and he blurted out that no matter what happens

Basic needs to be replenished. Before making a vote, Hutchinson moved to postpone a decision to investigate the Emerald Valley and Castle Ridge areas.

Q & A with The Reserve

Editor's Note: "Corporate obligations" prevented The Reserve's general manager Angie Baker from scheduling an interview with the News, a spokesman said. Baker and Gillian Silver, Ameristar's corporate director of public relations, however, responded in writing to questions faxed by the News.

Question: How has the first year gone?

Response: The Las Vegas Valley is, without a doubt, gaming's toughest market. We expected this: What we didn't anticipate was the growth of the Boulder Strip. That's been encouraging news but it also sends the message that we need to work harder at standing apart from our competitors.

Our parent company, Ameristar Casinos, is accustomed to being a popular entertainment option in each of the communities we serve. We strive toward this end while facing tough competition.

It is no secret that it's harder to make a mark in this valley than anywhere else. We have to continue adjusting and refining The Reserve to make it the best it can be.

The Reserve is an outstanding facility. It has a distinctive, fully themed approach and makes an impression unique among local casinos. We're immensely proud of it.

Has it met expectations?

In terms of performance, hotel occupancy has been strong and has, in fact, met our initial projections. As for the casino, our revenues are continuing to increase. We have a strategic plan and are making progress.

We have a number of programs, such as our highest payouts on video poker campaign, which offers customers the best value for the gaming dollar.

What changes, modifications or new events are you planning in the coming year?

In the year ahead, The Reserve will be introducing much-needed meeting space. We'll also be enhancing our restaurant offerings and providing some express food options.

What else does this mean for Reserve visitors? Well, we are continuing our aggressive video poker strategy and it is providing impressive results. Additionally, we have the "Best Cash-Back Deal on the Boulder Strip," and the attractive $1,000 bonus on a royal flush program. We are continuing to refine our strategies to give our guests the best gaming option in the area.

What new promotions are anticipated?

We are continuing to refine our strategy to provide guests with the best gaming options and most liberal odds.

What makes The Reserve different from its competition?

We believe there is great potential for small properties like The Reserve. We take a very personal approach and our hard work is appreciated by our customers.

How has the community responded to The Reserve?

While I can't speak on behalf of the community, you are asking an interesting question. Business leaders have told us The Reserve has a place in our city and we are both excited and proud to be a part of this community as an employer, charitable affairs partner and local attraction.

An interesting point is that our team members feel the same way I do. Most of The Reserve's employees have been with us since our grand opening which is a great accomplishment in our industry — most casinos have enormous turnover. I think that speaks well of us.

Are you satisfied with the community response?

The Reserve works closely with a number of local civic and non-profit groups and our partners tell us our casino is very well thought of and that they are rooting for our success because it will make for a stronger Henderson. That's a terrific compliment but next year we intend to be even more heavily involved in helping Henderson face the growth and change it will encounter. We've already made several commitments to make a difference through the investment of our professional time and talent.

What is the company's current focus? Why?

As we move into our second year, The Reserve will concentrate on fine-tuning our gaming product and restaurants offerings. We have a strategic plan and are moving forward with great seriousness. Our emphasis will be on making our product better, providing value and enjoyment for our guests and offering a fun, rewarding work environment for our team members.

An exciting first year behind the scenes

Eric Tischler
News Staff Writer

The Reserve Hotel and Casino will celebrate its first year in Henderson next week and the anniversary could not be observed without knowing the people behind the scenes.

Patty Plotnick, assistant general manager for The Reserve, has been with the company since day one. With her experience in casino and customer relations, she intends to make The Reserve a more community-oriented business.

Plotnick didn't get involved in casino management until later in her career. She first got her degree in broadcast journalism from the University of Nebraska in Lincoln. She worked as a producer for a Public Broadcasting System station in Nebraska and then got into public relations.

After being cut from the public relations department at Glassboro State College in New Jersey, Plotnick applied at the Sands casino in Atlantic City. She worked in development and food and beverage management for the Sands and also worked at another Sands' property in Illinois.

Ameristar Casino, Inc., which owns the Reserve, recruited Plotnick in the late 1980s when it opened a resort in Council Bluffs, Iowa. She has been with Ameristar since.

As the assistant general manager, Plotnick assumes the role of property manager whenever the general manager is not on-site. However, she prefers to act as an executive liaison between the various departments and The Reserve's employees.

"I'm usually on the casino's floor and I maintain a face-to-face contact with the employees. I may not know every name but I certainly know every face of the approximately 940 people employed here," she said.

Plotnick also serves as the director for executive development and oversees all training and development. She said that the majority of the employees in more than 20 different departments including gaming, food and beverage, computers, human resources and more, have taken one of her training courses.

Plotnick said one of the best things she likes about her job is the community advisory board on which she serves. The board, made up of community leaders, looks for opportunities for the casino to become a better neighbor.

During the holidays, Plotnick said The Reserve considered giving each employee a turkey or ham but instead gave everyone a gift certificate that could be redeemed at a local market for a holiday meal. The employees took it upon themselves to donate their gift certificates to needy people in the Henderson community through the Salvation Army and Chamber of Commerce.

Currently, she is involved in a massive remodeling of the food and beverage departments.

wanted to help those in the community who were in need during the holiday season. "We were aware that a lot of people were affected by the layoffs and wanted to help," she said. "We donated several thousands of dollars."

As the Salvation Army turned to many throughout the community for assistance with their holiday fund-raising programs, the Reserve is sponsoring a "Thank You Banquet" next week to recognize those who volunteered their time.

"We had so many people helping out, and it's great that the Reserve is going to recognize them," said Elaine Blue of the Salvation Army.

At Tuesday night's dinner, the Reserve's Congo Jack is going to present the Salvation Army an $800 check, which is a portion of the money the hotel raised at last year's Bite of Las Vegas Event.

been a success for the city.

The city received about $54,000 in gaming revenues for each quarter during the year. This matches the city's anticipated revenue, about $50,000 per quarter.

"There hasn't been a substantial deviation from quarter to quarter," Hanson said.

Fifth quarter projects for the property indicate a slight dip in gaming revenues to about $53,400.

Communities receive a portion of a property's gaming revenues each quarter. The funds help bolster the city's budget, while also giving funds to help pay for area improvements.

Although The Reserve's ownership, Ameristar Casinos Inc., refused to be interviewed, Hanson said the city has every indication the first year of the property was a success.

The casino, which sits in the city's redevelopment district, was touted as a cash cow by city officials. Many indicated the project would help bolster the city's Lake Mead corridor and improve the area through its tax assessment.

A redevelopment district places a cap on the area's taxes into one separate fund to be used specifically for the area. Otherwise, if no district existed, the money generated through the property's assessment would be disbursed throughout the city.

In July, the county assessor's office priced the project well below what the city believed its assessment would be.

"We're really excited. You know how many families we can feed or prevent from becoming homeless with that donation?" Blue exclaimed. "They have been great for the community and have brought an upbeat spirit."

Sewell Elementary School principal Tom Maveal agrees. His school has been adopted by the hotel-casino which has said it will help with the school's attendance incentive program.

"They said they would provide coupons for free buffets for good attendance. They also plan to donate stuffed [African] animals for the incentive program," said Maveal.

Silver said they held a Sock Drive, which resulted in the collection of 500 socks for Sewell students.

"The kids were very appreciative. They recommended socks because many of the families couldn't afford them," Silver said. "We were excited to fill their needs."

Y2K problems not computing with residents

Orderliness. Caution. Preparation: These are among the words authorities are uttering leading up to dreaded Y2K-associated problems.

Valley officials are preparing for a variety of computer problems which the area will encounter when the year 2000 hits. Officials are not painting a grim picture, instead they are asking for area residents' understanding and preparedness for problems.

Chaos. Every man-for-himself. Overreaction: These are among some of the words which area officials are trying to stop others from associating with Y2K and the fact is — they are right.

It is a fact that the whole world, including our Henderson neighborhoods, will be affected by Y2K problems. What residents need to realize is to set aside fact from fiction to deal constructively with this bizarre threat to society.

The moon will not turn red and the sun eclipse, instead, the area's problems may be minor electrical losses, problems with telephone service and other annoying computer-related glitches.

Last week, county and local officials joined in an effort to educate residents about Y2K preparations in their communities. The forums are scheduled to occur throughout the year, and the News hopes residents take advantage of this worthwhile opportunity to prepare for problems.

One of the common misconceptions is that Y2K will hit at the stroke of midnight, Jan. 1, 2000. That is among one of the days residents will have to be prepared to deal with Y2K problems. The chart lists many of the other days for which residents must be prepared.

Educate. Participate: This is how the valley can overcome its Y2K obstacles in the upcoming years.

To learn more about Y2K preparedness, call the Y2K hotline, 229-2000, or dial Clark County's web site www.co.clark.nv.us. Y2K meetings are scheduled for every last Wednesday of each month this year to address Y2K issues. Forums are to be held in the Government Center, 500 S. Grand Central Parkway.

59 with a bullet

If you watch televised golf, you have either hit the wrong button on the remote or you are part of an audience with plans, as Bernard Darwin once put it, of "drinking into our own disjointed system[s] the rhythm of a great player." Golf differs from most other sports in that respect virtually none of the Super Bowl spectators were wondering what John Elway can teach them about releasing a pass. But many people who watch golf are actually golfers, and they keenly appreciate the virtuosity of players excelling at a game whose difficulty seems to vanish when seen through the foreshortening lens of a TV camera.

Golf's difficulty also seems to vanish when David Duval, who is 27, plays it. He has won nine tournaments since 1997. He is the hottest golfer since Tom Watson in 1980. Last Sunday, to win the sob Hope Chrysler Classic, Duval shot a final round of 59. Only two other men have shot 59 in the 82-year history of PGA competition. Duval's is the only 59 ever shot on a tournament Sunday, a day when even the coolest player—and Duval is a cool one—discovers he has nerves.

How great is a 59? It is a little like taking Mark McGwire's 70 home-run swings this past season and putting them back to back in 70 at-bats. Each of Duval's shots on Sunday, from his first drive to his final putt, was a home run.

After the tournament, one interviewer tried to pry some secret from Duval—something unusual about his dreams, something different about his breakfast, anything that would make it easier for fellow golfers to believe he has some unattainable mojo working.

But the place Duval is playing from cannot really be explained. He seems to understand that there is no accounting for it. He says that when he shoots a 63, he gets "some wild hair out there." That is not much of a clue for the rest of us to go by.

RICHARD COHEN

Newt Custer

Newt Gingrich thinks of war. Battles of old trip off his tongue: Montgomery winning in North Africa, Napoleon retreating from Russia. The one he did not mention probably most approximates what Bill Clinton did to him: Custer at the Little Big Horn. "Frankly," he said here the other day, "I still don't know what happened."

It has been a year since Gingrich last appeared at the storied World Economic Forum here in this alpine town. Back then, the world was different. The Monica Lewinsky scandal had just broken and from this mountain Gingrich could behold a president who was on the ropes, finished—a fighter who had already taken the punch that, in a round or two, would put him on the canvas. Clinton, it seemed, was history—and Gingrich, clearly, the future itself.

Gingrich was not alone in such thinking. You could circulate through this conference and find nary an American politician, Democrat or Republican, who did not think Clinton was finished. Things did not turn out that way, of course. Now it is Gingrich who is out of office with his party fighting to regain its balance and figure out what went wrong. It is almost laughable; the president had an extramarital affair, lied about it under oath and to the American people—yet it is the GOP that is reeling.

Modesty ill becomes Newt Gingrich and yet it was a modest man who wandered into this conference. He says he misunderstood the 1998 election. His mind is still processing the data, the meaning of Jesse Ventura's victory in Minnesota, for instance—all the possible explanations that, in his case, chased him out of electoral politics. (He knows, thought, that at 55 he is the same age Ronald Reagan was when he became governor of California.)

He has some tentative theories. One is that Bill Clinton is a latter-day Warren Harding, a president presiding over a booming economy. Prosperity forgives all sins.

Another is that the GOP failed to advance any program other than the notion that Clinton was a skunk. This, to say the least, is not exactly a pledge to save Social Security.

Gingrich also thinks that the Clinton White House adopted the tactics of an aggressive—and it goes without saying—unethical trial lawyer. The guilt or innocence of the client is immaterial. The Clinton White House made Ken Starr the villain just as O.J. Simpson's legal team made the L.A.P.D. the issue. There is something to this analysis. Both O.J. and Clinton, in their own ways, are the beneficiaries of jury nullification.

Repeatedly though, Gingrich said the history of the last year has yet to be written. Only in retrospect will matters become clear, or at least clearer. This is where he mentions wars and battles. This is where, in an ironic way, he is on to something. The relevant incident however is not one of Gingrich's famous battles, but Watergate. If generals fight the last war, then politicians fight the last scandal.

For the GOP, Watergate was the siren that lured the party to mistake after mistake. In the Clinton scandal, it expected revelation after revelation to unfold as Watergate did. Yet, a year ago we knew pretty much what we know now. No gun has smoked; the crime was lust. It remains, basically, thus.

Watergate stewed for quite some time before the public caught on. Surely, many Republicans thought, it would be the same with Clinton. The public would slowly stir itself. Its indignation would soar, turn into a fury. This did not happen. The public understood. The man fooled around and then lied about it. Now can we move on, please?

The press was similarly deluded. Here, once again, was a scandal to make a reputation, spawn movies. Sex with an intern was inflated into abuse of power and Clinton was denounced as if he had surrounded the Capitol with tanks or, as in Watergate, used one government agency to snooker another. Deep Throat's injunction to "follow the money" became "follow the rumor, the dress, the Black Dog T-shirt." Monicagate is a smirky parody of Watergate—and the public, although not much of the press, knows it.

History itself deceived Newt Gingrich, the historian. It taught all the wrong lessons, even that the party occupying the White House loses seats in the congressional elections. He fought all the wrong battles, chose all the wrong historical precedents. He woke at 3 a.m. on election night, heard the results, and said he thought, "How fascinating."

Yes. It was for Custer, too.

Nevada can't compete for best teachers

Outside the home, there is no one more important to a child's education than the classroom teacher.

If you can agree with that, then I will tell you that Nevada is about to face a very serious problem. The simple fact is, the Silver State is not in a position to compete for the nation's best teachers. With more than 50% of the nation's new teachers leaving the profession within their first five years, the retirement of the baby-boomer educators, and the increase in the number of children coming into the public school system, some might place a high premium of attracting and retaining the most important factor in a child's education.

In political terms, the slogan ought to read—"It's the instruction, stupid!"

The fact is, the nation, like Nevada, has had a shortage of qualified math and science teachers for a number of years now. That has barely registered a blip on the radar. However, below average student achievement of the state's math and science students is causing a furor. Gee, do you think there might be a connection?

While many states are preparing for the race to attract and retain teachers, Nevada has not even registered for the run. Many states across the nation are offering signing bonuses to teachers. Massachusetts for instance, is offering a $20,000 signing bonus paid over four years. Other states are offering $1,500 to 3,000 to sign on the dotted line.

While Nevada sits on the sidelines, other states are cooking up schemes to recruit teachers. The schemes run the gamut to include signing bonuses, paying for transportation to their states, paying off college loans, paying for a master's degree, and Baltimore gave their new teachers an additional $5,000 as a down payment on a home.

It appears that states across the nation understand the importance of a classroom teacher. They understand that increased student achievement depends upon their state's ability to attract and retain the very best teachers. In other words, they understand, "It's the instruction, stupid!"

Nevada is a state that imports teachers. We do not graduate enough teachers to satisfy our own needs. We depend on new teachers willing to come to Nevada. Clark County School District alone has a shortfall of 200 teachers this year. So what has Nevada done to ensure that our kids have the best qualified teachers in the nation?

But it's not only states like Massachusetts against which Nevada will have to compete. Nationally, schools need to hire an estimated two million teachers over the next decade. California alone will need to hire 27,000 teachers a year for the next 10 years.

At some point, the Silver State has to enter this competition. With the passage of the Nevada Educational Reform Act, there is an expectation of world-class achievement second to none that must be matched by a commitment to world-class teachers and administrators second to none. Having rigorous academic programs is important. Having increased academics standards is important, as are having the most current technology, materials, supplies and testing. Having the very best qualified teachers and school administrators is essential to help students achieve at higher levels. It's what teachers do in the classroom that will determine if Nevada students can compete nationally.

With Nevada's teacher pay scale already in the bottom half nationally with the prospect of no raises over the next two years, Nevada has a serious recruiting problem. We can expect other states' incentive programs with respect to recruiting to start having an effect on our first-, second-, and third-year teachers opting to leave for greener pastures.

Adding to this, while other states have placed a great emphasis on professional development for teachers and administrators, it's not included in Nevada's budget because of the projected budget shortfalls. Let's just hope that the Legislature, being short on funds, will at least pass a resolution requiring local school districts to provide programs for professional development and support through the use of regularly scheduled early release days.

While parents play an important role in a child's education, in school, it's the teacher who makes the difference. It is the instruction, stupid!

Support film studio

Editor:

I am Thomas W. Walker, the film and television representative for the I.A.T.S.E. Local 720 in Southern Nevada. The jurisdiction encompasses Las Vegas and extends outward halfway to Bakersfield, Calif., Salt Lake City, and Phoenix.

We have zealously policed this jurisdiction for the past 62 years with good results for not only the workers, but for the state of Nevada as well. We do not stand alone in this pursuit as the Teamster Organization, who supply drivers to film companies, along with S.A.G., who are responsible for the talent aspects of the work, represent several thousand working people, many of whom live in your city.

This does not even address the many vendors of equipment, payroll companies as well as the film company's employees who will be spending money on hotel rooms, food, gas, clothing, etc., in Henderson.

The one missing ingredient that has limited our ability to level the playing field is a proper studio facility. This is the very thing that is being built in your city; a place that will employ several thousand people.

This (Black Mountain Studios), as opposed to using the land as merely a house track, would bring major economic development in the fastest-growing industry to the fastest-growing city.

We wish to commend, support and assist in every way possible as we have an excellent rapport with Doris Keating and her company. Currently, for instance, we are working mutually for such things as a proper apprentice program tied into UNLV and Clark County Community College. It is very apparent the impact this will have on our valley.

For this reason, we will actively oppose any attempt to change or alter the plan that was formulated between Black Mountain and the city of Henderson.

Keep driving toward toy safety

Mark Mandell

One of our fondest memories from childhood is getting that first "grown-up" toy with which we could emulate our parents.

Toys were simpler then - a push-along lawnmower with the colored balls inside a dome, or a make-believe tea set. But time marches on, and technical advances have led to wonderfully imaginative toys. Toy cell phones that ring, dolls that like to be tickled, even little creatures that can learn language and catch colds are among the innovative toys of today.

But the one thing we must demand as parents is that, in the push to create and market these technological marvels, they are safe for our children's use. Unfortunately, companies sometimes fail to heed this one basic tenet in making products.

Right before the holiday buying season, Fisher-Price announced a recall to repair about 10 million battery-powered Power Wheels cars and trucks because they pose a serious fire risk - even when the toys are not in use.

The Power Wheels line of toys consists of $70-$300 ride-on cars and trucks that use either a dual 6 volt or a "super 6 volt" battery and can travel as fast as 5 mph.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) received 150 reports of fires involving these toys, including fires that occurred while the toy cars or trucks were parked in garages, playrooms and closets. Nine children were injured due to these malfunctioning toys, and more $300,000 in property damage was reported in 22 homes and garages.

No family suffered a tragic loss due to a Power Wheels fire, but what this problem does is remind us of the importance of corporate responsibility and safety.

Of course, we must do our best to monitor our children when they play. But we also must do our best to make manufacturers understand that safety is just as important as fancy gadgetry and marketing.

One of the most important tools that we have to insure that manufacturers make their products safer for our children is the civil justice system. The Power Wheels fires illustrate that our ability to hold manufacturers accountable for irresponsible and dangerous behavior is still needed, that our voices as concerned parents still need to be heard.

This power is what forced flammable pajamas off the market, eliminated dangerous football helmets and made auto manufacturers make safer minivan doors.

The unfortunate thing about this recall is the fact of how long it took Fisher Price to acknowledge the problem.

If you have access to the Internet, you can visit the CPSC Web site at <http://www.cpsc.gov/>. This site features product news, children's safety tips and recall notices, so you can check to see if a toy has any problems. You also can call CPSC's hotline at 1-800-638-2772.

The dog, the divorce and the dedication

What do you tell your child when she asks, "Why don't I have a stepmom?"

During the 11 years Donna and I have been raising children, this question has popped up numerous times. It seems like such a strange question through my rose-colored glasses.

Every time it comes up, I am lost for words. I couldn't imagine my life being complete without my wife. The thought of our house being divided chills me.

Our kids mention divorce because they hear about the trauma of it at school. The kids witness the exchange of weekends and breakdown of communication.

I admit I am not qualified to write about divorce or the effects on those involved, however, I can tell you how the word divorce has affected my life. I have become so sensitive about the subject I refer to it as the "D."

Not too long ago, I was taking the house apes (our kids) to Mickey D's for dinner and one of the kids asked if we were getting a divorce. I responded with, "What ever gave you that idea?"

The answer came quickly from another. "You and mommy yelled at each other last night."

"No, we didn't," I said defensively. "We were having a discussion about a new dog." I quickly devised a plan to settle this question by picking up my wife Donna at work and having her eat dinner with us. I was hoping she would settle their fears.

When she jumped in the car, I asked her to tell the kids we are not getting a "D." Donna told them, "Maybe some day, but not right away."

Stunned, I replied, "Oh great, now they will expect one." Then she said, "OK, never. We're never getting one! Is that the right answer?"

I thought about what she said and I was quite unsettled, wondering how you could make a promise like that.

Humbled by the past few minutes, I asked her if we were talking about the same thing. "The dog, right?" she said.

With much relief, I told her, "No, the kids had been discussing us getting a 'D' for divorce."

The mix up with our "D's" caused a great deal of stress which ended in laughter. I must admit for a moment I felt a great deal of anguish and as a result I do not raise my voice at my wife in our home.

When my children ask why they don't have stepparents or about divorce, I am honest and reassuring. It is important to keep things in a positive light and explain the importance of communication in the family unit. Encouraging them to be helpful and understanding of friends who are struggling with divorce is also a positive action.

As I reflect over our nearly 15 years of marriage, I can't think of just one reason, but many reasons for its success.

First, we agree it's OK to disagree. Never go to bed and sleep mad or let anything go unresolved. If you are a person of faith or religious conviction, live your faith together as husband and wife.

One of the most important things we did as an engaged couple was attend an engagement encounter to help prepare us for a life together. We attend church regularly, not only when things seem to be falling apart.

What is the saying? "The family that plays together stays together." This is true in our house. We work hard, the kids study hard and do their chores during the week and on weekends we play hard together.

One last piece of advice - boys need to be boys and girls need to be girls. What I mean by this is, we have boys night out and girls night out. This is time we spend with our individual friends.

I've learned these tips from experience and by example watching my parents' marriage of nearly 44 years. Donna and I are doing our best to set the same example.

Incidentally, after nearly three years, I am still trying to get that chocolate Labrador Retriever.

Put land fund back on track

Congress created the Land and Water Conservation Fund in 1964 to purchase and protect "areas of natural beauty and unique recreational value" for the enjoyment of all Americans. Revenues from federal offshore oil and gas leases were earmarked for the fund, an appropriate use of money the government gets for commercial depletion of one of its valuable resources.

The fund brings in about $900 million a year, but Congress has never spent all the money on its intended purpose. Typically, half the amount was diverted to reduction of the federal budget deficit. But today's balanced budget changes the situation.

Congress should enthusiastically embrace a Clinton administration proposal that the entire fund be used for its intended purpose in fiscal year 2000. Clinton proposed a variety of resource projects, including the purchase of land for national parks, coastal and marine sanctuaries and other preserves. Funds would also go to state and local governments and private land trusts and other nonprofit organizations to buy land, preserve farmland and protect the habitat of endangered species.

This expanded program would be a boon to Southern California. Specific proposals include the addition of 450,000 acres to Joshua Tree National Park and the Mojave Desert Preserve, purchase of a tract in the Santa Monica Mountains and additions to the San Diego National Wildlife Refuge. This is welcome news at a time when the state budget for wild-land purchases has been restricted by an unexpected state budget shortfall.

This plan may be a tough sell in a Congress where the environment does not hold the priority it deserves. It will take more than just environmental organizations lobbying members of Congress. City, county and state officials and civic organizations will need to wage a coordinated program of persuasion. This conservation money should be spent to preserve a natural heritage for future generations, which is what Congress intended in 1964.

Basic High students take first place

Eric Tischler
News Staff Writer

Basic High School's Advanced Placement government class took first place in a district competition, "We the People...The Citizen and the Constitution" Saturday at Durango High School.

John Wallace, senior-class government teacher, led his students to a victory over last year's winners - Boulder City High School. Basic will go to Reno for the state competition on March 6 and if they win state, they'll head to the national competition in Washington, D.C., in May.

This year was Basic High's first competition in "We the People." The other schools that participated were Boulder City High School, Community College High School-West, Durango High School, Green Valley High School, Virgin Valley High School and Western High School.

Wallace's students were divided into six units with six students each and focused on specific aspects of the U.S. Constitution. Each unit appeared before a panel of judges who asked the students questions about the Constitution. The judges scored the students using criteria that included understanding, Constitutional application, reasoning, use of supportive evidence, responsiveness and participation.

Judge Philip Pro coordinated 18 judges for the competition including public defenders, attorneys, parole officers and other individuals involved in law and government.

Each group received three questions prior to the competition and the students researched and prepared answers to each question. Students researched their topics through the library and Internet and many cited Supreme Court cases on the Constitution.

One question out of the three was chosen and students were given four minutes for their responses. Judges then asked follow-up questions to see if the students were able to fully understand Constitutional principles.

"The students were tested on mostly Constitutional knowledge but some of the follow-up questions were relevant to today's government," Wallace said.

One of the questions asked was, "What ways are the establishment and free-exercise clauses similar and dissimilar? What historical lessons and personal experiences of the founders led them to safeguard these rights of the First Amendment? How do these two clauses come into conflict and what criteria should be used to ease this conflict?"

"The students gave their answers and a judge posed a follow-up question about First Amendment rights that was simply, 'Do perverts have rights?' This all caught them by surprise but the students had to expect any type of question," he said.

Shannon Balderson's unit studied due process and the First Amendment and she worked with Metro police officers to learn more about due process.

"The competition helped me to understand more things in the government, especially the First Amendment," she said.

Another unit focused on civil rights and free speech. Billy Covington, a member of the unit, said he had to research several Supreme Court cases for his questions.

"This whole thing has been a real eye-opener for me. Before this, I had no clue how the government works," he said.

One of the units focused on technology and how computers are affecting immigration in today's democracies. Member Kimberly Coe said the competition has helped her realize how important it can be to participate and to be active in one's community.

"A major section of the competition was to focus on what the government can do to get more young people to vote," Wallace said.

Basic's new dean of students looks to put training to use

Eric Tischler
News Staff Writer

Basic High School's new dean of students, Stephanie Jones, is looking forward to her first administrative position.

Jones finished her training with the Clark County School District's program for administrators last month and she was quickly taken on board at Basic.

"We've always been committed to getting the best people at Basic and Stephanie is definitely one of the best. I'm really glad she accepted the position and I see her doing great things for the high school," principal Horace Smith said.

Part of Jones' duties will be to handle attendance, supervise campus activities and assist teachers.

"I want to remain in touch with the positive side of the dean's office and not dwell on negatives such as disruptions, truancy and attendance problems. I intend to stay in touch with the students by being an active participant in student activities," she said.

Before coming to Basic, Jones taught English and student council leadership at Cimarron-Memorial High School. As a teacher, she received a Rave Review Award, Employee of the Quarter and the largest award at Cimarron - the Silver Spartan Award. The student council also nominated her for Advisor of the Year.

"The hardest part about becoming an administrator was leaving the classroom. I will always remember the looks on my student's faces when I told them it was my last day," she said.

Jones received her undergraduate degree in secondary education in English from UNLV and her master's in administration from the University of Phoenix.

Jones said the demand for teachers and administrators in Clark County is overwhelming. Her administrative training was condensed by three months to fill the dean's position at Basic High and to make room for another administrative class.

"There's a constant demand for administrators in the area," she said. "When a new school opens or when someone retires it creates a domino effect with deans promoted to assistant principals who are promoted to principals."

Her biggest challenge at Basic High, she said, is to remain focused, fair and consistent with students, faculty and parents.

"I would like to recognize those who have done good deeds and determine what can be done different if something goes wrong. I'll always be willing for criticisms because that's all you can ask of yourself and that's all that be asked of you," she said.

To relax, Jones and her boyfriend compete in drag races. She recently raced in Arizona in a 1974 Dodge Dart and she just finished building a 1976 Volare with a 360 engine.

Garcia working to make better community

D.B. Marciniak
News Staff Writer

For George Garcia, nearly everything he loves in life somehow comes back into his work.

Whether it's photography, tinkering with technology, traveling or being a good neighbor, he uses these skills and traits to try to make a better community.

"Community well-being is important," he said. "It's a big part of who we are."

Garcia sets out to define community well-being in the development projects with which he works. A former Henderson Planning Director in the early 1990s, he uses his skills and community pride to bring projects which benefit the community to Henderson.

His clients include The Reserve, the Galleria Commons shopping centers along Stephanie Street, the Galleria Mall, the Eastgate auto center and other projects including mostly commercial development.

"It's not a matter of clients, it's a matter of fires and how many are raging forest fires that need to be put out," Garcia said, explaining work as a developer's representative can prove difficult.

A lot of work is associated with helping developments get started in Henderson. It takes balancing the community's needs with a businesses interests in establishing in an area. Although sometimes mixing the two seems like mixing oil and water, it is an important balance to work to strike.

"I like to see how many of those plates I can keep spinning at one time," Garcia said.

With the work comes a lot of fun through relying on what he enjoys most in life, he said.

Photography is among one of his passions. In fact, he even won an award for a photo he took while traveling through the countryside in Kentucky.

In 1990, he took a picture which he found hysterical. He was driving along and saw a no dumping sign on the roadway to warn residents not to illegally dump trash on a property site. Apparently a construction worker did not think twice when locating a port-a-pottie directly in back of the sign, and the two together made for a funny sight.

"I was just driving along when I saw it," he said, adding he could not believe his eyes.

Apparently an automotive magazine also found it funny. After he submitted it, they published it in its January 1991 edition to share the joke with readers. In addition to publishing the photograph, the magazine gave him a commemorative leather jacket as part of his prize.

His passion for photography can also be seen in the workplace. Although residents will not see any port-a-pottie pictures in the renderings he presents about projects in their neighborhoods, he uses the skills in other ways.

Digital photography is a big part of his work environment as he tries to bring projects to life to show residents and developers how something will impact their neighborhoods and site.

Graphics can drastically affect projects. This is why he was among one of the individuals who stepped up to help the city institute its slogan sign campaign.

The city is creating a series of monument signs with the city emblem to mark major corridors entering Henderson. Several companies donated material and expertise to get the project under way.

"The signs are helping Henderson have a sense of identity," he said. "People feel better about themselves and the community because they have a sense of belonging."

Thompson Companies to sponsor auction

The Henderson Boys & Girls Club will hold its 20th Charity Auction on April 10 at the Henderson Convention Center. This year's sponsor will be Phyllis E. Thompson, a long-time resident of Henderson.

Thompson has been a tremendous supporter of the Club and her son is an alumni of the Club, said Clyde Caldwell, executive director. As sponsor she will donate 10% of the proceeds from the auction. This year's goal is $150,000.

The Club is starting to solicit donations and is asking the community to get involved in this special event. There are several ways individuals and companies can help.

Donations of items valued at $500 or more will go on the live auction block and any item $50 to $500 will go up for bid in the silent auction.

Corporate tables are being sold for $800 for a table of eight which includes bid cards, dinner, drinks, and the company's name will be displayed on the Wall of Honor and in the auction catalog. General admission is $50 at the door and includes dinner, drinks and bid card.

The theme will be "Once Upon A Time." guests will be greeted by the likes of Mother Goose, Cinderella and Prince Charming. Caldwell said since this event is a major fund-raiser for the Club, it is intended for adult audiences.

Last year's auction had more than 300 items and raised more than $130,000 for the 3,000 members at the club. Some of the items that have already been donated include a signed banner by the Chicago Bulls donated by Champion Homes, a jersey signed by Greg Maddux, and a Master's flag signed by Jack Nicholas and Arnold Palmer. Also featured will be some great vacation trips, tools, toys and dinners.

Anyone wishing to donate to the auction or are interested in sponsoring a table or silent auction section can call 565-6568.

Troupe brings African-American folklore to life

The Junebug Company will present "Don't Start Me Talking or I'll Tell Everything I Know" at 7:30 p.m. on Feb. 12 at the Black Mountain Recreation Center, 599 Greenway Road. Advance tickets are available at all city of Henderson fullservice recreation centers and cost $6 for adults or $3 for youth (17 and under) and seniors.

"Don't Start Me Talking" is described as a journey through history that chronicles the struggle of escaped slaves and contemporary tragi-comic victims of multi-cultural progress. These personalities are brought to life by mythical hero and storyteller Junebug Jabbo Jones (portrayed by John O'Neal), a character created by college students in 1960 to symbolize the wisdom of ordinary people.

"John O'Neal effectively blends storytelling and 'transformational theater' to bring his characters and their stories to life," said Annette Mullins, cultural and special events coordinator for the Henderson Parks and Recreation Department. "As founder and artistic director of the Junebug Company, he has assembled a troupe of diverse artists that has performed to critical acclaim throughout the world."

The Junebug Company was founded in 1980 and took its name from a green beetle that is similar to a scarab. The troupe selected the Junebug because it symbolizes modesty, wisdom and the creative force in nature.

According to the group, its mission is to share African-American artistic expression and improve the quality of life through the art of storytelling. Today, the company is comprised of actors who portray characters that tell stories through fulllength plays, oral histories, songs, and games. Most of the tales are derived from folklore and contemporary concerns of African-Americans in the South.

"The Junebug Company presents serious issues with an element of wit and humor," said Mullins. "Through this performance, people can explore the very things that make them laugh and cry and think about ordinary things with a renewed sense of interest."

"Don't Start Me Talking" is sponsored by the Henderson Parks and Recreation Department. For additional information, call 565-2367.

United Methodist youth collect canned goods

Last Sunday, the youth of First Henderson United Methodist Church collected for the second year in a row for "Soup"er Bowl Sunday. The "Soup"er Bowl can goods collection program began a few years back with a Presbyterian Youth Group in North Carolina. The program, supported by hundreds of churches across the United States, reminds people that even on a fun day like Super Bowl Sunday, many do not have a television to watch the game or food to eat, a spokesman said. This year the First Henderson United Youth collected more than $200 in canned goods for the Weekend Emergency Assistance Program of Clark County.

Masaniai signs to play for Southern Utah

Ray Brewer
News Staff Writer

Silverado's Joel Masaniai keeps making strides in the game of football. He went from being another tree in the forest his junior season with the Skyhawks to becoming one of the southern zone's better defensive players his senior season. Masaniai's progression will continue to grow after he signed a national letter-of-intent on Wednesday to attend

Southern Utah University on the first day of the national signing period. Masaniai and Southern Utah appear to be a perfect match. An up-and-coming football player with an up-and-coming football team. "It's a good place," Masaniai said. "I like the campus, coaches and players. It's a place for me to play." Southern Utah is a Division-IAA squad that went 5-6 last season as an independent team. Next season, the Thunderbirds will play Division-IAA powers UC Davis and McNeese State, as well as Division-IA Boise State. Masaniai, 6-foot, 290-pounds, was a defensive force on this year's Skyhawk football team. He led the team with 68 tackles, including 23 solo tackles, five for a loss, and two sacks. Masaniai was voted Silverado's Most Valuable Player, outstanding defensive linemen and honored with the News' 'Go For Broke' Award. Masaniai also forced one fumble, recovered another and scored a touchdown.

"He was just a wrecking crew for us," DeNardin said. "He was one of those very enjoyable kids to coach. He would do anything we'd ask him." DeNardin feels Masaniai is ready to battle collegiate competition. "Joel can go up there and make an impact as a freshman and play," the coach said. "It's a very good school. His parents like it because they can go up there and watch him play." Masaniai, a nose guard, is looking forward to having a chance to prove his skills and get some playing time. "I'll have a chance to start," he said. "When we get into camp, the greatest players that come out on top will win the position." With Silverado not winning a game in his senior season, Masaniai has already learned the true meaning of football. "My biggest lesson was that it hurts to lose," he said. "After you lose so much, you just have to play for pride. Football has always been fun."

Gators win OT thriller

Brad Tittington
News Staff Writer

Jeff Platt, Cornell Williams and Ben Lev knew the importance of Monday night's matchup against Rancho. The three Green Valley seniors did not realize how important they would be in the outcome of the game. Platt, Williams and Lev combined for 56 points as the Gators beat the first-place Rams 75-73 in overtime. "This was the biggest win of the season for us," Lev said. "It was a huge win." The Gators trailed for most of the ball game, but everytime they got down, they clawed their way back. They trailed by 12 in the first quarter but fought back to head to the locker room down by only three. The Gators found themselves down by 11 in the fourth quarter and down by eight with under three minutes to play. However, they climbed back into the game, thanks to two three-pointers by Platt in the final 1:30. But it was Lev that had the spotlight on him late in the game. He went for what would have been a game-winning three with four seconds left on the clock, but missed. He was, however, fouled on the play to keep the Gators' hopes alive. Lev had missed first of his three free-throws. "I knew if I hit that first one, it definitely would be a lot easier," Lev said. "I tried to visualize it in my mind on the bench when [Rancho] called a timeout."

QUICK RUNNER — Henderson's Anthony Crudale is looking to finish in the top 20 of Sunday's Las Vegas Invitational Marathon.

Henderson's Anthony Crudale doesn't let battle with autism disorder slow him down

Ray Brewer
News Staff Writer

Emerging from the pack and the feeling of accomplishment is something that drives Anthony Crudale. Crudale, a Henderson marathonist, will be one of approximately 6,000 participants in this year's Las Vegas Invitational Marathon on Sunday. A total of 44 Henderson residents will take part in the half marathon portion of the event, while 38 residents will race in the full marathon. The marathon course travels through various parts of the Las Vegas Valley and concludes at Sunset Park. It's at Sunset Park where Crudale hopes to be one of the top 20 racers to cross the finish line. "I enjoy the sport and get a lot of momentum out of it," the 21-year old Crudale said. Crudale shines on and off the course despite an autism disorder he has battled since birth. "He wants to accomplish something in life, instead of just sitting around like a lump," Crudale's mother Donna said. Donna Crudale explains her son's disorder as "an electrical condition of the brain." Her son can read something, but can't put it into words. But, when Crudale is racing, he shows no sign of having a disorder. In fact, he is rated as one of the top racers in the valley by the Las Vegas Track Club. Crudale won a 10-mile marathon in Mesquite this past December, clocking in with a time of 56 minutes, 20 seconds. In last's year Las Vegas Marathon, Crudale placed 20th out of 3,000 racers in the half marathon event in 1:15.43 — 14 minutes behind the winner. Not bad for someone who has only been in the sport for 18 months. "The key in a marathon is not to start too fast and try to hold up a big speed after the first seven or eight miles," Crudale said. Crudale is also making strides in the classroom where he is one year away from a Bachelor's Degree in Fine Arts from UNLV. "He will be one of the first person's known to graduate college with the disorder," Donna Crudale said. "It's a struggle everyday. UNLV gives him a lot of help in their resource center. They are proud he is going to be the first one to graduate with a disorder." Attending UNLV is one dream that Crudale always fantasized about. "His goal was to always come to UNLV even though they had no track team," Donna Crudale said. "He would see Runnin' Rebels and think it was more than the basketball team." Crudale and his mother moved to Henderson three years ago from Rhode Island. As a prep runner in high school, Crudale placed sixth in the 400 meter race at the Rhode Island state championships. He went on to run his freshman year at the University of Rhode Island. Crudale says he hopes to finish Saturday's race in two hours and 35 minutes. "My reward is either winning a trophy or taking home prize money," he said.

ON THE SIDELINES

D. J. ALLEN

A not so trendy look at the selfish John Elway

With back-to-back Super Bowl wins, John Elway has etched himself into National Football League history as one of the greatest quarterbacks to ever play the game. After all, sports are all about championship rings — not necessarily individual records (Sorry, Dan Marino). With a Super Bowl MVP honor freshly under his belt, all of the talk about Elway now is if he's going to retire. John Elway retiring prior to the 1999 NFL season... The Cleveland Browns returning to the NFL for the 1999 season. Wouldn't that be ironic? No, I'm not talking about Elway's drive versus the Browns in any AFC Championship game, in fact, this irony is off the field. Off two fields to be correct. It was some 17 years ago that the then Baltimore Colts drafted the blue-eyed quarterback out of Stanford, hoping he was their future. Elway balked. He demanded a trade. And if he wasn't traded by the Colts, he would pursue his baseball career with the New York Yankees. Soon after being drafted, he got his wish and was traded to the Broncos. In Denver, he helped build a winning organization. While in Baltimore, he provided the final blow to demolish one. The Colts — without a prophet to save them — packed up their offices in the middle of the night and moved to Indianapolis. In essence, Elway had killed the storied Baltimore Colts franchise, leaving millions of fans in the dark. But he was not done. Over a decade later, Baltimore — longing again for the football they so dearly missed — baited Cleveland Brown owner Art Modell to pack his team's bags and move to Maryland. Once again, a storied NFL franchise was killed and millions of Cleveland fans were left to ask why?

The answer? Because Baltimore wanted a team. Why? Because it didn't have a team. Why? Because the Colts had moved to Indianapolis. Why? Because the franchise was struggling in Baltimore. Why? Because John Elway said, "No." Almost two decades ago, Elway was a hot-shot, cocky rookie taking advantage of the system. He was selfish. And some things never change. Facing Atlanta coach Dan Reeves in the Super Bowl this year brought out even more dirty secrets about Elway and Denver coach Mike Shanahan. Let me sort through the confusion of that for you... Elway was selfish. Sure basketball star Latrell Sprewell went for his coach's neck during a practice last season, but it was Elway who symbolically went after his coach's jugular — and succeeded. He got Reeves fired from a job the coach loved, in a city Reeves and his family loved. Elway is on record as saying he believes

Reeves' style of offense cost him passing numbers, which in effect, cost him a chance at possible passing records. Let's say it together — Elway is selfish. Granted being selfish is not the worst thing an athlete can be. Just look at Lawrence Taylor's drug problem or the example Atlanta's Eugene Robinson allegedly set the night prior to the Super Bowl. Those athletes do cause grief in almost all sports fans and are an embarrassment to most of them as well. But let us not forget about the Elways of the world. He is a great player and seemingly a nice guy. But if you ever get a chance to meet him, don't be so quick to turn around and walk away — you just might find him stabbing you in the back if it will benefit him. Just ask the fans of Baltimore, and yes, even Cleveland. Allen is advertising manager for the Henderson Home News. He can be reached at allensofnv@aol.com

Girls teams post wins

Ray Brewer
News Staff Writer

All three local girls basketball teams earned convincing victories on Monday.

Here's a look back at the action.

BASIC

The Wolves held Valley to six first half points in cruising to a 43-26 win at Basic High School.

"Everyone got playing time tonight," Basic coach Jan Van Tuyl said. "The mistakes they made on the court emphasizes what they still need to work on."

Jen Kline scored a game high 20 points and Raná Brown added 15.

With the win, the Wolves improve to 16-7 overall, 9-3 in the Sunrise Division.

Basic currently is in third place of the Sunrise, one game behind Las Vegas for second place. They are also one game ahead of Green Valley for third place.

"We have to take it one game at a time," Van Tuyl said. "That's all we can do. I haven't seen any 10 point shots yet....We have to go one point and one game at a time."

GREEN VALLEY

The Gators traveled to Rancho and defeated the Rams 43-26 to remain two games ahead of Chaparral for the final playoff berth from the Sunrise Division.

Green Valley jumped out to a 20-9 lead by halftime and cruised to victory behind a game-high 17 points

Lev would then come up clutch as he sank the final two attempts to tie the game at 62 and send the game to overtime.

"Ben stepped up big," Platt said. "It was huge. It was our season."

It was the Gator threesome that stole the show in the overtime period as they combined to score all of Green Valley's 13 overtime points.

"[Cornell, Ben and I] handled the ball at the end," Platt said. "During the timeouts, I told Cornell, 'Let's make this a two man game. Let's win this thing.'"

Platt came up big in the clutch as he scored 19 of his 23 points in the fourth quarter and overtime to lift the Gators.

The win moves the Gators into a third place tie with Basic with a 7-5 Sunrise record.

"People were doubting we could beat a good team like this," Lev said. "This is four in a row for us. Everyone played so well tonight."

The win also gives the Gators redemption for an early season loss to the Rams.

"They beat us pretty good," Williams said. "This boosts our confidence a whole lot."

Gator coach Lee Koelliker summed up Monday's win with two words — heart and pride.

"I drew a big heart on the board and wrote pride through the middle of it," Koelliker said. "They got down, but they didn't give up."

Koelliker was especially pleased with the way his kids handled the pressure and battled back from late deficits.

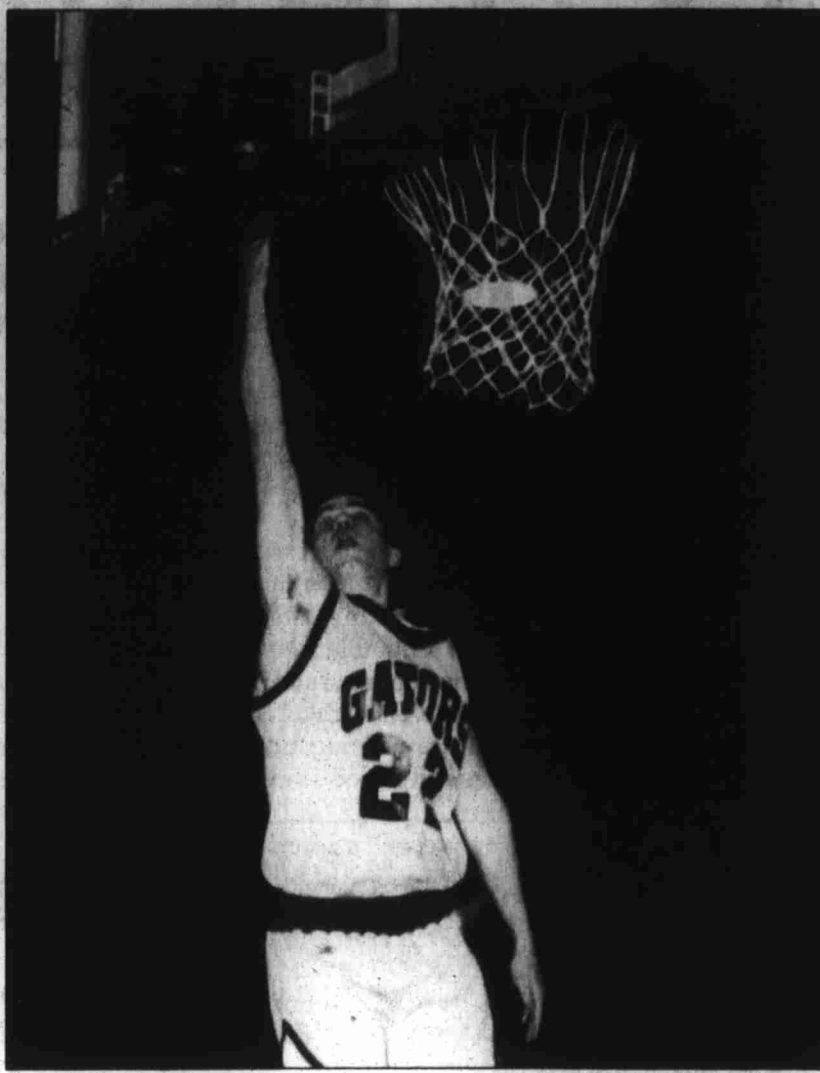

"It was a great team effort," Koelliker said. "[Jeff, Cornell and Ben], they're our seniors and our team leaders," Koelliker said. "They stepped up and did what they needed to do. This is a critical win to help us build momentum. They have lots of confidence. They know they can play with any team. That was one of the best."

BASIC

Despite a 19-point performance from Jamal Norris, the Wolves fell to the Valley Vikings 89-62 at Valley.

Basic was outscored 25-12 in the first quarter and could not catch-up the rest of the way.

"We didn't shut down their shooters," Wolves' coach Kurt Bailey said. "They ran their offense really well. They executed it really well. We never really made up the deficit."

Valley's Aharon Eggleston lit up the scoreboard with 24 points to lead all scorers.

"We didn't have our best defensive night," Bailey said. "We didn't get a whole lot of looks at the basket. It hurt that we didn't have Ian Brown or Eric Christian. It would have been nice to bring some fresh bodies in."

The loss put the Wolves' in a third-place tie with Green Valley in the Sunrise and every game from here on out becomes important in deciding which teams will make it to the playoffs.

"They know that we've got to treat every game like it's do or die," Bailey said. "They're going to be huge. We just need to get our confidence back."

The Wolves faced Silverado on Wednesday after the News went to press in a crucial league game.

"I don't know what the kids are thinking, for me every game is just another game we know we are going to have to try to win," Bailey said.

D'Auria Mosley added 18 points and Mike Bentz bucketed 11 in Monday's loss.

SILVERADO

The Skyhawks took a 46-36 halftime lead and held on at the end as they beat Eldorado at home on Monday 56-52.

Despite a 27-point barrage by the Sundevils' James Bayless, the Skyhawks were able to hold off a late Eldorado charge to capture the win.

"It was about time we got to win a close game," Skyhawk coach Pat Condron said. "Our kids needed that."

A key concern coming into the week for Condron was the lack of scoring from his offensive unit.

"I think we're getting some baskets in transition which is helping us," Condron said. "[Before] we relied on our half-court offense to get baskets. Recently, we've been scoring some points in transition."

The Skyhawks made clutch free-throws at the end to stave off the Eldorado comeback.

"Kevin Short and Chris Ford made clutch free throws at the end," Condron said. "In close games, you have got to make free throws. At the end, we did a good job hitting our free throws. We took seconds off the clock with our four corners offense."

The win moved the Skyhawks to 4-8 in the Sunrise and 7-12 overall.

"Winning that close game helps out," Condron said. "I've said all along, this is a good team. We've just hurt ourselves with turnovers and easy baskets. The kids competed hard. I think the kids deserve it. I hope with our four remaining games, they keep playing good."

The Skyhawks traveled to Basic on Wednesday after the News went to press to face off against the Wolves in a crucial game for both squads.

Zolton Holba eyes record LV Marathon record

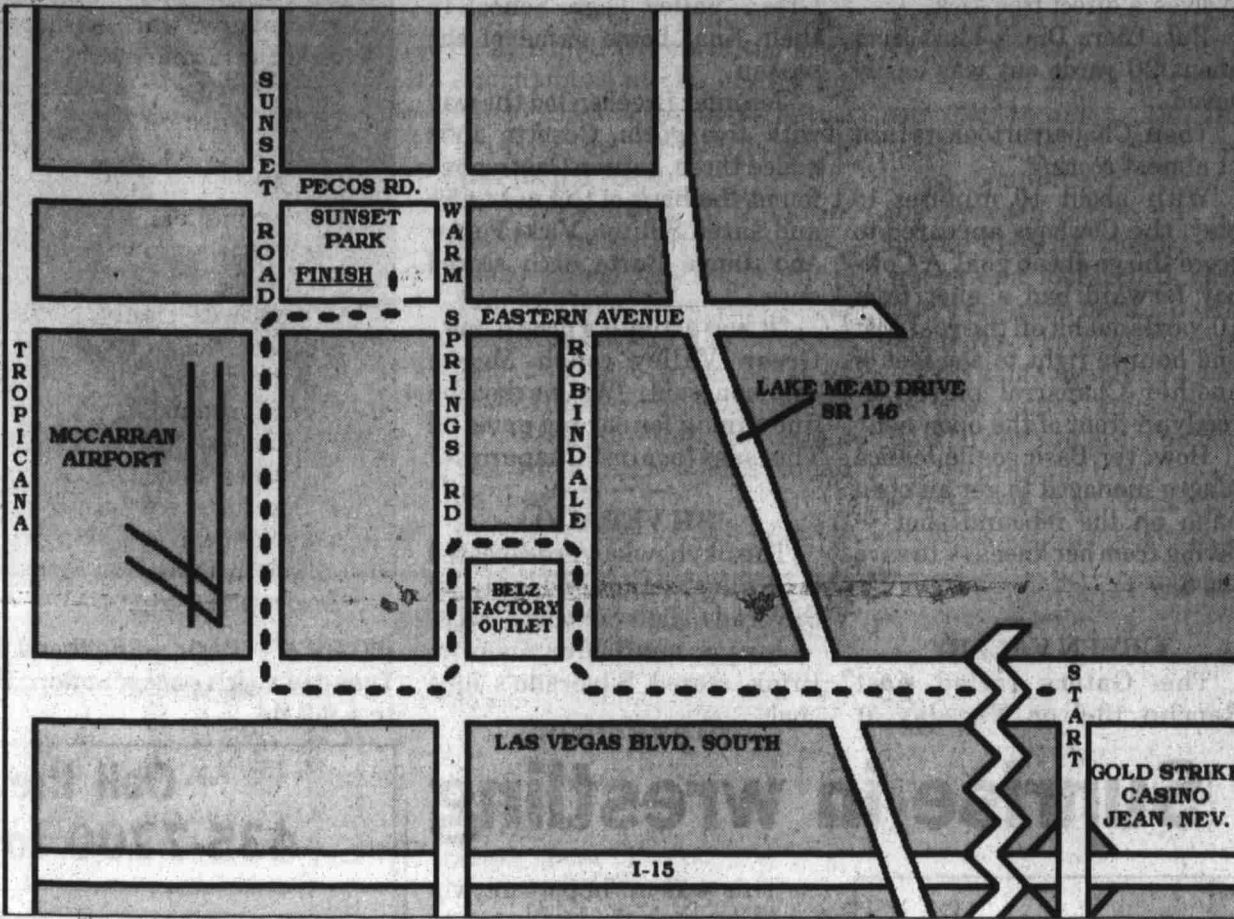

Winners always come back to Southern Nevada. Why should a three-time winner like 30-year-old Hungarian, Zolton Holba, be any different?

Holba will break a 25-year-old record held by Scott Bringham if he scores his fourth win in the 33rd Las Vegas Marathon starting in Jean at 7:30 a.m. on Sunday, Feb. 7. This year's marathon and half-marathon events is expected to see 6,000 runners cross the new Sunset Park finish line at Eastern and Sunset Road.

Holba shamed a couple of sub 2:10 runners in his win last year while trimming eight seconds off his previous best time. Each try has moved Holba closer to the race record, but he'll have to shake a leg to better the record of 2:12:37 set by Frank Plasso, Jr., in 1986.

The new finish line in Sunset Park will cause a significant adjustment to the beginning and the end of the course. Although the shorter uphill at the start may be an advantage, runners may show slower time as they negotiate the last five miles and a few extra 90-degree turns.

The only advantage Holba may find on the adjusted course is the same as the rest of the runners in the park — a finish area providing the comforts of Nevada's largest public park.

The turns in the last few miles probably won't make a difference, according to Plasso, who feels the key to the record is in the first half of the course.

"I think you have to get a little more aggressive and attack the course," said Plasso, who not only holds the fastest time, but also shares the second fastest win at 2:13:14.

"He [Holba] seems to know the course well, I'm surprised he hasn't changed his strategy a little bit. But, he might be running for the win instead of looking for the record."

Holba's apparent strategy in last year's contest backs up Plasso's suspicions about Holba and his advice for capturing the record. A group of four leaders, including the two sub-2:10 runners, went through the halfway mark at 1:08:14, but by mile 25, Holba had gained a 50-meter lead and finished strong as he did in the previous two contests. His overall time was 2:14:15.

Basic girls pick up big victory on alley

Brad Tittington
News Staff Writer

The Basic girls bowling team got off to a very slow start this year.

They couldn't seem to find a rhythm and were quickly dropping in the standings.

But as of late, the Wolves have been on a mission.

They continued their hot streak on Monday as they beat Boulder City 4-0 in a crucial match.

"They bowled pretty good," Wolves' coach Melanie Snively said. "I am really happy with the way they have been bowling. They have bowled much better in the second half."

The Wolves got big performances out of Angela Bentz and Jenny Corey. Bentz bowled a 486 series with games of 166, 163 and 157 and Corey added a 457 series with games of 133, 155 and 169.

Right now, the Wolves sit in fourth place holding onto the final seed for the playoffs — a big turnaround from a few weeks ago when they saw themselves in eighth place.

"Maybe it was a wake-up call," Snively said. "They saw themselves in eighth place and they knew they had to make a run. We're basically in control of our own destiny. I think we're in good position."

The Wolves faced Eldorado on Wednesday after the News went to press and they take on Valley today.

"If we can get through those two matches with more than a sweep, we should solidify a play-off spot," Snively said.

On the boys side, it was the Eagles who surprised the Wolves by sweeping them 4-0.

John Kennedy bowled a 485 series with games of 133, 159 and 193 and Miles Cothrun added a 467 series with games of 128, 196 and 143 for the Wolves, but it was Boulder City that stole the show.

"[Our guys] were not happy with their performance," Snively said. "They know they can bowl better. I think they'll come out [Wednesday] and do better."

The loss dropped the Wolves to eighth place in the division, while the Eagles came into the match without a win.

"Not to take anything away from Boulder City, we just could Erika Twesme added nine points for the Gators and Jodi Lewis scored six.

With the win, Green Valley improves to 11-8 overall, 8-4 in the Sunrise Division.

SILVERADO

Silverado defeated Eldorado 61-48 at Eldorado High School.

"To be honest with you, it wasn't one of our better games," Silverado coach Diane Hernandez said. "We didn't play a consistent four quarters."

Silverado, who is a perfect 12-0 in the Sunrise Division, led 20-8 after the first quarter and appeared to be in the middle of blowing another team out.

But, Eldorado rallied back to only trail 44-38 entering the fourth quarter.

"The thing that impressed me the most was their attitude of letting Eldorado catch up and then again pulling away," Hernandez said.

Jayne Connors scored a game high 24 points, while Nikki Hitchens added 18 points.

The Skyhawks are currently 19-5 overall.

Basic girls in middle of Sunrise race

Ray Brewer
News Staff Writer

Every point is important in the Sunrise Division soccer standings.

So, when Basic and Chaparral played to a 0-0 tie on Tuesday at Basic High School, the Wolves were more than happy to walk away with one point.

With two games left on the schedule, Basic sits in fourth place of the Sunrise with a 6-3-3 division record. The Wolves trail Valley by two points for the third seed in the Southern Zone playoffs.

Valley closes out the season against Las Vegas and Eldorado, while the Wolves travel to Rancho on Thursday and host Green Valley next Tuesday to close out the regular season.

Basic had plenty of opportunities on Thursday to earn three points by defeating Chaparral.

"We are all neck to neck," Basic coach Debra Jamison said. "We really wanted to win this one. The kids played well. We had our opportunities in the first half, the kids just couldn't finish them."

About 20 minutes into the game, the Wolves' Sara Baxter found herself behind the Chaparral defense headed towards goal on a breakaway. However, her shot from about 20 yards out went wide left.

Basic's next big break came minutes into the second half when Chaparral's goalie was called for using hands outside of the 18-yard box to give the Wolves a direct free kick.

But, Ciera Diaz's blast from about 20 yards out was easily saved.

Then, Chaparral took its turn at almost scoring.

With about 10 minutes to play, the Cowboys appeared to score the go ahead goal. A Cowboy forward had a shot from 10-yards out hit off the goal post and bounce right to the feet of another Chaparral player directly in front of the open net.

However, Basic goalie Jessica Magro managed to get an open palm on the rebound shot — diving from her knees — to save the day.

GREEN VALLEY

The Gators rolled past Rancho 13-0 on Tuesday at Green Valley High School in their final home game of the season.

Jennifer Breeden led the way with five goals, Cosette Joffis added three, Lauren Castronova found the back of the net twice and Sarah Sillitoe, Vicki Porter and Jaime Barto each scored once.

"It was actually a good game," Green Valley coach Megan Johnson said. "We worked on fine tuning for our big game on Thursday [against Chaparral]."

SILVERADO

The Skyhawks were defeated by Valley 2-1 on Tuesday at Silverado High School.

Junior midfielder LeAnna Brink scored Silverado's lone goal.

Gators clinch share of Sunrise in wrestling

Gary Thiessen
News Staff Writer

Green Valley clinched at least a tie for the Sunrise Division title in wrestling on Tuesday with a win over Chaparral.

Silverado was also victorious on Tuesday, while Basic lost.

Here's a look take a look at the action.

BASIC

Basic hosted Rancho in its final home match of the year, losing to the Rams 42-33.

Despite forfeiting the first six weight classes the Wolves made another spirited comeback from a 36-0 deficit.

Aaron Martinez wrestling in the 140-pound class started the comeback assault with a 20-8 major decision victory.

After losing the next match, the Wolves won the next six weight class matches.

Ray Gonzales [152] scored a 5-3 decision victory, Jeremiah Boucher [160] came out on top of a tough match 11-9 and Jason Blakely [171] scored a technical fall 22-7 to cut the Wolves' deficit to 42-15.

Donnie Petrie [189] continued the Basic charge with a third period pin and Jason Burt [215] followed with a second period pin. Chris Render [275] recorded a forfeit to close out the scoring.

"Our kids continue to maintain a positive attitude with each match," Basic coach Jim Duschen said. "I am proud of the way they have handled their opponents in the heavier weight classes."

GREEN VALLEY

The Gators kept their undefeated Sunrise division record

SHOWDOWN

•WHO: Basic at Green Valley

•WHERE: Green Valley High School, tonight, 7 p.m.

•WHAT THE MATCH MEANS: Whenever the Wolves and Gators get together in any sport, the event has extra meaning. Wrestling is no different. The seventh-place Wolves, travel to the first place Gators with upset in the minds.

•KEYS FOR THE WOLVES: Basic has a difficult time fielding competitive wrestlers in the lighter weights. It will be essential for the Wolves to score big with pins in the heavier weight classes. "We can build momentum for the Zone tournament with a strong showing against the Gators," Basic coach Jim Duschen said.

•KEYS FOR THE GATORS: Green Valley has a very strong lineup in both light and heavier weights. When the match moves to the heavier weight classes, the Gators must avoid being pinned and scoring whenever possible. "The title isn't clinched yet and we won't let our squad look past Basic to the Sunrise title," Green Valley coach Carl Brum said.

intact with a 46-16 win over Chaparral.

Brian Teel [112] scored an 8-1 decision and Curtis Johnson [119] won a hard fought decision 12-11 as Green Valley jumped out to a quick 12-0 lead.

Billy Love [125] kept Green Valley on a roll with a 7-6 decision victory. Kevin Walton [130] then scored an 11-1 major decision victory. Jack Hay [135] and Chris Gardiner [140] each scored forfeits to make the score 31-0 in favor of the Gators.

Luke Lichtenstein [160] then scored a second period pin followed by Mike Elson's 12-5 decision victory to close out the scoring for Green Valley.

"This was a good victory for us, but we need to focus on our next opponent, Green Valley coach Carl Brum said. "Basic is very tough in the middle and heavier weights. They will provide good competition for our team."

SILVERADO

Silverado won the first eight matches in defeating Eldorado 47-24 at home.

"This was an important win for us because the victory gives us momentum going into our final match and the Zone tournament in two weeks," Silverado coach Bob Clements said.

Dustin Clark, wrestling in the 103-pound class, opened the scoring with a 13-2 major decision victory and Michael Castle [112] scored an impressive third period pin.

Lance Hendron [119] added a hard fought 8-7 decision to put Silverado up 14-0.

Sean Argleban [125] scored points on a forfeit followed by a Jeremy Burr [130] second period pin. Brock LaPosto [135] continued his fine run by scoring a 7-1 decision, making the score 29-0.

Ryan Brennan [140] made quick work of his opponent with a first period pin. After a Travis Young [145] forfeit, Mike Johnson [160] followed with a 6-3 decision victory increasing the Skyhawk lead to 41-6.

Andy Socha [171] closed out the Silverado scoring with a 12-0 whitewash of his opponent.

Carollo Engineers appoints Fraser

Carollo Engineers announced recently that John Fraser, a principal in the water/wastewater engineering company, has been named principal-in-charge of operations at their Las Vegas office.

The announcement was made by G. William Knopf, a Carollo principal and chairman of the company's management committee.

"John brings over 16 years of planning and design experience with small and large projects to the management of our Las Vegas office," Knopf said. "We are pleased that such a talented and seasoned manager will be leading our Las Vegas operations as we continue to expand our water and wastewater engineering services in the region and grow with Southern Nevada."

Fraser joined Carollo in 1986 and had previously worked with the Los Angeles County Sanitation Districts. He was named a Carollo associate in 1994 and became a principal in the company earlier this year. Fraser will head the Las Vegas office, 4220 So. Maryland Parkway, #412.

Carollo's Las Vegas office opened in 1990 to serve the growing water and wastewater engineering needs of local and regional utilities. However, according to Fraser, Carollo's project experience in the Las Vegas area goes back to the 1950s.

Starting with the planning/location study and the design for the city's first sewage treatment plant in 1956 and the design of several major sewage interceptor facilities in the 1960s, Carollo engineers and construction managers have successfully completed over 40 projects in the region.

"Carollo Engineers continues to provide engineering services for major water and wastewater facilities in Southern Nevada," Fraser said. "Our current projects include planning and design for expansion of the Clark County Sanitation District's Central Plant and design and construction management for increased capacity and the largest ozone disinfection facility in the U.S. at the Alfred Merritt Smith Water

"The goal of the expansion to 600 million gallon per day (mgd) and the addition of the ozone disinfection system is to provide a safe, consistent and reliable water supply for Southern Nevada," Fraser said.

Fraser's experience includes the planning and design of water and wastewater treatment and water reuse facilities incorporating state-of-the-art treatment systems such as solids contact aeration, continuous backwash filtration, ultra-high efficiency aeration, egg-shaped anaerobic digestion and hypochlorination.

He has managed several projects that included the evaluation and design of facilities for potable water production and wastewater treatment suitable for discharge to surface water, ocean outfall and land application.

He has planned and designed wastewater reuse projects ranging in size from 1.2 to 55 mgd and wastewater treatment facilities from 1 to 300 mgd.

Fraser's other areas of technical expertise include disinfection, biosolids handling, and odor control assessments and scrubbing system designs, in addition to extensive experience in construction support services.

Fraser, a registered civil engineer, holds a master's degree in environmental engineering from the University of Illinois and a bachelor's degree in civil engineering from the California State Polytechnic University. He is a member in the Water Environment Federation, the American Water Works Association, the Water Reuse Association and the California Water Environment Association where he has been chairman of their research subcommittee since 1994.

Carollo Engineers is a leading expert in the planning, design and construction management of water and wastewater projects for public agencies, municipalities, private developers and industrial companies throughout the United States. Carollo has offices in 17 cities, including Las Vegas and Reno, Nev.

American Builders features new patio cover

American Builders is no stranger to the growing community. They opened their doors in 1978 at 1803 Western Ave. and have remained at the same location for 21 years. Their varied products have been quality-perfected over the years, with new ones added as the need emerged.

The most recent addition has been the Venetian Adjustable Louvered Patio Cover. This fully-adjustable patio cover is designed and engineered for total sun control. The louvers can be adjusted for the different seasons to either block out 100% of the sun or allow partial or full sun in, as the seasons change.

Their long list of customers (more than 100,000) over the last 21 years includes Liberace, David Copperfield and other show business and professional individuals. Also included are most of the major home builders in the area, realty management companies responsible for apartment complexes, private contractors tasked to coordinate work on custom homes and average homeowners.

They are licensed, bonded, and insured, with 30 years of building experience.

Artist Hортt to exhibit work

Local artist Merrilee Hортt will exhibit her work at Community College of Southern Nevada Art Gallery through Feb. 25. There will be a lecture from 5-6 p.m., tonight, followed by a gallery reception from 6-8 p.m. For more information, call 651-4113.

Hортt is a collagist, but not in the traditional sense. She assembles images which she draw/paints on her paper. By doing this she can conceive of new associations created from previously unconnected objects.

She creates a world of curious and mysterious relationships, questions our experiences or makes us chuckle.

Hортt has shown extensively in Nevada and the Southwest. She studied at University of Nevada Las Vegas, where she presently teaches.

CCSN Art Gallery is free to the public and is wheelchair-accessible. Gallery hours are 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., Saturday.

Credit Counseling Center helps holiday recovery

Many of us have fond memories of the recent holiday season. However, those memories may fade quickly when the holiday bills start pouring in. Are you sure how you'll pay them?

"Sometimes people enjoy the end-of-the-year holiday season only to become dismayed when they see how much they have spent," said Geoff Quillen, manager of Credit Counseling Centers of Southern Nevada. "However, consumers can take positive steps right away to help solve the financial problem."

If you have overspent during the holidays, you should first figure out how to get out of debt and then set up a savings plan to make next year's holiday season debt-free. These tips may help achieve both goals:

- Make paying off debts a priority. Develop a plan to repay all debts as soon as possible. If you don't know how to develop a debt repayment plan, contact Credit Counseling Centers of Southern Nevada to make an appointment with a counselor that can assist you.

- Know exactly each month where you are in your debt repayment plan. Pay more than the minimum amount due to reduce the finance charges and fees.

- Check your spending habits and cut back on non-essential spending. Use cash as often as possible for purchases. Use credit cards only for emergency purchases.

For help with debt management problems or budgeting, contact Credit Counseling Centers of Southern Nevada. CCC is a non-profit, community service agency that provides confidential counseling, education and debt management programs to financially troubled consumers.

Schedule an appointment with a Credit Counseling Centers counselor by calling 564-2020. Located at 309 W. Lake Mead Drive in Henderson, CCC is a non-profit United Way-supported agency and a division of Family Counseling Service of Northern Nevada.

Cabot, another studio attorney, at which time he had no comment.

Even before that payment was to be made, Urban said Black Mountain Studios was to begin vertical construction on the first phase — a 119,000-square-foot building with a sound stage — to ensure the project was progressing. That also hasn't commenced.

Urban said the failure to do so within one year of closing escrow on the land, which was January 1998, was the second breach.

Larsen told the Council they are ready to begin construction immediately. "We are here before you to put up or shut up," he said, adding that they have construction and engineer managers lined up to begin the project.

Councilman Andy Hafen told the studio he was puzzled at their status.

"At first blush, I thought this was going to be a great project, but why at the 11th hour do you all of a sudden have this capitalization?"

Most of the residents in attendance applauded the Council's actions. Many from the nearby neighborhoods expressed concerns that a $200 million film studio would breed undue traffic, noise and air pollution resulting from the estimated 1.5 million annual tourists to the area.

George Larsen (no relation to Paul), vice president of the Mission Hills Residents Affiliation, had been fighting alongside many of his neighbors to keep the studio out of their backyard for more than a year.

"So far, we feel very gratified," he said after the decision. "We'll see what happens next, though."

The Council also ruled 4-1 in denial "without prejudice" on a planned-unit development (PUD) for the studio's first phase perhaps because they do not have building permits for two additional free standing sound stages. Clark cast the lone dissent.

The ruling on "without prejudice" allows the applicant to resubmit their PUD tentative map without time restrictions after they receive their building permits, which Black Mountain officials said could be obtained within 30 days.

The first phase has been proposed for the corner of Dawson Avenue and the Union Pacific Railroad tracks. The first phase was expected to cost $3 million, Paul Larsen said.

After the meeting, Paul Larsen said he wasn't sure if his client was interested in developing the first phase without being able to construct the five other stages down the road, adding that they are going to spend the following days discussing what their next plan of action will be.

The studio only has title of the first 20 acres and the other 65 remains in city possession.

Chamber Symphony presents Valentine's Day Gala

Suzanne Farace stars as Mimi

The Nevada Chamber Symphony invites the public to a special Valentine's Day celebration at 8 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 14, at the Clark County Library.

Singers and dancers from Bally's "Jubilee," the NCS Theater Orchestra and guests artists are throwing a surprise birthday party for Mimi DuBois, the proprietress of the Cafe D'Amour, who left the Paris Opera House to open the cafe five years ago after she met Henri.

Soprano Suzanne Farace

stars as Mimi, with Dana Rogers, lead singer from "Jubilee" as Jeanette, her best friend. Featured artists include the NCS Theater Orchestra and Combo, the NCS String Quartet and the Serenate Violoncelle Trio.

Dances choreographed by Susan McNamara and Marlene Mueller for the "Jubilee" ensemble will highlight the afternoon.

After the performance, the Nevada Chamber Symphony Guild will host a catered reception of light hors d'oeuvres with gourmet sweets. The Guild's Valentine Boutique will offer a selection of gifts. Ladies attending the performance will receive a long-stemmed chocolate rose to commemorate the occasion.

Proceeds from the gala will benefit the Symphony, which is completing its 14th season in the Las Vegas Valley.

Tickets are $50 per person, or $150 for a theater party of four.

ronmental issue because it maintains water flow to prevent mounding of water in the ground.

If water mounds, or builds up, it will likely reach the surface and even possibly mix with the much lower drinking water table, Serdoz said.

"We were worried that water was going to surface anywhere," he said.

If ground water is not handled by the unfinished sub-drain system, it may likely begin to mound up, and could possibly surface and mix with drinking water.

"It might modify the ground water table," Serdoz said. "It might be much higher."

Studies at the site have shown higher than normal levels of radioactivity present in water flowing under the Palm City site. The state maintains the levels are not a threat to residents' health as long as water does not surface and they are not exposed to the water.

Environmentalists indicate other problems exist in the amount of chemicals, including the rocket fuel component perchlorate, mixed in with the shallow ground water table.

Rhodes is currently in the process of a 30-day review of its sub-drain system with NDEP engineers. No matter what development occurs at the site, NDEP will assure the sub-drain is built to help protect the environment, Serdoz said.

formation, he said.

"This person's crazy enough to do it again," Patterson said.

Eyewitness accounts at the Eastern Avenue store have led to several clues about the suspect, he said. Possible video surveillance may also lead to additional information.

A small fire was quickly smothered by workers in the Green Valley store and firefighters extinguished the smoldering merchandise before the store was threatened, said Don Spellman, senior fire prevention investigator for the Henderson Fire Department.

He said the Henderson Fire Department does not handle its own investigations and the incident has been turned over to Henderson Police. Police investigators were not available for comment.

"Once I determine it to be arson, I call the police," he said, adding it is typical procedure to hand matters over to the investigations division of HPD.

Spellman indicated although there was not much evidence at the Henderson Albertson's, he believes a culprit may be found. Possible video surveillance may lead to further clues in the Henderson fire.

"I went to the Albertson's on Eastern and spoke with [county officials]," Spellman said, adding the two blazes are almost identical in nature.

Meeting people — online

HIT OR MISS — Some people such as Allan and Joy Mallari have formed successful relationships via the Internet while others, like the couple featured above, remain anonymous or hopelessly mismatched.

Cyber bars: The 'Cheers' of the 1990s

Kevin Ferguson
News Staff Writer

As Allan Mallari turns on his computer in the morning, it instantly informs him "You've got mail."

The message from his wife, Joy, in Southern California just says "Good morning. I just got to work. Talk to you later — 9:17 a.m."

Over the course of the workday, they usually communicate via e-mail about a dozen times. "We can't chat while working, but we can e-mail," Allan, 25, says.

Allan is the president of AlSoft Micro Solutions Inc., a Las Vegas-based Web designing company. Joy, 32, works for an insurance company in Los Angeles County.

Their method of communication during work hours is the same method that introduced the two to each other about 19 months ago. They met in an Internet chat room — the growing social scene of the 1990s.

"We just started sending messages in the chatline along with a group of other [strangers]," Allan said.

One day, they were two of about a dozen "cybergeeks" sending messages on a network computer screen. A few days later, they recognized each other's code names in the chat room and continued their previous conversations.

"After a week, I asked her to e-mail me her picture. After that, I asked her to send me her phone number," Allan said.

They spoke for about five minutes during their initial phone call. But after that, they continued to talk more on the Internet, rather than by phone "because it's more fun," he said.

Now they use one-on-one chat rooms, or just regular e-mail for communicating through the 'net. They send each other pictures and miscellaneous files they find while browsing other Web sites.

"Sometimes she just sends me one sentence e-mails telling me what she had for lunch. Other times, she tells me a story," Allan says.

After a few months of electronic communication and brief phone calls, he drove to Southern California to meet her. That led to frequent weekend trips from her to Las Vegas. And after five months of the initial chat room conversation, the two got married in Las Vegas.

CHATROOMS GROWING IN POPULARITY

Chat rooms have existed since the inception of the Internet, but didn't open to the masses until about three years ago.

Although unable to give specific numbers, Doug Hirsch, senior producer of Yahoo! Communities, said their chat rooms may have "tens of thousands of people on at any given time."

Hirsch has been managing chat rooms for the past three years, which involves designing and improving concepts behind chat rooms.

"A few years ago, it was a pain to set up a chat room," he said. "But now it's as reliable as picking up a phone."

He said categories range from nearly everything, but the most popular are entertainment, romance, sports and teens. "It's really become popular with kids who don't have a car. [The Internet] is serving as their social scene," Hirsch said.

As a result, peak hours tend to be the hours when teens get home from school, he said. Heavy traffic in cyberspace is also during the evening hours.

One of the elements of chat rooms is a "buddy list," which is a way to keep track of when friends log on. "You can just be browsing a Web site and not in a chat room, and your computer will signal you if a friend logs on," Hirsch said.

Some Internet Service Providers (ISP) allow you to attach your profile, equipped with a photo, background information, interests and favorite Web sites. This allows people you chat with the luxury of learning things you want them to know.

CHILD ABDUCTION THROUGH THE 'NET

Since Internet chat rooms have grown in popularity in the last few years, the workload of FBI investigators searching for child abductors has increased.

In many cases, kids, thinking they are talking to other kids in chat rooms, have been lured away from their homes. FBI special agent John Mesisca, who heads Operation Innocent Images, a Baltimore-based task force related to child abductions, said those type of people prey on the weak.

"These children [victimized on the Internet] are searching for something, whether it's money or friendship or anything. Then when they find someone who cares, they become easy prey," Mesisca said.

Mesisca said in one case, a guy shipped a case of beer to a minor he met over the Internet.

In many of the initial conversations, the soon-to-be abductor pretends to be roughly the same age of the child. "Once they gain the child's trust, they come clean and say, 'I'm 32. Is that OK?'" Mesisca said.

"These are guys who will try anything. Many of them are also involved in child pornography. It's almost one in the same," he added.

The FBI heads many of these investigations because it often involves interstate commerce, or crimes committed across state lines. Mesisca said often when an arrest is made in such a case, local crimes are found which brings in local law enforcement agencies.

As more and more people get connected to the Internet, the number child abductions related to chat rooms, continues to rise.

"We've made hundreds and hundreds of arrests, but the problem continues to increase because of more Internet users," Mesisca said.

The task force was formed in 1993 after the FBI discovered a child they were searching for in the Baltimore area, named Junior Burdynski, was lured away from home from someone he had met in a chat room.

"That investigation made us aware that there are other cases like that out there," Mesisca said.

The Burdynski case remains unsolved.

To combat this growing problem, the FBI, local law enforcement agencies and ISPs are trying to educate parents and children about these dangers.

Some ISPs such as American Online offer software to block certain e-mail and pornographic Web sites. Pamphlets with such information are also available through these agencies.

Legislature uses technology for easier access

State Senate Majority Leader William J. Raggio and Assembly Speaker Joseph E. Dini, Jr., recently announced a series of technical advances to allow an unprecedented level of access by the public to the legislative process.

The centerpiece for these developments is the fastest-growing source of public information in the world: the Internet.

The respective leaders of the Legislature's two houses, the Senate and the Assembly, have decided that the audio of all legislative hearings will be broadcast live over the Internet on the Legislature's Web site (at "http://www.leg.state.nv.us").

"This means that the citizens of this state can listen to any committee meeting or floor session from their homes," Dini said. "We are always looking for ways to involve the public in the legislative process," Raggio said.

The technology was tested in one of the hearing rooms during the interim between the last legislative session and the upcoming session, and was used to broadcast the Governor's State of the State Address from the Assembly Chambers.

The web site also includes information about each legislator, agendas and membership are also available on the site, as are all bills considered by the legislature and the list of Bill Draft Requests.

This information was also available last session on the legislative Web site.

Though bills have been available on the Web site in the past, this service has also been enhanced. A person accessing the site can view bills using a popular document-viewing format ("pdf files") and program, which will display the bills virtually exactly as they appear in printed form.

Even if a person does not have the appropriate free software to view these files, the bills are also available in basic form ("html" files) that any Internet user can view. Both forms of the bills now include page and line numbers of the bills, allowing ready reference to the printed bill. Pre-filed bills for the upcoming session are already available to the public through the Web site.

The bills will be available on the web site before they are available in printed form. They will be posted on the Web site within a few hours after they are introduced or amended, though the printed version generally isn't available until the following morning.

Access to the Web is not the only way that citizens can participate in the legislative process.

Videoconferencing of meetings between the Legislative Building in Carson City and the Grant Sawyer State Office Building in Las Vegas is now available from any hearing room in the Legislative Building.

One of the most exciting developments in the area of public access arose independent of legislative action. Five-minute interviews with legislators will be aired on CNN Headline News every night during session. The Nevada State Cable Telecommunications Association (NSCTA) has arranged for conducting the interviews and broadcasting them through local cable providers.

Cox Communications in Las Vegas will air the interviews at 5:25 p.m., 6:25 p.m., 7:25 p.m. and 8:25 p.m.

Raggio indicated that "this will be an excellent opportunity for people to be informed of the activity of the legislature — so many people watch CNN for their news."

The interviews will be conducted on a weekly basis to keep the topics timely, and shown two nights in a row.

The two major public broadcasting stations in the state, KLVX Channel 10 in Las Vegas and KNPB Channel 5 in Reno, have produced a weekly one-hour show on the legislature for the past few sessions. Rosemary McCarthy of KNPB and Mitch Fox of KLVX co-host "Capitol Issues."

Right questions can help parents with child's success

One of the primary concerns for parents today, as it always has been, is making sure their child is succeeding in school. In the past, success has primarily meant doing well academically, but today it is widely recognized that there are many aspects to a child's school experience that help contribute to his or her overall development into a successful adult.

Social, emotional and intellectual skills are formed during a child's early years in school, and monitoring how a child is progressing in all of these areas is vital in ensuring a well-rounded education.

Many parents find it difficult when meeting with their child's elementary school teacher to find ways of assessing their child's development in these various areas.

ARAMARK Educational Resources, one of the nation's premier educational service providers, has developed the following list of questions for parents to ask when meeting with their child's teacher throughout the school year to help them more effectively assess their child's development:

- Academic Growth
- Is my child completing homework and projects on time?
- How well does my child work independently?
- How does my child participate in team projects?
- Describe my child's work habits in your classroom.
- What activities or subjects seem to really interest or excite my child?

- Are there any areas where my child needs additional focus or assistance?

Relationship Development

- How well does my child relate to other children in the class?

- Are there opportunities for my child to work with children in other classes or children who may be older?

- Are there other adults in the school who may play a role in my child's growth and development?

- What types of activities do you think my child is ready to explore, such as a special interest club or sports activity?

- How can I best support my child's academic and social growth at home?

- In what ways could I contribute to your classroom?

- Be sure to share with the teacher factors at home that may affect your child's school day. For example, is there a new sibling, an illness in the family, or a change in the living or parenting situation at home.

ARAMARK Educational Resources (AER), based in Golden, Colo., is one of the nation's premier educational service providers. Building on nearly 30 years of experience offering pre-school and school-age learning programs, AER has expanded its services into four divisions, offering private education, educational partnerships to businesses and schools, and early care and education.

Voyager, Medallion join to form educational powerhouse

Voyager Expanded Learning and Medallion School Partnerships recently announced a collaboration to provide comprehensive extended-day learning programs.

The collaboration will combine the Voyager content, curriculum and training with the Medallion staffing and management expertise to offer elementary schools nationwide the highest quality after-school and summer programs available.

Voyager provides curriculum and staff development for public elementary and middle schools nationally. Medallion provides curriculum, staffing and management of after-school programs on elementary school campuses across the country.

This alliance will allow schools to take advantage of the Voyager academic-rich curriculum, while not having to worry about the staffing and management issues of administering the program.

"This collaboration brings together the strengths of both Medallion and Voyager to offer an unprecedented opportunity to provide parent-pay after-school and summer programs that no other provider in the U.S. can match," said Duane V. Larson, president of ARAMARK Educational Resources, of which Medallion is a division.

"This will be a powerful alliance," said Voyager Chairman and Founder Randy Best. "Voyager and Medallion have been pioneers in extended-day learning programs since 1994 and 1992, respectively. We now have the opportunity together to improve, on a nationwide basis, the quality of tuition-based after-school and summer programs that elementary schools can provide to their parents."

Voyager programs, curricula, and instructional strategies and practices are based on solid educational research and are aligned with national and state-level established standards. The programs are enhanced by key collaborative relationships with several of the nation's leading educational resources, including the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), Discovery Channel and Smithsonian Institution.

Medallion School Partnerships offer customized education and recreation programs for school-age and preschool children on the premises of elementary schools. These programs are tailored to meet the needs and space configurations of each individual school. The most popular program in the Medallion arena is the Champions before- and after-school programs, which provides challenging and fun learning activities in an organized and safe environment, without children having to leave the school premises.

Operations for the joint effort will begin in summer and fall of 1999. The two companies currently serve more than 250,000 children in about 2,000 schools in 41 states.

For additional information, visit the Voyager Expanded Learning Web site at www.iamvoyager.com or the Medallion School Partnerships Web site at www.Medallionsp.com. Or contact Voyager, 888-399-1995 or Medallion 303-526-3293.

Nellis to host Air Force-wide medical assessment

Nearly 500 active duty Air Force, Reserve and Air National Guard medical members will soon gather here to participate in Air Combat Command's Form, Fit and Function Follow-on Assessment.

Form, Fit and Function Follow-on Assessment, or F-4, is a 40-day evaluation to thoroughly assess the functional capabilities and limitations of the Air Force Medical Service's 27 new medical specialty sets. Specialty sets are specialized modules that include dental, mental health, and ophthalmology care.

The F-4 begins Monday and runs through March 12.

According to Capt. Bill Tyra, F-4 coordinator from ACC's Command Surgeon Medical Readiness & Logistics Division, Nellis is one of the best bases to stage this assessment. "Nellis has the resources — the nearby exercise area, large military medical facility (Mike O'Callaghan Federal Hospital) and necessary equipment."

"Having these resources nearby saves the Air Force money," he said.

"This is a test run for the specialty sets to make sure we have the right equipment, right tools and right mix of people for each set," said Tyra.

Tyra compared F-4 to a motor company's test drive of a new model of vehicle.

"We're making sure these sets do what we need them to do before we send them out to Air Force units around the world," Tyra said. "If they do what they're supposed to do, and we have the proper equipment and manning for each set, they'll get a seal of validation — they'll pass the test."

F-4, which takes place at Camp Cobra, Nellis' training site, involves the deployment, employment and redeployment of personnel and equipment. The evaluation allows medical personnel from all of the Air Force's major commands to interact and train together while, at the same time, hone their ability to assemble medical shelters and equipment in an austere environment. Medics will also get an opportunity to work in a field hospital and treat both real and simulated patients.

The evaluation consists of six phases, beginning with the establishment of a small clinic and incrementally building up to a 114-bed Air Force theater hospital.

Ex's girlfriend forces friendship 'underground'

Hi Carolyn!

My really good male friend, whom I once dated for five-plus years, has a girlfriend. My friend and I mutually ended our relationship three years ago so that we could remain friends, and we now get along great. My friend and his girlfriend have dated for two years. She's nice, cute and, most of all, good for him! The problem: She is freaked out about my role as friend. She is interested in terminating our friendship. My friend and I talk on the phone or via e-mail about once a week. Because of her feelings, our friendship has gone underground," as in, we talk at work now. I have no ill feelings toward this woman—actually, I'm glad my friend is happy. I understand she is insecure, upset with the relationship history, and she is young. But what can I do to make this situation improve? I wouldn't mind having two friends — him and her. Ideas?

—Anonymous

I'll do my part, and suggest that any insecure little honeys out there who are demanding

TELL ME ABOUT IT

that their boyfriends end their friendships with other women should grow the hell up. Accepting his female friends puts a woman a step closer to Ideal Womanhood, jealousy a step closer to being some guy's whiny, forgettable ex.

For your part, you can invite the insecure little succubus to lunch and declare outright how happy you are that your friend has found someone he likes. (The fact that she feels entitled to torpedo any friendship of his that takes attention away from her means she can't be good for him or for anybody, but leave that out for the time being.) Then say you really hope you can be friends, and make a convincing show of noncompetitive maturity by inviting her places occasionally, without your friend/her boyfriend.

You will likely accomplish one of three things: 1. She will learn by example, grow the hell up and stop competing with you. 2.

She will still hate you but will be too ashamed to object to the friendship. 3. She will continue her efforts to sabotage you, and will look flat-out evil. If she rejects the lunch offer outright, skip straight to 3. Good luck.

Dear Carolyn:

My problem is probably cliché, but I'm a first-year college student and it's new to me. In high school I never had any friendships with guys, and my crushes were dust particles in a refrigerator. (I had no romantic interests.) I am also a bad conversationalist, period. Mainly I bore people with my bland, reserved, not-much-to-entertain self.

So it's hard for me to understand why this guy pursues me. We've gone out a few times (on his suggestion, usually with other people), and we send each other e-mail, so I've slowly begun to feel comfortable around him. It hurts to know my people skills suck. He usually does most of the talking/entertaining. We went to a dance together, and at times I felt like a whore because the event was purely physical, anti-intellectual. Afterwards we spent the rest of the night talking, but he did most of it.

Potential friends slip through my fingers so often, Carolyn, because I can't tell stories, be witty, relate... How can I learn to converse entertainingly and be interesting?

—No-Spice Girl

I saw what you wrote in the subject field of your e-mail — "Sparklytalk: She so blank" — skipped 10 other messages to read yours, and decided not even to try to be as zippy in my answer. So, no, you are not boring. But you are petrified by what people think of you, and so you think way too much about what you're going to say, and you say either careful, dull things or awkward, forced things or nothing at all.

You are also a freshman in college, and that's what freshmen do. (Except for the rare, confident ones, who scare you and everybody else into a social coma.)

I've been waiting a long time to give this particular advice, so please take it to heart: Do Nothing. You have an agile mind, entertaining thoughts and a fresh way of expressing them. You also have at least one person who is taking the time to find that out. In the meantime, he gets a date who actually listens to him — guy bliss — and you get a chance to relax and build your confidence. Build it, and the realization will come that how witty and cool you appear to other people is of zero consequence. Believe this, and you'll find yourself busting out with your own offbeat brand of sparkly speech. In public even. Hang in there.

—Hello:

Within the past year I broke up with my long-term girlfriend. The breakup (she initiated) was ugly for both of us. But whatever, it's done, it was better in the long run. However, we had a dog we both loved, and now I would like to see him every now and then. She is very resistant to letting me take him for the day, etc. Do you think it is unfair of me to expect to see the dog periodically?

—Jimmy
Look, you're much better off without the scrofulous beast.

Losing your dog, though, that's tragic.

Maybe joint custody of Jimmy Jr. is too much to ask, but I'm surprised your ex hasn't at least agreed to free dog-sitting when she goes away. Phrasing your offer that way might make it tempting enough to outweigh what I suspect is her problem: the screaming, wound-reopening horror of interacting with you on a regular basis.

If she resists, ask to see the dog anyway, and keep asking until she figures out that seeing the dog is what will make you go away. She might agree to that.

Clark County Health District Center dedicated to former Chief Health Officer

The Clark County Health District's main center, 625 Shadow Lane, was officially renamed the Otto H. Ravenholt, M.D. Public Health Center at the District Board of Health Meeting on Jan. 28.

Before retiring in 1997, Ravenholt served as the Health District's first Board appointed chief health officer for Clark County.

To continue to meet the expanding health needs of the community the Health District recently opened its newest center located in the Sunrise Market Place Shopping Center, 560 N. Nellis. This facility offers health services to the East Las Vegas community including immunizations, well baby check-ups, birth and death records and health cards. Additionally, David Rowles, the Health District's director of administrative services, announced plans to begin construction of a new facility that will serve residents of North Las Vegas.

The opening of these new facilities will allow the Clark County Health District to continue to meet the growing needs of the community as it provides preventive health services, environmental programs and health enhancement activities for the people of Southern Nevada.

Nevada's millennium celebration plans revealed

Nevada hotel and tourism leaders attending the 15th annual Governor's Conference on Travel & Tourism revealed plans for celebrating the 2000 Millennium with events ranging from amusement to adventure and dazzling to daring.

Nevada's 15-month millennium celebration will begin on Oct. 31, 1999, the state's 135th anniversary of statehood admission, and last until Martin Luther King Day on Jan. 15, 2001, making it the world's longest New Year's bash.

"We created a 15-month celebration to give visitors plenty of time to arrange trips to Nevada and to choose from a great variety of activities spanning all seasons of the year," said Nevada Commission on Tourism (NCOT) Executive Director Tom Tait.

"The millennium is an extraordinary event that few people ever experience," Tait said. "People will want to do something special to celebrate so they'll always remember."

NCOT, acting as a state clearinghouse for Nevada's millennium events, has developed a toll-free millennium telephone number, 877-2000-NEV, and a millennium calendar on its website, www.2000nevada.com, for potential visitors to learn more about Nevada's 15-month celebration.

Many existing events, such as the classic car festival, Hot August Nights in Reno, the Shakespeare Festival at Lake Tahoe, the Cowboy Poetry Gathering in Elko and the National Finals Rodeo in Las Vegas, may add a millennium angle to make it a memorable event for the Nevada 2000 celebration.

Visual distress signals for boaters

From time to time, I have written about signaling devices we all should carry on our boats and today's column will address the topic of visual devices.

Approved visual signals come in three categories: daylight, night time and both day and night. All should have the Coast Guard approval stamp or be certified by the manufacturer to meet the specifications of the Coast Guard. Some devices have expiration dates, so check to see if your dates are current and if not, replace as soon as you can. I had some highway fuses that were years past the date so I took them to my cabin to start campfires and they all worked perfectly but don't take a chance on the lake.

While I would estimate a majority of boaters need assistance during the daylight hours, it is the prudent skipper that has both day and night visual devices. (Notice I used the plural.) Orange smoke bombs are great for daylight but you should have a strong electric light or hand-held flares that are good for day or night. Previously I have written that I have pistol-projected signal flares and I carry extra shells. However, these are dangerous and should be treated as such. Those hand-held flares burn with a very hot flames and even the ash can result in a serious burn so be very careful any time you discharge a signal device.

BOATING WITH RAY

A simple daytime signal could be a red flag or signal mirror — that is if a fellow boater is close enough to see where you are stranded. Maybe attach it to your paddle or boat hook to gain more height. Even waving your PFD (a spare one, not the one you are wearing) is better than nothing. It's a good idea to be certain that someone is in a position to see your signal before you start setting off flares or waving a flag.

Hopefully, you will never have to use any type of emergency signal but I believe that having them on board and knowing what to use and when will certainly help to keep our lake safe. Remember no one signaling device is ideal for all conditions.

Another date to mark on your calendar is Wednesday, March 3, when the Las Vegas Power Squadron will begin their, safe boating class. The free class will be held at the Cashman Jr. High School, 4622 W. Desert Inn. The class will start at 7 p.m.

There will be a class held for kids 6 to 11 years of age the very same night. Call Clint Moore, 255-3590, to register.

Until next time... keep your bilge dry.

MATH You Can Do It!...

Exponentials, x^y by Bill Hanlon

bhanlon@accessnv.com

Exponential - is a number with an exponent.

In the number 5^3 , read five to the third power, the 3 is called the exponent, the 5 is the base.

5^3 → exponent
base

Exponent - tells you how many times to write the base as a factor.

Example: Evaluate 3^4

The exponent tells you how many times to write the base as a factor. So, we have

$$3^4 = 3 \times 3 \times 3 \times 3 = 81$$

Some neat patterns develop when you multiply or divide exponentials. Let's look at a couple and see if we can find them.

Example: Simplify $2^4 \times 2^3$

Expanding, I have $(2 \times 2 \times 2 \times 2) \times (2 \times 2 \times 2)$

Notice, I am multiplying 2 by itself seven times, therefore $2^4 \times 2^3 = 2^7$

Try $5^2 \times 5^4$. Did you get 5^6 ? Now look at the two problems, do you see a pattern? Try to evaluate $7^{18} \times 7^3$ in your head.

If you got 7^{21} , then you must have seen the pattern.

In math, shortcuts like this are often called

Rule 1 When you multiply exponentials with the SAME bases, you add the exponents.

Using that rule, we can simplify $4^5 \times 4^6$ very quickly. Since the bases are the same, all we need do is add the exponents.

Let's see if we can find any patterns when we divide exponentials.

Example: Simplify $7^5 \div 7^2$

Writing that out using the definition, I have $$\frac{7 \times 7 \times 7 \times 7 \times 7}{7 \times 7}$$

By dividing out the 7's, we are left with

$$7 \times 7 \times 7 = 7^3$$

If we did more examples, we'd see another pattern develop. Try this problem, $4^8 \div 4^3$. Did you get 4^5 ?

If you did, that would lead us to a second rule.

Rule 2 When you divide exponentials with the SAME bases, you subtract the exponents.

Example: Simplify $5^9 \div 5^6$

Since the bases are the same, all I need do is subtract the exponents, the answer is 5^3 .

Experiences will be hands-on, and weekend activities will be connected with the maze.

The new exhibit will only be at the museum from Feb. 1 to March 1 and will be located in the International Wildlife Room. The Mystery Maze Adventure is included in the price of general admission which is $5 for adults; $4 for seniors, students and military; and $2.50 for children 4-12 and free for children three years

Smithsonian exhibit on amphibians opens at UNLV's Barrick Museum

"Vanishing Amphibians," a Smithsonian traveling exhibit that examines amphibian biology and worldwide declines in amphibian populations, will be on display at the UNLV Marjorie Barrick Museum of Natural History Jan. 30-March 13.

The exhibit, which was developed by the Smithsonian National Museum of Natural History and the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service, also explores the international effort to better understand the extent and causes of these losses in amphibian populations.

In the mid-1980s, scientists identified nearly a dozen populations of amphibian species that were in serious decline or had disappeared altogether. "Vanishing Amphibians" offers several reasons for these disappearances, including habitat loss, contamination of breeding sites by agricultural chemicals, and the thinning of the ozone layer.

The Barrick Museum is open weekdays, 8 a.m. to 4:45 p.m. and Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Admission is free. For more information, call 895-3381.

Secondary textbooks displayed

Various secondary textbooks proposed for use in the Clark County School District will be available for public display on Feb. 11.

The textbooks may be reviewed from 7 a.m. to 2 p.m. Feb. 11 in the CCSD Curriculum and Instruction offices, 601 N. Ninth St., Room 18. Textbooks in the following subjects will be available for review: secondary biology, life science, geography, geopolitical economics, arts/humanities, Japanese, German and health.

'MacBeth' comes to CCSN

Community College of Southern Nevada will present "MacBeth," performed by the Utah Shakespearean Festival's touring company, as part of SchoolFest '99.

Performances will be at 8 p.m. Feb. 12-13 in the Nicholas Horn Theatre on the Cheyenne campus. This 75-minute version of one of Shakespeare's greatest works will be directed by Michael Don Bahr.

Tickets are $10 for adults, and $8 for students and seniors.

Written in 1606, "MacBeth" would go down in history as the cursed Scottish play after numerous mishaps during production. It was written for Shakespeare's new patron, James I, following the death of Queen Elizabeth. The play presents one of the most familiar of tragedies: a powerful man's rise and fall from power.

'Telestroke' emerges as a new way to treat stroke patients

"Telestroke," — which uses video conferencing to link stroke specialists with physicians treating stroke patients in small community-hospitals, has an extraordinary potential to save lives and reduce disability, and should be tested now in clinical trials to evaluate its benefits, said researchers in an editorial in this month's Stroke: Journal of the American Heart Association.

"It is time to consider using state-of-the-art video communications technology to maximize the number of patients given effective stroke treatment across the United States," said Steven R. Levine, M.D., of Wayne State University School of Medicine.

In rural areas, many physicians are reluctant to treat stroke patients with clot-dissolving drugs because they are unfamiliar with how to administer them and they worry that it will cause excessive, perhaps fatal bleeding.

Levine, who heads the university's stroke program, and his co-author Mark Gorman, M.D., also of Wayne State, envision a time when stroke victims at small community hospitals can get the same rapid assessment and treatment now available only at specialized stroke centers at major hospitals.

The concept, dubbed "telestroke," would operate via two-way video conferencing and with desk-top computers to connect a stroke specialist with emergency room personnel in a small hospital. They would work together as a team — evaluating the patient; administering a stroke-assessment test; reading the patient's imaging scans to determine whether a stroke has occurred; and diagnosing the type of stroke.

The stroke specialist also could advise emergency department physicians as they administered medications or performed surgery.

Time is of the essence in treating strokes, which strike more than 600,000 Americans annually and cost an estimated $41 billion for treatment and rehabilitation of survivors. The clot-dissolving drug TPA (tissue plasminogen activator) can stop a stroke in its tracks, but it must be administered three hours after the onset of stroke symptoms to be most effective.

TPA is used in patients who have strokes caused by locked blood vessels to the brain. Rapid surgery can save lives of those who have hemorrhagic strokes, caused by a leaking or burst blood vessel in the brain.

By definition, telemedicine ranges from medical consultations a psychotherapy sessions via telephone, to transmitting brain scans to an outside radiologist for reading, to interactive teamwork. The advent of sophisticated medical and communications technologies, however have created opportunities for extremely sophisticated forms of telemedicine, the two neurologists note.

The value of vitamin E remains unclear

Results of several studies now show that fruits, vegetables and whole grains that contain antioxidants may lower an individual's risk for heart disease, but it is still unclear whether antioxidant supplements, taken as vitamin pills, have a similar benefit.

As a result, the American Heart Association, in a new scientific advisory published in Circulation: Journal of the American Heart Association, says that current evidence is not strong enough to recommend antioxidant vitamin pills for the general public.

"The American Heart Association continues to recommend that people increase their consumption of antioxidant-rich foods such as vegetables, fruits, and whole grains," said the statement's author, Diane Tribble, Ph.D., a member of the American Heart Association's volunteer nutrition committee and staff scientist at the Lawrence Berkeley National Laboratory, in Berkeley, Calif.

"Along some studies have shown that foods rich in antioxidants are associated with a reduced risk of heart disease, that doesn't necessarily mean that high levels of antioxidants achieved by consuming vitamin pills will provide similar benefits — or are even safe," Tribble said.

Discussion has recently focused on how antioxidant vitamins may reduce the risk of heart disease and stroke. Antioxidants — such as vitamins E, C and beta-carotene, a form of vitamin A — have potential health-promoting properties because they counteract oxidants, which many researchers believe play an important role in causing atherosclerosis.

Atherosclerosis is the disease process that can lead to heart disease and stroke. Though the data is far from complete, a large component of the population is taking antioxidant vitamin pills, according to Tribble.

Foods high in vitamins C, E, and/or beta-carotene have also been shown to be lower in saturated fat and cholesterol and higher in fiber, characteristics that according to Tribble, may contribute to the reduced risk for heart disease and stroke found in some studies.

"Foods high in vitamins C, E and/or beta-carotene are also rich in other potentially important nutrients such as minerals, flavonoids and other carotenoids. The benefits of these nutrients are even less well understood," Tribble said.

Studies of individuals who have not had a heart attack or stroke have had mixed results when participants consumed antioxidants as vitamin pills to prevent a first heart attack or stroke.

Evidence of health benefits from vitamin E are stronger in studies of individuals who have already had a heart attack or stroke. These trials look at whether vitamin E supplements can prevent heart attacks in patients with existing heart disease.

For example, in the Cambridge Heart Antioxidant Study, the risk of a non-fatal heart attack among individuals who took vitamin E during the study was 77% lower compared with patients in the control group who did not take vitamin E. All the patients studied in the trial had heart disease.

"While the data from studies to date are very encouraging, they need to be confirmed by additional studies," Tribble said.

What's more, several studies have yielded surprising findings that underscore the need for caution when recommending nutritional supplements.

For example, the Alpha-Tocopherol, Beta-Carotene Cancer Prevention Study, which primarily involved male smokers, showed no benefits from antioxidant vitamin pills.

In contrast, some adverse effects were noted, particularly for beta-carotene, which appeared to confer an increased risk of death from lung cancer.

"In view of these findings, the most prudent and scientifically supportable recommendation for the general population is to consume a balanced diet with emphasis on antioxidant-rich fruits, vegetables and whole grains," Tribble said. "This advice is consistent with the current dietary guidelines of the American Heart Association."

National School Counseling Week marked

National School Counseling Week, sponsored by the American School Counselor Association, is scheduled for February 1-5.

National School Counseling Week is the time to focus public attention on the unique contributions of professional school counselors.

School counselors are certified professional educators who work as an integral part of the total educational program by assisting students, teachers, parents and administrators.

School counselors and school counseling programs work to address the personal/social growth and academic and career development of all students to enable them to achieve success in school and to become responsible and productive members of our society.

The 1999 celebration of National School Counseling Week will be the focus of the more than 12,000 professional school counselors, in the U.S. and abroad, who are members of the American School Counselor Associations.

School counselors will be hosting special events and activities in order to call attention to their specific contributions to the education process.

Heritage Museum opens schoolhouse exhibit

Catch a glimpse into the lives of the children who learned their "Three R's" in that singularly American institution, the prairie schoolhouse.

Forty-two black-and-white photographs provide a memorable journey through the American homestead in "The Prairie Schoolhouse," a photo essay by John Martin Campbell, organized by the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service (SITES).

The exhibit will run daily 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. through March 14 at the Clark County Heritage Museum on Boulder Highway in Henderson.

Historic schoolroom objects from the Museum's collection will also be on display. Museum admission is $1.50 for adults and $1.00 for children and seniors.

Campbell, an anthropologist and photographer, depicts 30 schoolhouses, each built between 1885 and 1940.

This is an era that has hardly been touched by scholars," Campbell said. "I found so much information about homesteaders—their homes, churches, and schools; the tools and implements used for farming; the crops they grew—yet so little has been written about this period as compared to other chapters in American history."

The exhibition features a variety of photographic perspectives: sweeping views of one-room schoolhouses set against the sky, glimpses of architectural details, and intimate studies of the objects once used by prairie children and their teachers.

Now a research professor in anthropology at the University of New Mexico, Campbell grew up in the sagebrush country of eastern Washington state, where he himself attended a two-room schoolhouse. In order to tell the prairie schoolhouse story, Campbell drove across 14 western states, capturing schoolhouses with his 4x5 view camera. The photographs' often intricate details reflect the varied traditions brought by homesteaders from both the Eastern states and the "old country."

During the late 19th and early 20th centuries, a massive migration changed the face of the western prairies and the character of the United States as a whole. Under the Homestead Act of 1862, the U.S. government promised to give free parcels of land to anyone who would clear, improve, and live on his chosen acreage for at least three years. By the 1880s, thousands of homesteaders had taken up the government's offer and moved their wagons to the far western shortgrass and sagebrush prairies.

The semi-arid terrain on these high plains was difficult to farm, and some lost the struggle early on. However, many farms flourished well into the 1930s. Eventually though, even the hardest families suffered from the Great Depression and the droughts leading up to the infamous "Dust Bowl" era, and were forced to abandon their homes, churches, and one-room schools.

When farm work slowed during the winter months, children in these rural areas attended the local school—generally spending the first through the eighth grade in the same one-room schoolhouse. Students learned to master a standard and rigorous curriculum that included arithmetic, composition, geography, grammar, penmanship, physiology, reading, spelling, and U.S. history.

Human and natural forces have erased most evidence of pioneer and early 20th-century life on the prairies, but traces can still be found in scattered architectural remains that dot the land from the Dakotas to New Mexico. From early rough-hewn structures built into the earth, to elaborate schoolhouses erected during the New Deal, "The Prairie Schoolhouse" remembers an often overlooked chapter in the settling of our country.

Campbell's prairie images are featured in a companion book of the same name, published by the University of New Mexico Press. This exhibit is based on an exhibition first presented at the Maxwell Museum at the University of New Mexico (Albuquerque).

SITES develops, organizes and circulates exhibitions on art, history and science throughout the United States and abroad. For more information, call the Clark County Heritage Museum, 455-7955.

Coati exhibit opens

The Southern Nevada Zoological-Botanical Park has just opened a new coati exhibit to the public.

Coatis are a very active Central and South American raccoon-like animal. They have a pointy inquisitive snout for sniffing out food, and a very long, banded tail for balance as they search the jungle canopy.

The 2,000-cubic-foot exhibit duplicates the coati's natural habitat of rocks, dense ground cover, and branches and vines for climbing. The zoo, located at 1775 N. Rancho Dr., is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. seven days a week.

Pianist plays Gershwin

The program will include both well-known and recently rediscovered works including Gershwin's own solo transcription of "Rhapsody in Blue," and his "lost" preludes which were finally released by the Gershwin estate for publication in 1997.

Advance tickets are $10, $12 at the door. Call 229-6383.

Theatre sets auditions

The Las Vegas Little Theatre will hold open auditions for the hilarious "The Seven Year Itch," by George Axelrod, directed by Laura Tompkins. Auditions will take place at 1 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 6, with callbacks at 1 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 7.

All roles are open for performances beginning Friday, March 18 through Sunday, April 4 for a total of 11 performances. The theatre is located at 3844 Schiff Dr. on the south west corner of Valley View and Spring Mountain roads. Call 382-7996.

The 24th annual Glenn Smith Concert of Love to benefit Opportunity Village will be Sunday, Feb. 21 in the Circus Maximus Showroom of Caesars Palace.

The event supports programs at Opportunity Village, which provides job training, employment and general advocacy services to people with mental retardation and related disabilities.

"We feel we've reached a milestone with this year's event," said Linda Smith, resource development director for Opportunity Village. "Just one more year and we'll have reached the quarter-century mark with this great show, and just in time for the millennium!"

Scheduled performers at this year's event include Glenn Smith, the Siegfried and Roy Production Dancers, cast members of the hit show "Imagine," and Las Vegas legend Wayne Newton.

"Our Magical Forest is our most popular event in terms of sheer numbers," Smith said. "But the Concert of Love has become internationally known for the quality of the entertainment it presents."

Trombone group to play

The Dynamic Trombone Quartet, featuring Walter Boenig, Clay Overlien, Hiroshi Suzuki and Garry Russell, will perform in concert at 2 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 7, at the Reed Whipple Cultural Center, 821 Las Vegas Blvd.

Admission is free, however, tickets are required to guarantee seating. Call 229-6211. For more information, call 229-6211.

Past performers have include Kenny Rogers, Bill Cosby and the Everly Brothers.

"What I love most about the Concert of Love is that entertainers of such stature donate their time to help our mission. We represent a very special group of people, and it's heartwarming to see that such big stars care about them and want to give something back to the community." Smith said.

Call Opportunity Village, 259-3741, for more information about the 1999 Concert of Love.

LAST WORDS

HOROSCOPE

LINDA BLACK

Weekly Tip: The sun is still in Aquarius, culminating with a new moon in Aquarius, so it's time for all of us to learn how to be analytical and to work together as a team.

Aries (March 21-April 19). Your money is all locked away in a safe place, hopefully, because you're going to want to get at it, and you're going to want to spend it for frivolous things. The temptations are intense, but the risks are also high.

Taurus (April 20-May 20). Go along with a partner's whim, especially if it has anything to do with your home, family, or household item. Real estate is also an adventure you should get into only with your partner's support.

Gemini (May 21-June 21). Take care at work. If you don't pay attention to what's going on around you, you could smash right into a brick wall.

Cancer (June 22-July 22). There's a nice big Grand Trine in Water signs. When this happens, you get very lucky, and this time you're lucky in love.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22). If you're stuck with a problem at home, maybe what you're missing is advice from a person whose job it is to save money, or bring it in.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). If you don't get anything else done except setting up your schedule for the following month, you'll be money ahead.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Money is your focus and you might as well get aggressive about it. Looks like you have plenty of work to do, but are you being paid what you're worth?

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You're looking good. The moon's in your sign, and that always gives you a little extra charisma.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Looks like a rather frustrating time for you. Something you're trying to accomplish is not getting through. Perhaps it's because you're not communicating effectively.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Looks like what you and your committee want is just not available. Apparently it'll take a little more planning, a little more research, and possibly a few more fundraisers.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). An older person is going to want to order you around. That's patently ridiculous, of course. You know everything, but this other person wants the power.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20). The moon is in Scorpio, which calms you down, and also gives you a little bit of an overview of the situation. Noticing is the first step in solving problems.

If You're Having a Birthday This Week: Your assignment for this year is to learn how to handle authority figures, how to respect and admire them, how to give them constructive criticism, and, finally, how to become one yourself.

Passing the trivia

Today I'm going to kill two birds with one stone. In case you are wondering, this means that I'm starting the new year off right — the trivia on my desk top is going to straight to you! Are you ready?

First off, I have earth-shaking news about fish. Guess who are the latest patients to undergo acupuncture to ensure them a long, restful sleep? If you guessed fish, you're right! Now, I suppose you are wondering why fish need to sleep. Hang in there and I'll tell you why. What could be better than a peacefully dozing fish as he makes his way across country to a restaurant waiting to fry him up and serve him to hungry customers? Think about it! He arrives fresh as a daisy and in tip-top shape.

Here is news from the cat world. In view of the fact cats are supposed to have nine lives, The New York Medical Center has an annual lottery to compare which cat has survived the greatest fall. Now here's the eerie part: The winner last year was a cat who had fallen 27 floors!

We all know kids say the darndest things. One teacher asked her class to complete some well-known proverbs. Here they are:

A bird in hand is...better than a woodpecker on your head.

Three is nothing new...under a rock.

A penny saved...is not a lot. Don't burn your bridges...or you'll fall in the lake.

Political peccadilloes are all the rage lately. A recent article reveals that for more than two centuries, an elegant home in London, the residence of Benjamin Franklin for 18 years, has held a grisly secret. Recently, 10 skeletons were unearthed from the cellar. Scientists have concluded the bodies were buried there around the time of Franklin's occupancy!

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY

Genealogy is a popular pastime and in a recent book "Roots of the Rich and Famous," the author Robert Davenport revealed some real eye-openers! Would you believe actor Tom Hanks is directly related to Abraham Lincoln's mother? England's Prince Charles, whether he wants to or not, has to lay claim to Count Dracula as his relative. Here's another zinger — Walt Disney is descended from George Burroughs, a notorious witch executed in Salem, Mass.

The babble of a bubbling brook and the soothing crackle of a fire on a cold winter evening will put you to sleep in no time. It's always worked fine for me until I discovered that the soothing "nature tapes" I bought for those hard-to-sleep nights, are all a big fake!

Get this: a recent article in the Wall Street Journal reveals that the "babbling brook" and the "cozy fire" are achieved by studio helpers who dash about flushing toilets and crackling cellophane in front of a microphone! I could have slept all night without knowing that!

If you happen to have some added trivia, don't bother to call me. ^)m busy dusting my desk-top — it's the first time it's been clean since 1997!

Stamp Fair to be held

The semi-annual Las Vegas Stamp Fair will be held the weekend of Feb. 19-21 at the Palace Station Hotel & Casino, 2411 W. Sahara Ave.

Twenty-five stamp and cover dealers from throughout the United States will attend. On display and for sale will be items priced from a few pennies to thousands of dollars.

Adult admission will be 50 cents. Young collectors 16 and under will be admitted free and will receive a philatelic gift upon entering. Door prizes will be given out hourly and plenty of free parking is available.

Hours of the show will be from noon to 6 p.m. Friday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday.

A special "Dealers Only Bourse" will be held Friday before the show opens from 10 a.m. to noon. Only dealers with business cards or a re-sale number will be admitted.

DEAR DEBBIE

DEBORAH WHITE

Dear Debbie: I am 49 and my husband is 44. We have been married for 13 years. He has been cheating on me for 10 years.

My husband moved out and lived with another woman for three years, but continued seeing me throughout the separation. I don't trust him, but I love him very much.

What should I do? I still think he's cheating with the other woman, because he stays out one or two nights a week.

MRS. M.

Dear Mrs. M: You were willing to put up with his cheating once, but now you're not sure. So you've changed the rules. Let him know it, but don't expect him to change. He never will.

Your marriage is a joke. You've taken enough abuse. You have my permission to file for divorce. But will you? I doubt it. You still "love" him.

I can't give you the one thing you need to solve your problem. I wish I could. It's called self-respect. Without, it nothing in your life will change.

Dear Debbie: My mother, who is in her early 60s, is driving my wife and me crazy. She calls us constantly, always in a state of crisis. Her washing machine overflowed and there's water all over the basement. She's in a gas station 40 miles away. Can we pick her up? We're afraid to answer the phone.

Before you tell me it's a cry for attention, we see her every week and talk to her regularly. We're both working people with busy lives and we can't always drop everything. Any ideas?

A GOOD SON

Dear Good Son: Call a family meeting. Tell your mother she obviously can no longer manage her own life, you've found a good assisted-living community for her and you're taking away her driver's license.

Expect her shocked reaction and probably tears. Be sympathetic but firm. Don't stay too long.

Your mother is a negative attention-getter and guilt tripper. If you get more crisis calls after the meeting, then make good your threats, but I doubt if you'll have to.

Send questions or comments to Dear Debbie, P.O. Box 4328, Chicago, Ill. 60680. Or send e-mail to clark@tribune.com.

Words of Wisdom

Death is more universal than life; everyone dies but not everyone lives.

The trouble with the rat race is that even if you win, you're still a rat.

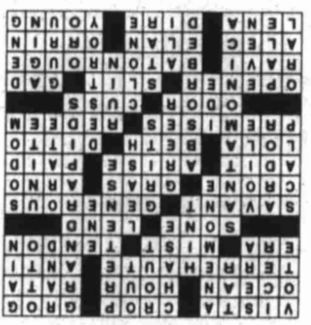

The best use of life is to spend it for something that outlasts life.

Life beats down and crushes the soul and art reminds you that you have one.

MAGICWORD

HOW TO PLAY: Read the list of words. Look at the puzzle. You'll find these words in all directions—horizontally, vertically, diagonally, backwards. Draw a circle around each letter of a word found in the puzzle, then strike it off the list. Circling it will show a letter has been used but will leave it visible should it also form part of another word. Find the big words first. When letters of all listed words are circled, you'll have the given number of letters left over. They'll spell out your MAGICWORD.

Docket No. 98-7024

NOTICE OF PREHEARING CONFERENCE
On July 6, 1998, Central Telephone Company-Nevada d/b/a Sprint of Nevada ("Sprint") submitted a petition, designated as Docket No. 98-7024, with the Public Utilities Commission of Nevada ("Commission") for modifications to the Nevada Hatfield Model. This petition was in response to a Procedural Order dated March 24, 1998, in Docket No. 96-9035 whereby the Commission directed parties, after conducting their own investigation, to propose such changes in a separate docket. At a regularly scheduled agenda held on September 17, 1998, the Commission voted to set this matter for hearing.
Interested and affected persons may file appropriate Petitions to Intervene at either of the Commission's offices on or before Wednesday, February 17, 1999. The Comments submitted by parties on August 19, 1998, will not alone suffice for the granting of intervention status.
The petition was filed pursuant to Chapters 703 and 704 of the Nevada Revised Statutes and the Nevada Administrative Code ("NAC"). Pursuant to NAC 703.655, the Commission will hold a prehearing conference on Sprint's petition as follows: FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1999 10:00 a.m.
Hearing Room B
Public Utilities Commission
555 East Washington Avenue, Suite 4500
Las Vegas, Nevada
The purpose of the prehearing conference is to formulate and simplify issues involved in this proceeding and set a hearing and procedural schedule. The Commission may also rule on any pending Petitions for Leave to Intervene. At the prehearing conference, the Commission may take any action authorized by NAC 703.655.
The filing is available for viewing by the public at the offices of the Commission, 1150 East William Street, Carson City, Nevada 89701 and the Sawyer Building, 555 East Washington Avenue, Suite 4500, Las Vegas, Nevada 89101.

100 PROFESSIONAL SERVICES NOTICE TO READERS By law, companies that contract to locally move your household goods must hold a certificate from the Nevada Public Service Commission. This requirement ensures that the company carries proper insurance, complies with government safety standards and charges only approved rates. Nevada law also requires these "full service" movers to print their PSC number on their trucks in their advertising. For more information, the PSC can be reached at 486-2600. Chapter 624 of Nevada Revised Statutes makes it unlawful for any person to engage in the business or act in the capacity of a contractor within this State without having a State Contractor's License. All advertising by a licensed contractor shall include the license number. Should a question arise regarding licensed contractors, contact the Nevada State Board of Contractors, 486-1100. Dan DeQuille and the Traveling Stones of Pahrnanagat

In recent weeks, we have chronicled the tale of John Dennis and "The Luminous Tree of Tuscarora." Equally as bizarre was Dan DeQuille's account of "Traveling Stones of Pahrnanagat."

The original story appeared in the Enterprise on Oct. 26, 1867, as a filler when homicide took a holiday, no new strikes were reported from the mines and the stock market was static. The scene was remote Pahrnanagat Valley in southern Nevada.

According to DeQuille, a prospector had found a large number of heavy stones which possessed some rather peculiar characteristics. When scattered about on a floor or level surface, they immediately began moving toward a common center and would huddle together like a covey of quail. A single stone removed to a distance of a yard would return to the others, but, if carried out four or five feet, would remain motionless.

The prospector said that the floor of the valley was pitted with a great number of small basins, each filled with the stones. According to those who had examined them, DeQuille wrote, the stones were of an iron com-sition — lodestone or magnetic iron ore.

Once in print, the story spread to the entire civilized world and DeQuille was soon inundated with hundreds of inquiries. Since he had already established a credibility and a veracity as a regular contributor to three of the country's most highly respected mining journals, Mining and Scientific Press, Mining and Industry Tradesman and The American Mining Journal, those who read the story of the wondrous stones assumed that DeQuille was making an accurate report. The response to the story was also a reflection of popular beliefs in e miracles of the scientific age, whether they be in the area of natural lore or the vastly expanding field of technology. Many readers were thus open to suggestion regarding new scientific wonders, but, in the case of the traveling stones, were unable to distinguish between an actual scientific phenomenon and the fictitious mutterings of a bored writer.

Among those taken in by the story was a group of German scientists dabbling in the study of electro-magnetic currents. The letter to DeQuille from the secretary of the group was addressed to "Herr Dan DeQuille, the eminent physicist of Virginiastadt, Nevada." They wanted more information and samples of the stones, but DeQuille's denial of the existence of the rocks availed him nothing. Indeed, it only laid him open to a charge of unprofessional conduct for his attempt to keep his "brother scientists" in ignorance of truths concerning the laws of nature.

The operator of a circus informed the Comstock newsman that there was money to be made from the stones. Writing from Massachusetts, he asked the hapless journalist to send him a carload. He planned to exhibit and sell them, he wrote, and offered to divide the profits. This offer amused DeQuille to no end, but he often expressed a dismay at not being able to come up with a plan to make money out of the fictitious rocks.

As the years passed and the letters continued to come in, DeQuille became disgusted with the whole thing. To some writers, he suggested that they contact Mark Twain "... who probably has still on hand 15 or 20 bushels of various sizes." To others, he pleaded that the story of the traveling stones was just that, a story, but denials availed him nothing.

On Nov. 11, 1879, he finally told the whole story in the columns of the Enterprise. Confessing to having made it up in an idle moment, he pleaded for an end to the inquiries. "We have stood this thing for about 15 years, and it is becoming a little monotonous," he wrote.

"We are now growing old and we want peace. We desire to throw up the sponge and acknowledge the corn; therefore we solemnly affirm that we never saw or heard of any such diabolical cobbles as the traveling stones of Pahrnanagat — though we still think there ought to be something of the kind somewhere in the world. If this candid confession shall carry a pang to the heart of any true believer, we shall be glad of it, as the true believers have panged it to us, left and right, quite long enough."

DeQuille's disclaimer never got the circulation of the original story, however, and he continued to be bothered by letters, offers of money and requests to conduct expeditions into the wilds of the Pahrnanagat country to bring out some of the strange stones. His explanation, word for word, was published again 12 years later, July 11, 1891, not long before he laid down his pen, hung up his eye shade and retired to West Branch, Iowa. Dan DeQuille finally left this vale of tears in 1898, thus freeing himself at last from the literary folly of his years on Nevada's Comstock Lode.

Earl is curator of the Nevada Historical Society in Reno.
