ONE MAN'S VIEW

MIKE O'CALLAGHAN

The longer a person lives in this area the more he or she will become critical of many new writers who view local history from a more recent perspective. Most recently the success story of beautiful Lake Las Vegas has been written about extensively. Most of the articles are accurate beginning with the entrance of Transcontinental Properties. This usually includes the vision of that corporation's Ronald Boeddeker who made it become a reality.

Actually the vision of Lake Las Vegas came from J. Carlton Adair back more than 35 years ago. If he had succeeded in putting together the money it would be called Lake Adair. That's when the late Las Vegas Sun publisher Hank Greenspun wrote:

"There is some present controversy between conflicting groups in Henderson about a possible further development. And, as in all areas of change, the conflict arises between the stand-patters and those seeking expansion.

"I, frankly, am not knowledgeable enough to know whether the proposed Lake Adair project is indeed feasible or even ascertainable, but if even the remotest possibility exists, it should be pursued without obstacles cast in its path.

"Just a cursory examination shows the involvement of some of the nation's large multi-million dollar real estate and utility corporations in this project and if Lake Adair should become a reality, Henderson may soon become the largest and most beautiful city in the state."

Greenspun, a former Boulder City resident and landowner in Henderson, long ago foresaw the Henderson of today and tomorrow. He was one of the few locals who appreciated Adair's views and dreams of the future because he already had his own dreams about the addition of Green Valley to Henderson. These he brought into being and today Henderson is bigger and more beautiful than ever.

More than 20 years later, in 1989 Hank wrote: "The impossible dream. That's what some pessimists called Carlton Adair's plan for a community to be built at Lake Mead. It was to have been called Lake Adair. Carlton and his lovely wife, Perry Sheehan Adair, spent many thousands of hours

Volunteering leads to satisfaction, friendships at Salvation Army

Through a number of programs and services available at the Salvation Army, thousands of people have pulled themselves up from troubling times and have gone on to succeed in their lives.

While every personal story is an inspiration, two local residents have given back to the Salvation Army through dedicated volunteerism.

"I love working with the people here. Not only are they my dear friends, but it makes me feel good," said Kris Parry, a volunteer at the Salvation Army Thrift Store near Boulder Highway and Water Street.

Parry, 25, has suffered from some medical problems that make him unable to work full-time. He has worked at least 20 hours each week for more than four years at the Thrift Store.

Parry's day is usually a whirlwind of activity with receiving donations, customer service, loading and unloading. Even though he feels he's not a big part of the store, he said he likes to bring some joy and happiness into other people's lives.

Amber Brown, store manager, admits that Parry is too shy to realize the impact on the store and its employees.

"Kris comes in every day and works until we close. We probably couldn't do as well as we do without his help," she said.

Parry hasn't made a long-term plans, but no matter what he does in life, he definitely wants a job where he can help others.

"It doesn't matter if I get paid, I always want to do what I can to help," he said.

Parry's duties have become much more than

Neighborhoods, growth is at the heart of Council's five-year plan

Lisa Stiller
News Staff Writer

Last month the Henderson City Council, department heads and other key staff members embarked on the process of developing the city's first five-year strategic plan.

The group met Dec. 8-9 at the Casablanca Resort Hotel and Casino in Mesquite.

According to Mayor Jim Gibson, the idea of the retreat was to come up with a specific direction for the city's future.

"Our purpose was to look forward, evaluate where we are, to refine our strategies and come up with something that would give more definition to our cumulative vision on what the city ought to become."

With the help of a facilitator, the group held round-table discussions to determine priorities for the city for the next five years and divided into smaller groups to do more specific visioning. By the end, the group had come together to agree on seven major priorities.

At a City Council meeting Jan. 18, these priorities were re-worded, refined and approved. Also approved was the vision statement for the city, and a cluster of values employees and elected officials hold in common.

City Council also had a look at the city of Henderson Community Assessment Survey which was conducted from Nov. 11 to Dec. 11. The randomly selected 1,028 respondents answered 135 questions in telephone interviews that took 20-30 minutes.

According to Gibson, the intent of the survey was to determine whether the priorities arrived at in Mesquite matched those of the residents.

"According to the survey, we're pretty much on target," he said.

Although every City Council member strongly supports the work done, each has their own special interest areas. The News interviews each to find out just what these were.

Mayor Gibson: Diversity a challenge for the city

Lisa Stiller
News Staff Writer

One of the most important facts about Henderson, according to Mayor Jim Gibson, is that the demographics are changing.

"We need to plan for a more diverse population, especially a growing senior population," he said.

"We have responded to the needs of the younger population extremely well. With an additional focus, we'll be able to do the same for seniors."

Henderson's new four-year college will also have an impact on the city's demographics.

"The demographics of the city are going to change with the influx of college students," Gibson said.

Gibson sees these changes as a challenge, affecting just about every aspect of life in the city.

One of his top priorities is maintaining the sense of trying to develop their idea, but it never was realized. Their dream may soon become a reality if the developers of the Lake at Las Vegas project, the modern-day version of Lake Adair, are successful in their efforts to gain regulatory approval.

Leaving aside the extravagant references to myself and family in Carlton's letter, a portion bears repeating because it adds to the history of southern Nevada.

It's important that Adair be given the credit because of the ridicule he took from some media members and local wheeler-dealers. He, like Greenspun, was a strong man who refused to have his dream buried by men who couldn't dream.

Funding concerns delay Fountain Plaza

The Henderson Redevelopment Agency Advisory Commission met Tuesday to discuss the Phyllis E. Thompson Company redevelopment project and the exclusive right to negotiate agreement held with the Thompson Company.

The commission heard from Tim Kelly and Denise Conley, principals of Keyser Marsdon

Assoc., Inc. who had completed a feasibility study on the project.

"The project is not feasible as it is currently proposed," Kelly told the commission.

He said the three objectives examined in the study included the importance the community would attach to the project, the project's ability to attract tenants and the financial feasibility.

Kelly and Conley said that their conclusions were based on several factors, but the main one was the fact that the Henderson Convention Center had not committed to the project.

"As we held several discussions with the developer, it became clear that the proposal is very much dependent on the financial commitment of the Convention Center," Kelly said.

Groesbeck meets plea conditions

Former Henderson Mayor Robert Groesbeck has complied with the conditions of paying fines and serving his community service following his September sentence for disorderly conduct and resisting arrest.

Groesbeck had until this month to meet the conditions of his plea bargain stemming from an incident in which he touched a woman inappropriately at the House of Blues Foundation Room at Mandalay Bay.

As part of the agreement, Groesbeck — who had no prior criminal record — was fined $2,000 and sentenced to 80 hours of community service. He was also required to donate $2,500 to the Injured Police Officers Association.

Guinn challenges homebuilders at installation ceremony

Chuck N. Baker
News Staff

Gov. Kenny Guinn was the guest speaker at the installation of the Southern Nevada Home Builder's Association board at the Mirage Hotel Saturday night.

Home builder Randy Black Sr. was installed as the 46th president of the organization.

Both men had a lot to say. Guinn chided the builders and said he had two priorities: He hoped to involve homebuilders and the teacher's union in his plans, "to plot the way and dream for the future ... [with] strength and courage and vision."

His first priority, which is made up of several components, is to look at income projections for the state.

"I'll be criticized and complimented [but I'll] do what's right for the state," he said. Then he added, "For the next three years I don't give a damn how you vote," noting he's not up for reelection until then.

"We must have an educated workforce," Guinn said, adding "we need to keep home prices in check."

But he said his second priority is "to fix the DMV." He said he felt hampered in that he was unable to hire additional personnel to staff the DMV, but he promised to repair the problems the agency has had in recent months.

In addition, he told the builders the state must "fix its dust particle program before I ask you to fix yours."

He said Clark County is in trouble with its air quality, and the problem must be alleviated. He issued an ultimatum to the builders, who had just finished a steak dinner: "I will shut you down if you don't follow the rules!"

After his speech, Guinn told several builders that dust is a valley-wide problem, saying dust from Las Vegas blows right into Henderson and Boulder City and other areas.

In his speech, Black, who gained local fame years ago through his television commercials selling condominiums "for $54,950!" said people often protest to City Hall about "indignant intrusion" into their perfect neighborhoods ... That even holds true for parks and churches, and especially churches with tall steeples. Then, two years later, they will buy or use exactly what they protested against.

"Most communities would do anything to have our growth. They make all kinds of deals to promote growth — they would do almost anything to bring growth to their community," he said.

Black said, "As far as I know ... no costs are going to decrease, certainly not lumber, certainly not wages, certainly not supplies or materials. Everything is on the rise, including new fees for water connections, assessment fees for police, fire and roads, exactions for traffic signals, flood mitigation, land — especially land — and if we put a ring around this valley, like Portland did, prices will skyrocket."

He said costs and affordability don't mix, and "we are slowly moving away from the American dream of home ownership because of costs." He called home builders endangered species, and said individual developers will soon be extinct.

He said the association members must put up their money to get out the vote, and combine strengths with other contractor groups.

"Construction defect laws, water fees, impact fees, air quality fees, needs-assessment appropriations, inspection fees, building permit fees — fees, fees, fees, fees — all threaten the very existence of our industry."

Berkley: Health, education are vital

Lisa Stiller
News Staff Writer

U.S. Rep. Shelley Berkley, D-Nev., is enjoying her new home.

She has just recently moved to Henderson, but her busy schedule allows her limited time in her Green Valley home.

When Congress is in session she works in Washington, D.C., and when it isn't she travels throughout her district talking and listening to her constituents, attending meetings, and giving interviews. Somehow, Berkley finds time for her two teenagers as well.

The same energy that surrounded her campaign in 1998 has only intensified. She sees the issues that concern her as challenges, and goes after them.

"Our challenge as leaders in the 21st century is how to give everybody the opportunity to share in the abundance this country is currently enjoying," Berkley said.

"We have pockets of population in our community of people who need decent housing, health care, and education. Our challenge as leaders in the 21st century is how to give everybody the opportunity to share in the abundance of this country."

Health care is one of Berkley's major challenges.

"As the representative of the district with the fastest-growing senior population in the country, I understand the need for quality, long-term care for older Americans," she said. "This country has not begun to address the issue of people living longer."

The cost of long-term care averages about $50,000 a year per person.

Berkley recently co-sponsored legislation which gives a $1,000 tax credit for those needing long-term care, and backed a measure which gives an additional personal exemption for people taking care of a relative in their home.

Seniors face another obstacle when they have to get prescription medication and their only insurance is Medicare, which does not cover prescriptions.

She supports a provision where a small fee would be charged for prescription medication coverage under Medicare.

"For those who say we can't afford to do this, we can't afford not to," Berkley said.

Berkley was a co-sponsor of the Democratic version of the Patient Bill of Rights, which passed the House but not the Senate. As a member of the Democratic House Health Care Task Force, she is encouraging a reconciliation bill which allows clients to take legal action against their HMO.

Education is also at the center of Berkley's priorities.

"My district has the fastest-growing school-age population in the country, and my challenge is to improve its education system," Berkley said.

Berkley helped to secure $7 million for 178 new teachers for Nevada, and supported the Student Results Act which will authorize $8.35 billion in grants for special education programs.

"Due to a global economy, children in schools throughout the U.S. will need the same level of knowledge and expertise as others throughout the world," Berkley said. She wants to be sure Clark County's children are not left behind.

To this end, she co-sponsored legislation that will provide for technological and other professional training for teachers.

Berkley played a key role in obtaining $500,000 to fund an after-school program in the Clark County School District.

This will allow schools to be a community resource for kids to have a supervised environment while getting additional help.

"We have a three-shift economy, and children go home to empty houses," Berkley said.

IT'S OFFICIAL — City officials celebrated the grand opening of the Lake Las Vegas Fire Station 96/Police Substation Tuesday morning. The 15,800-square-foot building will be manned by a 20-member fire crew per shift and will have three pumper trucks, one hose and air unit and three rescue vehicles. It will also house a Community Policing Center where residents can file police reports and meet with police officers. The ceremony was officiated by a number of city officials including, from left, Acting Police Chief Michael Mayberry, Councilman Amanda Cyphers, Mayor Jim Gibson, Lake Las Vegas executive vice president Bill Hunt, Fire Chief Joe Hill and station mascot, Siren.

"Without the Convention Center's commitment, it would not be possible to attract office tenants or hotels."

Furthermore, Kelly told the commission that the proposed tax increment would not provide enough funds to support the project.

"Other resources would have to be used," he said.

The Thompson Company had entered into a 120-day exclusive right to negotiate a contract with the city on Oct. 20. This contract will expire on Feb. 17. The question before the commission was whether or not to recommend termination of the contract.

Commission Vice Chairman Henry Feldman said he was concerned about the funding, although he approved of the project.

Commissioner Bob Unger agreed. "The Convention Center needs to bet behind it," he said.

Attorney Doug Malan, representing the Phyllis Thompson Company, said he wanted more time to find financial backing.

"The Redevelopment Agency needs to come up with alternative ways of funding," Malan said.

But Henderson Finance Director Steve Hanson says it is not the agency's job to do this. "Typically, the developer goes out and gets the capital backing," he said. "Their proposed tax increments would require the agency to give the project $45 million in assistance. The agency does not have that capacity."

Malan says he is concerned that once the exclusive right to negotiate is terminated, the Thompson company will be out of the loop.

The commission unanimously voted to refer the matter to the Redevelopment Agency with a recommendation to consider a 45-day extension for the Thompson company.

"I've heard about Assisted Living.

But is it right for my father?"

At Prestige, we find assisted living is a term being used quite a bit lately, but what does that mean exactly? That's an excellent question.

A Time For Something New

The best place to start is at the beginning, when if a senior needed help with something as simple as dressing, the only options were nursing homes or in-home nursing care. That's when a number of medical professionals began looking at better ways to care for people who needed help - a home-like community where active seniors could retain their independence while receiving the care they needed. That was when Prestige Assisted Living was born: a concept so simple, yet so revolutionary.

social and personal needs while still providing them personalized help. And since a resident receives only the assistance they need for their situation, the result is an enriching lifestyle less expensive than traditional care. But what do you look for? Since there is no industry-wide definition of an assisted living community, the best way to find out is to see it in person.

Look For The Details

At Prestige, we offer all the amenities you'd expect including private studio, one-bedroom, and two-bedroom apartments, restaurant-style dining, large community areas, activities, transportation to appointments, emergency call systems, and 24-hour care. But what sets us apart is what we do beyond what is considered standard. Benefits like a private dining room, kitchenettes, special diets, housekeeping and laundry services. When you visit Prestige, look for details like showers wide enough for wheelchairs, raised electrical outlets for ease of use, and how we encourage the residents to decorate their apartments with their own treasures. These small things make a huge difference in someone feeling at home.

The More You Learn

We hope this helps you understand a little better what assisted living is all about. Give us a call at 564-1771 for more information.

Clark: Aims for a multi-generational city

Lisa Stiller
News Staff Writer

Councilman Jack Clark looks out of his window and envisions a quiet neighborhood reflecting the generational diversity of Henderson.

"My collective vision for the city is multi-generational, where there is something for everyone," he said.

Clark wants Henderson to be the kind of place where our children want to raise their children. "I want this to be a place people can enjoy from their childhood through their senior years."

"This is a way of returning to traditional family values," Clark said.

His priorities reflect his commitment to make Henderson a place people do not want to leave.

Clark, who has a law enforcement background, said safety is a priority for him.

"Creating a city with an environment where people feel safe is essential," he said. He says Henderson's crime prevention efforts are largely responsible for the city's low crime rate.

Education is also a top priority for Clark. He feels that deconsolidation will allow Henderson to have more control over its schools.

"I've been an advocate of deconsolidation for a long time," he said. "It will give parents an opportunity to participate in a board made up of Henderson residents." Clark says this will allow more accountability for the board and school district.

He said that Henderson's neighborhoods are one of its greatest assets. He wants to see residents take a greater part in participating in their city and in supporting community organizations such as SAFEHouse.

Clark believes communities solve their problems best with less government involvement and more citizen participation.

"I support the idea of neighborhoods finding their own solutions," he says. He cites the success of the residents of the Serene Country Estates neighborhood in their attempt to limit commercial development as a good example.

"People should ask themselves what they can do to make our city work for everyone," Clark said.

community in the neighborhoods throughout the city.

"We need to involve the public more in the discussion of neighborhoods," he said.

Gibson says he is very supportive of the process used to work out a neighborhood plan for the Serene Country Estates and would like to see this used as a model for other neighborhoods.

The new college is also at the top of Gibson's list.

"We have to make the new state college and all of the planning the city will have to do a top priority," he said. He sees the process as one involving almost all aspects of city government.

Gibson sees the college having a special impact on crime, due to the addition of thousands of young students to the community. He feels the Henderson Police Department is doing a wonderful job, and points to the city's low crime rate.

Gibson would like to see police engage in more prevention-oriented activities, and would like to add more people to the police force.

An aging population brings new housing needs, especially the need for more affordable housing for seniors.

Gibson said he welcomes developers who can provide this. With an aging population, increasing services to seniors also becomes extremely important.

Gibson is proud of Henderson's schools, and thinks that deconsolidation will make them better. He adds that studies now show that smaller schools can bring about the greatest improvements in academic achievement.

Gibson says he plans to hold a series of meetings over the next year in neighborhoods throughout the city. "I'm going out to them to get them more involved," he said.

Kirk: Make government accessible to the people

Lisa Stiller
News Staff Writer

Councilman Steve Kirk says he was glad to learn during the City Council's recent strategic planning retreat that what is critical to him is also critical to the others.

Kirk's background in parks and recreation and his degree in design engineering technology play a large part in shaping his priorities.

He wants to be sure Henderson stays number-one in parks and recreation.

"It's important that we keep our momentum going even though we won the award as best in the country," he said.

Kirk is especially pleased with the city's decision to bring affordable golf to its residents.

"We have not had an affordable public golf course," he said. "It will be located in the middle of a metropolitan area and it will be beautiful."

The new golf course will be on Sunset Road, adjacent to the Whitney Ranch area. The golf course and the new recreation center, which is under construction, will partner to offer low-cost golf programs for residents.

Kirk says that economic diversification is essential for the region's economy. But the city has to be prepared to meet the high-tech needs of industries that might move here.

He sees the new state college as a solution for this.

Cyphers: Getting people connected

Lisa Stiller
News Staff Writer

Councilman Amanda Cyphers' biggest priority is to get people more involved with and connected to their city government.

"We need to get citizens better connected to government through neighborhood services, so we can better provide our citizens with needed services," she said.

Cyphers has been working to get an ombudsman hired who would serve as a liaison between the city and its residents.

"When people don't know where to go, this person can help," between the neighborhoods and the city.

"This will be a specific person for people to contact about any issues," Cypher said.

Along with this, she is working on organizing a Neighborhood she said.

She hopes that an ombudsman could help in such ways as bringing citizen groups together for meetings and providing a link

Services Department to assist neighborhoods in such things as clean-up and redevelopment issues.

Under the Neighborhood Services Department, Cyphers is developing a volunteer program.

"There are lots of needs, and lots of groups and individuals willing to help. We need a connection to bring them together."

"People want to get involved, but don't know how," she said. "If people can help within their community, a sense of ownership and community pride develops. As the city grows, a volunteer program is essential to keeping communities from feeling alienated."

Cyphers is chairwoman of the Auxiliary for Marian Residence and Regina Hall. She has recently adopted a baby, and children's issues are her priority.

One of her concerns is the lack of regulations regarding fencing for swimming pools. There are regulations about fences around a property, but not around the pool itself.

Preserving the characteristics and lifestyles of neighborhoods is another of Cyphers' interests.

"People move to neighborhoods for a reason," she said. "They want them to remain just as they are."

KIRK

"We need to provide more education for a more diverse work force. We need to be able to tell businesses that we have people for them to hire."

"Nevada ranks 50th in the nation in sending kids to college," Kirk said. He hopes Henderson's new college will help improve this statistic.

Technology is important to Kirk for other reasons. He wants to use it to bring government to the people.

He wants to use the Internet to create an electronic town hall.

"Citizen input is important in bringing government services to the people," said Kirk, who also wants to use the Internet to increase citizens' access to the city.

Kirk says people who do not have access to the Internet at home or work can use schools, libraries and the community college.

Hafen: Education is driving force behind a community

Lisa Stiller
News Staff Writer

Councilman Andy Hafen is pleased that the city has been through a visioning and strategic planning process.

"I am a strong proponent of having goals in front of me," he said.

He believes public safety is one of the top priorities for a community.

"Everyone wants to live in an area where they feel safe," he said. As long as the community grows, Hafen says, police and fire departments need to grow as well. "People want to know that the appropriate personnel are going to respond when needed."

To meet this need, Hafen advocated the new traffic division of the Henderson Police Department. Patrol units will no longer have to be tied up with accidents or traffic violations.

"Education is the driving force behind a community," Hafen said. He believes that deconsolidation will give the city more control over their own schools.

He is very excited about the new four-year college. "It will provide more opportunities for people in the local area," he said. Hafen also noted that the college will provide the training needed for the additional teachers and health professionals needed in the valley as growth continues.

Henderson needs to be ready for the impact of a large student population. Hafen said student needs for such things as housing and other services will attract a lot of businesses.

Along with the college, Hafen says Gov. Kenny Guinn's Millennium Scholarship will also help encourage local students to stay in the area. High school students graduating with a B average or better will be able to attend college in Nevada at little or no cost.

Hafen feels that is important for Henderson's parks and recreation facilities to keep up with the city's growth.

"We have been very successful with bonds for building new facilities," he said. He wants to be sure the city continues its momentum while maintaining the current facilities.

Listening to Henderson's residents is very important to Hafen, who has gone out to the city's neighborhoods to meet with people.

Jim Born, who is asking the city to revoke the light use permit, said he has unsuccessfully tried to resolve the issue with the school district.

"The lights are so bright that we literally have to turn off all the lights in our house when they are on. When you drive down the street, the lights blind you," Born said.

Born said that others are just as upset as he is over the stadium lights. One resident will be presenting the commission with 32 signatures asking for a permit revocation.

"Privacy is another problem," Born said. "People in the grandstands can see right into my house."

Johns says if the permit is revoked, the impact on the community will be great.

"There is no more a visible event to a high school than a football game," he said. "It involves three teams, cheerleaders, the band and spectators."

The only other feasible alternative would be to hold games during the afternoons or weekends.

Johns says this would have a tremendous negative impact on the school. Afternoon temperatures during football season, especially in August and September, tend to get very hot.

"I don't think that's healthy for the team or the spectators," Johns said.

Another problem would be the effect on game attendance. "Parents who are working would be prohibited from seeing their kids play," he said.

Also on the agenda is the city's design for an amphitheater that will be built at 200 S. Green Valley Parkway. The amphitheater is being built in conjunction with a multi-generational center, which will be at the same location.

When first being brought to the Commission, city planners were asked to make improvements in parking and resolve concerns over sound levels.

According to recreation superintendent Rich Robles, "The new facility will be a combination of a senior center and a recreation center for all ages."

"It is a consolidation of services to bridge the gap between the ages," Robles said. "It will be a shopping place for leisure services of all ages."

Recreation supervisor Annette Mullins said the amphitheater will also host events of interest to a variety of age groups.

"Concerts, Shakespeare in the Park, craft fairs, and other outdoor activities will be held there," she said.

Robles and Mullins say the multi-generation center and amphitheater should be completed by late summer of 2001.

In other business, the Planning Commission will consider a request from the Church of Latter Day Saints to build a church between Greenway Road and College Drive, south of Mission Drive.

A request from the Foothills Montessori School to approve the building of a new private elementary school on Amador Lane, in the Green Valley planning area, will also be considered.

'The Donald' image

Sometimes it's hard to separate the image from the man, the perception from the reality.

Few private citizens in contemporary American life have had more headlines, more innuendo, more jokes associated with him than "The Donald."

And now Donald Trump is coming to Henderson.

Mayor Jim Gibson announced last week Trump and his Hong Kong partners are setting out to build an exclusive golf course and residential community in southwest Henderson.

One of Trump's first good moves was to hire the well-regarded public affairs consultant Bob Campbell, a former Henderson city manager who has worked with the American Nevada Corp. and Lake Las Vegas, as well as participating in other highly successful ventures.

When asked their reaction to the news of Trump's plans for Henderson, most Las Vegas and West Coast natives thought it a good thing. Their only questions concerned the things Trump might give back to the community.

East Coasters had a different reaction: Their image of Trump as a narcissistic womanizer colored their view. They want him to stay in New York.

But Campbell has an interesting response: "His image doesn't have anything to do with the golf course."

Abe Wallach, vice president of real estate for the Trump Organization, said, "Trump should be judged by the quality of the projects he has done."

Henderson is not getting Donald Trump. It is getting an upscale golf course and residential community.

Trump's representatives will be in town next week to lay out their initial plans for the 600-acre site, which must be approved by the Henderson Planning Commission and the Henderson City Council.

Residents and city staffers should leave aside the tabloid headlines, the late-night jokes and the other innuendo frequently associated with Trump to consider his plan objectively, the opportunities it represents and how it will affect the quality of life for Henderson's residents.

Graffiti clean-up:

Too bad it's a full-time job

Graffiti. Inner-city art. Vandalism. Crime.

The names may change, but the meaning is the same.

Graffiti is a crime punishable by fines, jail time and community service and nationally, costs millions of dollars per year to clean.

The city of Henderson has a full-time employee whose only job is to clean graffiti. While he enjoys his work, it can be discouraging.

Once a city wall, flood wash, street sign or lightpost is cleaned of graffiti, the job is only half done. Unfortunately, once an area has been cleaned or repainted, it is left wide open for the next tagger.

Henderson's graffiti clean-up program is in its second year. Through the city's graffiti hotline, the city has responded to more than 600 calls on graffiti violations and has repainted or cleaned about 100,000 square feet of city property.

Many taggers are juveniles who enjoy the thrill of doing something illegal. While many paint and hardware stores have tried to curb the sale of spray paint to potential taggers, the next battleground should be in the home.

The first and foremost roadblock for a tagger should be with the parents. If little Johnny comes home late one night with paint on his hands and clothes, parents should consider that their darling son has been up to no good.

Cleaning graffiti for the city is a matter of persistence. To go back and clean the same tagged area — again and again — will eventually stop the graffiti, but costs the city hundreds of dollars each day. Taggers should also know that the Henderson Police is well aware of constantly tagged areas, and if they want to play the averages, they will get caught red-handed, or green, or orange or whatever.

Criminal penalties for graffiti ranges from misdemeanor, gross misdemeanor to felony and charges are based on the dollar amount of the damage.

Misdemeanor convictions can also result in six months to one year in jail and a tagger convicted of felony graffiti can face one year to life in a state prison. Along with fines, jail time, a suspended driver's license and a minimum 16 hours of community service, any graffiti involved with gang activity will automatically double the sentence.

Henderson has set up a graffiti hotline for residents to report violations, 566-2696.

Saluting racism

On the day Democrats were lambasting George W. Bush and John McCain for having no opinion on South Carolina's official use of the Confederate flag, Al Gore, Bill Bradley and Hillary Clinton faced a flag of their own: Al Sharpton. Asked what they thought of his dapper demagogue, they all — either in words or in action — responded with sharp salutes. Like their GOP counterparts, it turns out their allegiance is to whatever gets them the most votes.

Before you take pen in hand or, worse, dash off a poison e-mail, I will instantly acknowledge that my analogy is not exact. Whatever his manifest faults, Sharpton is not emblematic of slavery and Jim Crow. The Confederate flag is in a class of its own.

But Sharpton is emblematic of racial division, gutter demagoguery and one of the ugliest attacks on a citizen that I can recall. He has employed anti-white rhetoric, skirted just this side of anti-Semitism and was found by a court to have defamed an innocent man. He's a political force in New York, all right, but it's never clear if his cause is racial justice or, as we are all entitled to suspect, himself. If it's the latter, he can be pronounced a huge success.

Sharpton's name surfaced in Iowa's Brown-Black Presidential Forum, held on the Martin Luther King holiday. Both Bradley and Gore were asked if they would respond to Sharpton's request for a meeting. Gore punted, saying he had already met with Sharpton as part of a large group. Bradley had done better — gone to Sharpton's Harlem headquarters for a meeting. I don't agree with Al Sharpton on everything, but I think he has to be given respect," he said.

Respect, as it turned out, is precisely what Hillary Clinton was offering. She too found her way to Sharpton's headquarters, where she marked King's birthday. This was a great coincidence because Sharpton sometimes likens himself to King. He once noted that King, like him, had been sued for defamation. He failed to note, though, that in his case, the suit was justified.

The plaintiff was a man named Steven Pagonis. Back in 1988, he was an assistant district attorney in the upstate New York county where Tawana Brawley said she had been kidnapped and raped. She said white men had done it and Sharpton, with a mind as keen as Sherlock Holmes', knew precisely who: Pagonis.

"We state openly that Steven Pagonis ... did it," Sharpton said. "His lawyers say he may or may not sue us. If we're lying, sue us so we can go into court with you and prove it."

Pagonis did sue. It took him 10 years to be vindicated and by then a grand jury had concluded that Brawley had concocted her story. She, though, had been a terrified 15-year-old, out all night and afraid to face her father.

What was Sharpton's excuse? Did he know from reading the tragic history of his own people what it's like to be falsely accused of rape on account of race? Bravely, he soldiered on anyhow, lynching Pagonis — not from a tree, mind you — but from every media outlet he could find. To this day, Sharpton has never uttered an apology.

Is this what Bradley respects? Is this why Gore keeps quiet? Is this why Hillary Clinton went to Sharpton's headquarters? If not that, could it be the speech Sharpton delivered at Khalid Abdul Muhammad's Harlem hate rally in 1998?

Sharpton said he appeared at the rally because Mayor Rudolph Giuliani tried to deny Muhammad a permit for the rally.

Sharpton showed the right instinct. But when he opened his own mouth, not a word of criticism of Muhammad escaped. This was a man who even Louis Farrakhan had found objectionable — a homophobic, anti-Catholic, Jew-hating racist. Sharpton lent him his presence, name and fame. He left his moral indignation at home.

It's true, of course, that Sharpton has done some good things. He's Johnny-on-the-spot when New York's cops occasionally experiment with some new torture technique or mow down an innocent man for being, among other things, not white. He's also a champion of the underpaid and the poor in general. He's not all bad, but the bad has been repellent.

George Bush and John McCain look at South Carolina's rebel flag and see votes. It's that simple. Gore, Mrs. Clinton and Bradley look at Sharpton the same way. (In fairness, Bradley's so dreamy on race, he may not get Sharpton at all.) All these politicians have their differences, of course, and some of them matter greatly. But when the campaign is over, they can all join hands and unite over what they have in common: hypocrisy. Anyone want to salute that?

Methods of increasing standards are debatable

I was in Washington, D.C. last week and had an opportunity to listen to people from around the country belonging to different educational organizations gripe about Education Week's report card issued last week on the states.

While as a whole, Nevada performed poorly, the state did receive an "A-" on Standards and Assessment. If anyone read the fine print in this grading scheme, I think they might come away a little disillusioned.

It seems Ed Week used the American Federation of Teachers (AFT) report card released last year as a basis for their report card. AFT's grade was based on "specificity and clarity" of standards.

In other words, they wanted teachers to be able to create lesson plans based on the state standards. In reality, AFT wanted state curriculum documents to look like local school district documents. That's been accomplished in many states, including Nevada at a great dollar cost.

While AFT's grade for Nevada was a "B," Ed Week's grade was an "A-."

What's the difference? Well, Ed Week gave points if teachers graduated from an institution accredited by National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE). Out of more than 1,000 teacher preparation programs in the country, about 500 are accredited by NCATE. Some institutions are not accredited at all, some are accredited by other bodies. Ed Week also gave points if the state developed standards in math, English/Language Arts, science and social studies and planned to test those areas for graduation.

The problem we had with the grading states a couple of years ago persists today. The criteria for the grades are different among the groups doing the grading.

So, Fordham gives the state a "C," Ed Week, an "A-." Does that mean states that receiving an "A" have better or more rigorous standards than states with a "C." Better read the fine print before you jump to that conclusion.

For whatever reason, I was identified as an expert in implementing state standards by the Council of Chief State School Officers (CCSSO). At that particular meeting, I asked the AFT representative if they evaluated the scope, sequence and attainability of standards. The answer was no. To be honest, it was a loaded question, I knew the answer, but others around the table were a little surprised.

There are a number of ways to increase educational standards. In Nevada for instance, the state could raise the passing score on high-stakes tests. That is, rather than just earning a 64% to pass the high school proficiency exam to graduate, that bar could be raised to 70 or 75%. That will get people's attention. It would also force students to attain greater mastery of the material.

Another way to raise standards is to study topics more in depth. Rather than have students just memorize rules they don't understand, the state could require more depth by ensuring appropriate development of concepts.

So when students are asked "why" they flip and multiply when dividing fractions, they have a reason besides their teacher told them to. That understanding will result in students being able to think critically and to solve problems.

The initial document approved by Nevada's Council to Establish Academic Standards was based on that model and included process standards to ensure students were more comfortable in their knowledge, understanding and application of mathematics.

However, after the original adoption, the council chose still another method to increase academic standards. The council chose to add more to the curriculum — a third method of increasing educational standards.

So, how do you stand? Should student proficiency be determined by a student earning a 64% on the high school proficiency exam, a grade equivalent of a "D"? Should students study the curriculum more in depth to increase student comfort and understanding? Or should we add more to the curriculum before they have even mastered those topics requiring teachers to cover material faster?

While all three methods have pros and cons, one thing of which I'm certain is if we add more to the curriculum, the passing grade will have to be lowered on proficiency exams and the state will have to come up with a lot more money to remediate students who can not reach the goal on the first attempt.

College should go downtown!

Editor:
 Your editorial dated Jan. 20, 2000 was right on point. The new university should be placed in downtown Henderson. The University will become the center of educational, cultural and community activity and will enhance Henderson.
 You only need look at other university towns and see the good derived, i.e., Madison, Wisc., Columbus, Ohio and Henderson, of course!

DARE is a success

Editor:
 The fifth grade students at McCaw Elementary School have just completed their DARE course. We truly appreciate the willingness of the city of Henderson and the Henderson Police Department to commit the resources to provide Drug Abuse Resistance Education for area students.
 Officer Garrett Poinier, the DARE Officer, really got through to our students. The following is an essay by fifth-grade student, Dale Fones:
 "I feel safe because there's DARE Officers to teach us, and keep violence off the streets. I think DARE should start in fourth grade, but it's good that they start in fifth so that you won't participate in any drug-related activity. DARE officers deserve more credit for what they accomplish. They save lives.
 I've learned there are so many ways to say no, like simple "no," if the problems get bigger "strength in numbers." Get involved with positive activities. If you do stuff at the last-minute, you have high stress.
 No one can make you do drugs. You are your own person, you have your own brain. Don't do drugs, you'll kill yourself, or someone else."

Why the delay on the disabled?

What do you think it will take to get the state health division interested in the plight of the disabled? A direct order from God? Or would that be enough? Given this division's three years of inaction, you have to wonder if even God could get it moving. Certainly the Legislature has been unable to do anything.

It was way back in 1997 that the Legislature, dewy-eyed and hopeful, authorized $500,000 to help severely disabled people get out of nursing homes and into their own homes. It all seemed simple enough. The health division and the Department of Employment, Training and Rehabilitation would get a federal Medicaid waiver, and an expanded program would begin helping the disabled who were seeking help.

But in 1999, the Legislature discovered that absolutely nothing had been accomplished in two years. No waiver had been obtained, and no money had been spent. At a Ways and Means hearing, Janice Wright, head of the Division of Health Care Financing and Policy, talking glowingly of how efficient her agency was, but there was no sign of this much-touted efficiency in the waiver process. Instead, legislators heard only vague excuses about how cumbersome the federal process is.

But legislators, still dewy-eyed and hopeful, accepted Wright's argument that services for the disabled could be expanded without drastically revamping the Medicaid waiver system. And guess what? Here it is 2000, and there still is no program. The only thing in plentiful supply, as always, is excuses.

Legislators are being told that Wright's office was delayed by staff turnover and other tasks (no doubt far more important than the plight of the disabled). Legislators are told that a draft of a different waiver has been delivered to Human Resources Director Charlotte Crawford, but that it still needs fine-tuning. All of this is absolutely disgraceful.

Does anybody care, in this lethargic and seemingly indifferent bureaucratic system that there are real people out there hurting? Does anybody ever have any sense of urgency about these people? Is there any concept of how long, how excruciating the wait is, day after day, week after week, month after month, year after year, for people who desperately want the comfort and independence of home? It certainly doesn't seem so.

One year ago, Nevada ranked 51st among the states and the District of Columbia on money spent to keep the elderly and the disabled out of nursing homes. It ranked a heady 48th in providing home and community-based services, despite the fact that in the long run, alternative and home care is far cheaper than nursing homes. You can bet that Nevada's status has not improved since then. The only thing that this state government seems good at is delay.

The health division needs a thorough shaking, the kind that makes heads roll. And though Kenny Guinn inherited this mess when he became governor in 1999, it's his mess now. It is time for him to clean it up.

Sometimes it's the little things that count

I didn't plan on writing a column today because of many pressing business issues. However, I learned that we were not publishing the youth basketball standings in the sports section because of space constraints.

Being a parent of children in these programs, I know how important the standings are to our children. One of the first things my son looks for in the local paper is his team's standing.

He, like myself, likes to measure the possible intensity of the next opponent. So today I dedicate my space to something more important than anything I might have to say.

Editor's Note: The following standings reflect games played up to Monday, Jan. 17, 2000. If you would like your standings published, fax them to 434-3527 Attn: Ray in sports.

WHAT YOUR NEIGHBORS THINK

"Are you interested in the the match up between the St. Louis Rams and the Tennessee Titans in Super Bowl XXXIV?"

"No, not really. I'm not all that into football, but some of my friends are big Rams fans so they're pretty excited."

Harrison Rapp

"No, because my Buffalo Bills aren't in it and they should be."

Charlie Anzalone

"No, I don't watch football that much. Who's playing?"

Randy Bartlett

"No, because the teams change names and cities so much it's hard to keep track."

Audrey Garcia

"No. Football has gone too Hollywood for me. Plus, I'm from San Francisco so if the 49ers aren't in the Super Bowl, why watch it?"

Founder of Del Mar Mortgage uses common sense, excitement

David Hare
New Staff Writer

Michael Shustek just got back from a safari photography shoot in Africa, a trip he described as "awesome and exciting." The same could be said about Shustek's outlook on investing.

As the founder and CEO of Del Mar Mortgage, Shustek is a cautious guide in the unpredictable world of real estate investment.

"I saw the need for people to borrow money efficiently," Shustek said. "Banks weren't able to do it as fast as a private lender."

In 1993, Shustek founded Del Mar Mortgage to develop investment opportunities for individual lenders and corporations through real estate trust deeds. Six years later and Shustek, 41, is sitting behind the wheel of one of the largest private mortgage companies in the nation.

According to Shustek, Del Mar handles about 5,000 investors and about $200 million in outstanding loans; the company has made loans on more than 4,500 real estate properties.

"We've handled almost $1 billion of money and our clients have suffered no losses," he said. "In this business, that's unheard of."

So how does Shustek successfully manage to come up with the lion's share?

"A good economy, common sense and no greed," he said. "People who make bad loans are greedy. You've got to know when to pull back."

Our safari guide now takes us back to Brooklyn, where Shustek was born. However, his family soon moved to San Diego, the place of Shustek's upbringing.

Soon after arriving in Southern Nevada, Shustek graduated from the University of Nevada,

IN THE SPOTLIGHT

MICHAEL SHUSTEK

Las Vegas. He worked in the gaming industry for a few years, "the world's worst craps dealer" at the Tropicana and Imperial Palace.

In 1993, he started Del Mar Mortgage with one client or investor. That one investor told another friend and by the end of the day, well, let's just say Shustek has never looked back.

"We are approaching 5,000 satisfied customers," he said. "No one can match our track record — we have no competition."

According to Shustek, the average investor at Del Mar is about 65 to 70 years old, retired, and looking for a secure income. Through these private investors, borrowers are able to build and develop on land parcels throughout the valley.

"There isn't a major street in town that we haven't put a loan on," he said. "We can do up to $4 million in 72 hours."

Shustek, a resident of Henderson for more than six years, sees this town as a prime location to continue his expansion efforts.

"Henderson is a great place to loan out," he said. "We've done over $30 million in Henderson over the last year and a half. Things look great here."

While his loan transactions include casinos and about nine assisted living centers in Clark County, Shustek said the only real estate investment he won't touch is churches.

"I would hate to have to foreclose on God," he said with a laugh.

As part of his effort to give back the community, Shustek has sponsored the Del Mar Nevada Senior Games for the last five years, which enables those 50 years and older to participate in Olympic-style events.

Shustek has also made donations to the Gordon McCaw School of Mines in Henderson.

Whether it's investing in his community or finding the best deal for his clients, Shustek combines common sense with a sense of adventure in everything he does.

For future borrowers looking to grab a piece of the American dream, Shustek offers the following advice:

"It's not rocket science," he said. "Make sure the property is worth lending out on. Do your homework."

just volunteering. Instead, he feels he's part of something much larger.

"People who can't work for themselves can still do much more by helping others," he said.

During the holidays, the Salvation Army provided assistance to hundreds of residents and Parry kept busy straight through the new year. On some days, he stayed longer and worked harder than some full-time, compensated employees.

Senior citizen Joyce Neely has volunteered at the Thrift Store for more than two years. In between caring for her husband at home, Neely works at the store to relieve stress.

"We get so consumed by our everyday relationships, the stress will build," she said. "I first started coming here for just a different environment, but I was quickly inspired by the people that work here."

The flexible schedule at the Thrift Store also allows Neely to do personal obligations without interfering with her work. Often, she'll spend a few hours at the store in the morning, do some other errands around noon, then come back to finish the day.

"Many people have asked about volunteering their time, but are concerned about working a fixed schedule. The best thing to do is just do it, even a couple of hours a week helps," she said.

Of course, volunteerism provides personal satisfaction, it also opens the door to great friendships:

"One of the great things about working here is that everybody puts their heart and soul into their jobs. These people are more than co-workers to me, they're more like friends and family and I love them," Parry said.

The Salvation Army is always looking for people to help. Interested volunteers can apply by calling, 565-9578.

AZAC mulls fate of Silverado students

David Hare
News Staff Writer

The Attendance Zone Advisory Commission (AZAC) will hold another in a series of public input meetings at 6 p.m. Feb 3 at Silverado High School.

The focus of the meeting is to discuss two proposals which would help to relieve the overcrowding at Silverado.

According to Dusty Dickens with the Clark County School District Demographics, Zoning and Realty Department, AZAC is considering a proposal which would offer a one-time option to students assigned to Silverado High School in grades 9 through 12 during the 2000-01 school year to attend Foothill.

Once the option is exercised, it remains in effect for that student until graduation, according to Dickens, unless the student is assigned to the new high school located at Maryland Parkway and Buena Vida.

"The option must be declared within two weeks of board approval of 2000-2001 zoning," Dickens said.

Board approval is anticipated by Feb. 29.

The other proposal is designed to give temporary relief to Silverado while the new high school is being built; under this proposal, all incoming or current Silverado freshman living within that zoning area would attend Foothill until the new school is completed in August 2001.

"Silverado is bursting at the seams, and it's only going to go up," said Kim Vesely, public information specialist with CCSN Facilities Department. "This proposal offers some relief."

The CCSN School Board of Trustees established the AZAC to ensure parents and residents could voice their concerns about zoning proposals or changes. The members of AZAC are volunteers, consisting of parents and concerned citizens.

Through public input meetings, scenarios are developed and ideas submitted to the School Board which has the final word on all zoning issues.

"Part of AZAC's job is to find different ways to relieve the overcrowding at certain schools," Vesely said. "The students and parents, not to mention teachers at Silverado could benefit greatly from these proposals. We encourage parents to come out and give their input."

Workshop to cover facets of financial planning

The Whitney Ranch Satellite Center, located on the campus of White Middle School, Galleria Drive and Patrick Lane, will host a financial management workshop from 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. on Feb. 10.

Participation is $12 per person. The workshop is sponsored by the Henderson Parks and Recreation Department.

"Financial management is a common-sense approach to helping reach your financial goals," said Xanie Derrick, recreation coordinator. "By implementing solid financial management practices today, you'll be better prepared to meet any challenges down the road tomorrow."

The fast-paced workshop will explore key areas of financial planning including cash and risk management, investments, tax planning, and retirement planning. The importance of estate planning will also be discussed. Estate planning is an organized approach to arranging financial and other affairs to allow for the efficient distribution of assets after death.

Advanced registration is recommended as space is limited. For additional information about workshops and classes offered at the Whitney Ranch Satellite Center, call 450-5885.

Brown JHS hosts Peace Week

David Hare
News Staff Writer

The Age of Aquarius was alive last week as Brown Junior High School hosted its second "Peace Week."

Teachers, administrators, and students donned their tie-dyes and love beads in an effort to promote peace throughout Southern Nevada.

"Peace Week is about teaching the students to appreciate cultural diversity, and using peaceful means to solve conflicts," principal Doug Gougar said.

A giant patchwork quilt was among the many designs and decorations adorning the hallways, each with its own message of peace, love and understanding. Every patch belonging to the quilt represented individual students' ideas on promoting peace.

Gregg Lipkin teaches seventh-grade English at Brown. He said supplemental curriculum is incorporated into the regular curriculum of each of the disciplines to teach conflict resolution, anti-bias and tolerance.

"Peace Play" are cooperative

PEACE — Gregg Lipkin, a seventh grade English teacher at Brown Junior High School, stands in front a patchwork quilt during last week's Peace Week celebration. The week-long event is dedicated to promoting peace throughout Southern Nevada.

games which encourage students to communicate with one another through mediation skills, according to Lipkin.

"The kids really get the message," he said. "The goal is to have this one week dedicated to peace, then have the message carried out through the rest of the year, into the community as well as the classroom."

As part of Peace Week, each student is encouraged to sign a peace contract, pledging not to be violent to themselves, family, friends or anyone else. Students then receive a "diversity bracelet" with beads representing the different races and cultures — red, brown, black, white, yellow.

"It's a chance for everyone to look at their own prejudices and find a way to change them," said Robin West, a program administrator who helped coordinate the event. "It's not a fix-all, but a chance to celebrate each other's differences."

Sponsors included the Clark County Social Service Neighborhood Justice Center, Safe and Drug Free Schools and the Henderson Boys and Girls Club.

Green Valley seniors help Kids Korner

The Senior Class Committee at Green Valley High School has adopted the Kids Korner at Sewell Elementary School.

Over the summer, members collected clothes, school supplies, books and backpacks and donated the items in September.

In October, the committee hosted a car wash, which raised more than $200. The committee also sponsored a one-day, school-wide change drive, which raised more than $800 in less than 50 minutes.

The Committee donated a $1,000 check to the Kids Korner, to buy clothing.

ONE-WOMAN SHOW — Actress Donna Lowre portrays poet Emily Dickinson in William Luce's "The Belle of Amherst" Saturday at the Kesterson Valley View Recreation Center. The one-woman show has the 53-year-old American poet recounting her life and times, three years before her death in 1886.

First Baptist Church moves services

David Hare
New Staff Writer

Pastor Rick Wilder remembers a time when his congregation consisted of about 25 people. Parking was adequate and everyone inside the church knew each other.

Then, in waves, more people started coming; cars were parked around the street, some were blocks away from the church. Soon, the church was running double services, each time to a full house of the faithful.

That was a little more than six years ago, when Wilder first started ministering at the church, located at 47 Atlantic St.

Beginning Feb. 6, the First Baptist Church will hold its first service at its new location at the Lake Mead Christian Academy, 540 Lake Mead Dr.

"We've outgrown our building," said Pastor Wilder. "We had to move. We were running out of space."

For about 50 years the First Baptist Church has been a place of worship for Henderson residents. The new auditorium at the LMCA seats about 500, according to Wilder.

He hopes that's enough to keep the church's tradition of faith moving ahead into the next century.

"People are coming from all over the world to live in Henderson," he said. "Realistically, we're ministering to the world from Henderson, Nev."

Wilder takes little credit in the growth of the church, choosing instead to assign the success to a higher source.

"The ministry is simply based upon the word of God," he said. "People realize they need the Lord in order to have successful lives and marriages. The Lord is the only one." Perhaps it's his approach to spreading this message that keeps the faithful flocking.

"We're not an entertaining church — entertainment is only a temporary emotion," he said. "Entertainment doesn't give you the wisdom to handle life."

Once the First Baptist Church settles down at the LMCA, Wilder said they plan to build a chapel on the premises. Currently the LMCA constitutes about 45,000 square feet.

"We've looked forward to this day for a long time," he said. "The Lord's been good."

New Replacement Window Report Reveals Secrets, Helps End Homeowners Grief

By Mike Cohen

Each year, more and more homeowners are taken advantage of by replacement window contractors who install poor quality windows, do inferior work, don't finish the job or get a deposit for their work and take off with the money. This causes financial loss, undue hardship or expensive lawsuits.

All this grief is unnecessary according to replacement window expert Matt Kreuz. "If homeowners spent as much time planning their replacement window project as they do planning for their vacations, they could save a ton of money and trouble," says Kreuz.

"Unfortunately they don't," he continued. "Quite often, they don't know what to do, how to do it, or what to watch out for. As a result, they settle for the lowest price or are pressured into paying too much. They don't take time to check references or research which windows are best for their home. In the end they wind up disappointed in their windows or even worse, ripped off! This hurts not only the consumer but also the reputation of the replacement window industry as well."

That's why Kreuz has recently published a new Consumer Awareness Report entitled: How To Avoid Costly Mistakes When Replacing The Windows In Your Home. This Special Report reveals the Seven Little Known Secrets homeowners need to know in order to get the replacement windows they want, save money and eliminate all the hassles and headaches.

Says Kreuz, "If you are planning any replacement window and door project, you need to get a copy of this report now. It reveals a number of little known secrets that scam artists and high-pressure salespeople hope you will never find out, you will discover many new strategies, tips and techniques that will help you get the best replacement window and door contractor for that perfect project."

For a limited time, homeowners in the Las Vegas area can receive a valuable Consumer Awareness Report for FREE.

To obtain your free copy CALL (800) 725-4967, 24 hours a day, for a FREE RECORDED MESSAGE. Your report will be mailed to you without cost. But quantities are limited, so call now.

Marchese named chairman of SIFE Trust Fund

Sam Marchese, a Henderson resident for four years, has been named chairman of SIFE, the management company for SIFE Trust Fund of Walnut Creek, Calif.

The 37-year-old mutual fund, specializing in the financial services sector, has returned Marchese to an active management role to help guide the fund into the year 2000 and beyond.

Marchese, 57, began his career in finance working for the Pacific Coast Stock Exchange, then spent about 11 years with Security Pacific and First Interstate Bank in Southern California and Nevada. In 1983 he joined SIFE as portfolio manager, and rose rapidly to become executive vice president, a member of the SIFE Trust Fund Board, and president in 1995.

Under his direction, SIFE expanded its marketing area from California, Nevada and Hawaii to all 50 U.S. states, and in the process grew from a few hundred million to almost a billion dollars in assets under management.

"We are a value-driven fund," Marchese said. "We are not stock traders. Our strategy is to buy and hold for a very long time, accumulate dividends and reinvest them for our investors. Our history shows that that philosophy has worked very well.

"While the much-publicized high-tech equities have caught the public's attention in recent months, their very high price/earnings ratios are often overlooked. On the other hand, equities in the financial services — banks, savings & loans and thrifts — have PEs that we feel are very reasonable, and those are the stocks that constitute the majority of our holdings."

When not directing the activities of SIFE, Marchese and his wife, Maria, can be found enjoying life in their Henderson home, and traveling as time permits.

Berkley is still considering the pros and cons of deconsolidation, about which she has some serious concerns. One is that deconsolidation could add more layers of bureaucracy to the school district.

"I also need to know what it means for my district in terms of allocation of money for education," Berkley said.

Berkley has been active in other areas as well.

Last month, she announced $2.9 million in federal funding for social services in Clark County to help homeless families, homeless veterans and people with AIDS.

To help Henderson's crime prevention programs and aid in the city's efforts to keep crime down, Berkley helped obtain $1.6 million in federal funding to improve the technological capabilities of Henderson's police department.

As part of her efforts to reduce domestic violence, Berkley co-sponsored the Violence Against Women Act of 1999, which funds prevention programs and prosecution efforts.

Berkley serves on the House Transportation Committee, the House Committee on Veteran's affairs and the House Committee on Small Business.

She says Southern Nevada's biggest challenge comes from its growth.

"We have a strong economy, a wonderful climate and a business-friendly tax structure," she said. "Our challenge is to use this strength to diversify our economy."

TIME, DATE, PLACE AND REQUIREMENTS FOR SUBMISSION OF BID TO EXCHANGE
The bid offer on the City-owned Property will be accepted at the office of the City Clerk located at 240 Water Street, Henderson, Nevada, during regular business hours commencing January 20, 2000, and continuing thereafter until February 16, 2000.

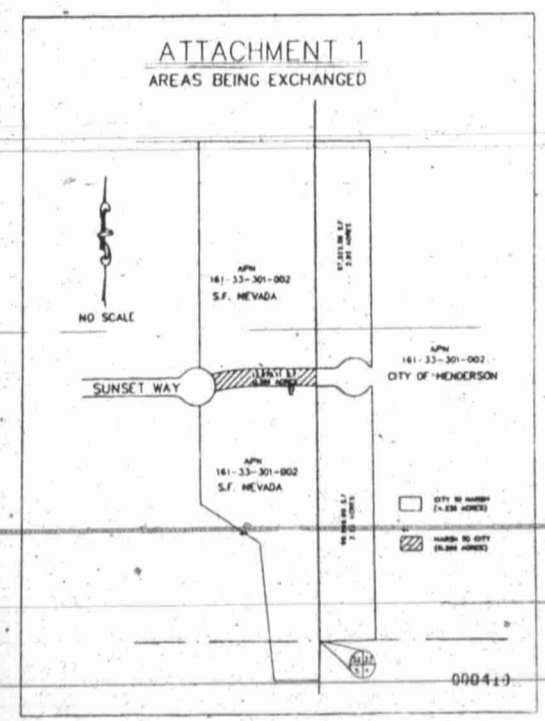

The bid offer to exchange must be in writing, sealed, and accompanied by a deposit equal to five percent of the total difference in the established values of the exchange parcels. Deposits must be in the form of a certified check, money order, or cashier's check. The bid shall be considered on the basis of achieving maximum benefit for the City of Henderson.

DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY FOR EXCHANGE
Approximately 4,235 acres of vacant real property owned by the City, being a portion of Assessor's Parcel No. 161-33-301-002 and located in the Southwest 1/4 of Section 33, Township 21 South, Range 62 East, M.D.M. for approximately 0.296 acres of vacant real property owned by S F, being a portion of Assessor's Parcel No's. 161-32-810-008 & 161-32-810-025 and located in the Southeast 1/4 of Section 32, Township 21 South, Range 62 East M.D.M., attached as Attachment 1.

CONDITIONS OF EXCHANGE
I. Values of the exchange parcels are as follows:
City-owned Property: $737,964
S F-owned Property: $83,896
Difference: $654,068 (the "Difference")

The value of the exchange parcels are based upon the following calculations:
City-owned Property: 184,491 sq. ft. (4.235 ac.) at $4.00 per sq. ft.: $737,964
S F-owned Property: 12,907 sq. ft. (0.296 ac.) at $6.50 per sq. ft.: $83,896

Should the area of either exchange parcel vary from the above, the final value of the parcel will be calculated by multiplying the net area (as determined by survey) by the corresponding above unit value for that parcel. The final Difference will be calculated by subtracting the final value of the S F-owned Property from the final value of the City-owned Property.

2. City and S F to each pay their respective escrow, title and closing costs as is customary in the state of Nevada.
3. 15% of the final Difference is to be paid to the City in cash at the close of escrow. The balance of the final Difference is to be paid to the City within three years of the close of escrow as evidenced by a duly executed promissory note secured by first deed of trust against the City-owned Property. Interest rate shall be 8.00%. S F shall make quarterly interest only payments to the City. S F may prepay the note without penalty.
4. $32,703.40 deposit required with bid (5% of the Difference). The deposit will be applied to the Difference amount. If, after the award of the exchange by the City Council, the City refuses or is unable to consummate the exchange, the deposit will be refunded to S F. If, after the award of the exchange by the City Council, S F refuses or is unable to consummate the exchange, the City will retain the deposit. S F acknowledges that the deposit shall constitute the liquidated damages to City in the event of default by the Buyer.
5. Proposal shall be for the entire City-owned Property and the S F-owned Property as depicted on Exhibit "B" attached hereto.
6. City shall take into consideration the proposed development for the City-owned Property in making its determination as to the best interest of the City in evaluating the bid.

7. The City Council reserves the right to reject any and all bids.
8. The initial escrow period shall be for a maximum period of 90 days and shall be deemed to have commenced the next business day following the date of City Council award of the land exchange and may be extended for two consecutive 30-day periods by mutual agreement.
For each 30-day extension, S F shall pay to the City an amount equal to 1/12 of the annual prime rate times the Difference prior to the final day of the initial escrow period or any mutually agreed upon extensions. The prime rate shall be the prime rate published in the Wall Street Journal within the fourteen days preceding the request for extension. Funds received by the City for extensions of time will be applied to the Difference upon close of escrow. Further, funds received for extensions of time are not refundable should S F allow the escrow to expire or cause the cancellation of the escrow. In the event of cancellation by S F or the expiration of the original term of the escrow or any extension thereof, the escrow shall terminate without further action. Funds received for extensions of time will be refunded should the City allow the escrow to expire or cause the cancellation of the escrow. 9. The exchange of City-owned property does not constitute an endorsement or approval of any development plans or a commitment or guarantee for water or sanitary sewer service. Provision of these services is administered pursuant to Title 13 of the Henderson Municipal Code.
10. This exchange is contingent upon S F obtaining zoning consistent with adjacent S F-owned property. S F shall be permitted to submit an application to re-zone the City-owned Property upon adoption of the Resolution and Notice of Exchange. S F agrees to diligently process the zone change.
11. The City intends the S F-owned property to become public right-of-way for the extension of Sunset Way. The City-owned Property does not constitute a legal parcel as defined in Nevada Revised Statutes Chapter 278. The City is responsible to prepare, process, and cause to be recorded the necessary Parcel Map required to consummate this transaction within the term of the initial escrow or agreed extensions thereof, at no cost to S F. City is responsible to prepare right-of-way documents and place new property corners on or before June 30, 2000. City is responsible to set permanent monuments along the centerline of Sunset Way once construction of Sunset Way is complete.
12. S F is to pay the City a lump sum of $65,500 as its one-half contribution of the estimated street improvement costs (excluding commercial driveways) at close of escrow. This amount shall represent S F's total contribution to the street improvements whether or not one-half of the actual cost of the improvements exceeds this amount. Should one-half of the actual cost for the improvements be less than this amount, S F will not be entitled to any refund whatsoever. The City is responsible for the other one-half of the improvement costs. S F is to pay all design fees, engineering costs, etc. related to preparation of construction documents (plans and specifications) for the extension of Sunset Way. S F shall process and revise the construction documents as necessary at S F's sole cost. Approved construction documents shall be delivered to the City no later than June 30, 2000.
City shall contract for and be solely responsible for bidding, awarding and administering contract(s) for the construction of the extension of Sunset Way. The construction of Sunset Way improvements is estimated to be complete by March 1, 2001. However, City shall have sole control over the construction schedule. S F agrees to cooperate with the City in the City's efforts in constructing Sunset Way.
13. The City acknowledges that S F, its employees, agents and representatives have made no representations or warranties, written or oral, express or implied, with respect to the S F-owned Property. The City is relying upon its own expertise and upon his own investigation of the S F-owned Property with respect to its suitability for the City's intended use. The City shall acquire the S F-owned Property AS IS and WITH ALL FAULTS.
14. S F acknowledges that the city, its employees, agents and representatives have made no representations or warranties, written or oral, express or implied, with respect to the City-owned Property. S F is relying upon its own expertise and upon his own investigation of the City-owned Property with respect to its suitability for S F's intended use. S F shall acquire the City-owned Property AS IS and WITH ALL FAULTS.
15. Upon award of the Exchange by the City Council, and prior to the expiration of the initial escrow or any mutually agreed extensions thereof, the City and S F shall enter into a Land Exchange Agreement incorporating these Conditions of Exchange. The Land Exchange Agreement will require subsequent approval of the City Council and once fully executed by City and S F shall constitute the entire agreement between the City and S F including the escrow instructions. Skyhawks' boys happy, move to 4-0 in division

Joshua Primack
News Staff Writer

How does a team improve? It gets down to its bare essentials. For Silverado's boys basketball team, the cupboards don't get any more empty than a 1-6 record and a roster of just eight players. Call it what you will, a click on offense, better communication or simply finding the groove, but the Skyhawks are riding a six-game winning streak and have won nine of their last 10. "It would be nice to be undefeated going into the second round [of divisional games]," Silverado coach Pat Condron said. "I think we have the team that can do it." Another step toward the Skyhawks goal was defeating Chaparral while on the road Monday, 68-57. They took control in the first half, mounting a 35-17 lead, including allowing five points in the second quarter. "We played a good game," Condron said. "Overall we shot the ball extremely well." The Skyhawks' lack of depth got to them as they let up 16 in the third quarter and 24 in the fourth. But all the Cowboys' efforts were for not as they still were unable to overcome the half-time deficit. "It was really exciting with the way we were shooting," Silverado guard Kevin Short said. "We're not very deep and we are learning from our mistakes. This win gives us some confidence." Short scored 17 points in the victory. Matching Short's total was fellow guard DeJaun Ashley while Brandon Cowan is starting to become a key player off the bench, scoring 12 points in Monday's contest. "We've got to play him (Brandon)," Condron said. "He is earning his playing time."

With the win, Silverado improves to 5-0 in the division and 11-9 overall. In other local action, Foothill travelled to Mojave to try its luck at a win with the Rattlers. However, the Falcons were unable to break into the win column Monday losing 73-63. Despite the loss, they have

Skyhawks sweep Wolves in bowling

In the sport of bowling, one of the biggest keys to success is adjusting to the alley your rolling at. Silverado's bowling team has first-hand experience of this critical part of the game, especially when analyzing where the oil is placed on each lane. The Skyhawks opened the season by sweeping Boulder City at the Eagles' homelanes, the Boulder Bowl. The Boulder Bowl, one of the oldest facilities in Nevada, is equipped with hard wood lanes and a return ball machine in which the bowl travels above the lane instead of below.

Silverado had no problems with another tough alley, Terrible Lanes, Monday as both the Skyhawk boys and girls squad were victorious 4-0. "What you want to do is just survive Terrible Lanes," Silverado coach Al Duncan said. "It's hard to put up your best numbers there. I was happy with the way we adjusted."

The girls won the pin total 2,317-2,063 while the boys defeated Basic 2,489-2,297. Janelle Kuaana and Stephanie Johnson paced the Skyhawks with high series of 486 — Johnson with Silverado's high game, a 209 in the first frame.

"I was especially happy with the girls," Duncan said. "This was one of the first times they came together. Even though it was a struggle to bowl there, they picked each other up." For Basic, three bowlers had a 400 series or better, including: Angela Bentz (445), Sara Foley (429) and Michele Coleman (413). "We were swept on the girls side and I am disappointed in that result," Basic coach Melanie Snively said. "But Silverado is much stronger this year on the girls side and I don't think we were necessarily prepared for that."

In the boys match, Silverado's Jason Cornell bowled a 554 and Randy Padua added a 508.

Betting the BIG GAME — plenty of choices available

Ray Brewer
News Sports Editor

Over the years, the Super Bowl has developed into more than game to decide professional football's champion — it's become one enormous social outing.

From huge parties with tasty food and drink to family gatherings centered around watching the highly anticipated commercials, the "Big Game" has a little something for all walks of life.

This holds especially true in southern Nevada thanks to sports wagering.

So when the St. Louis Rams and Tennessee Titans take the field Sunday in Atlanta, flocks of residents across the valley will have a little extra interest in the outcome.

In fact, the final score isn't the only result bettors will be rooting for.

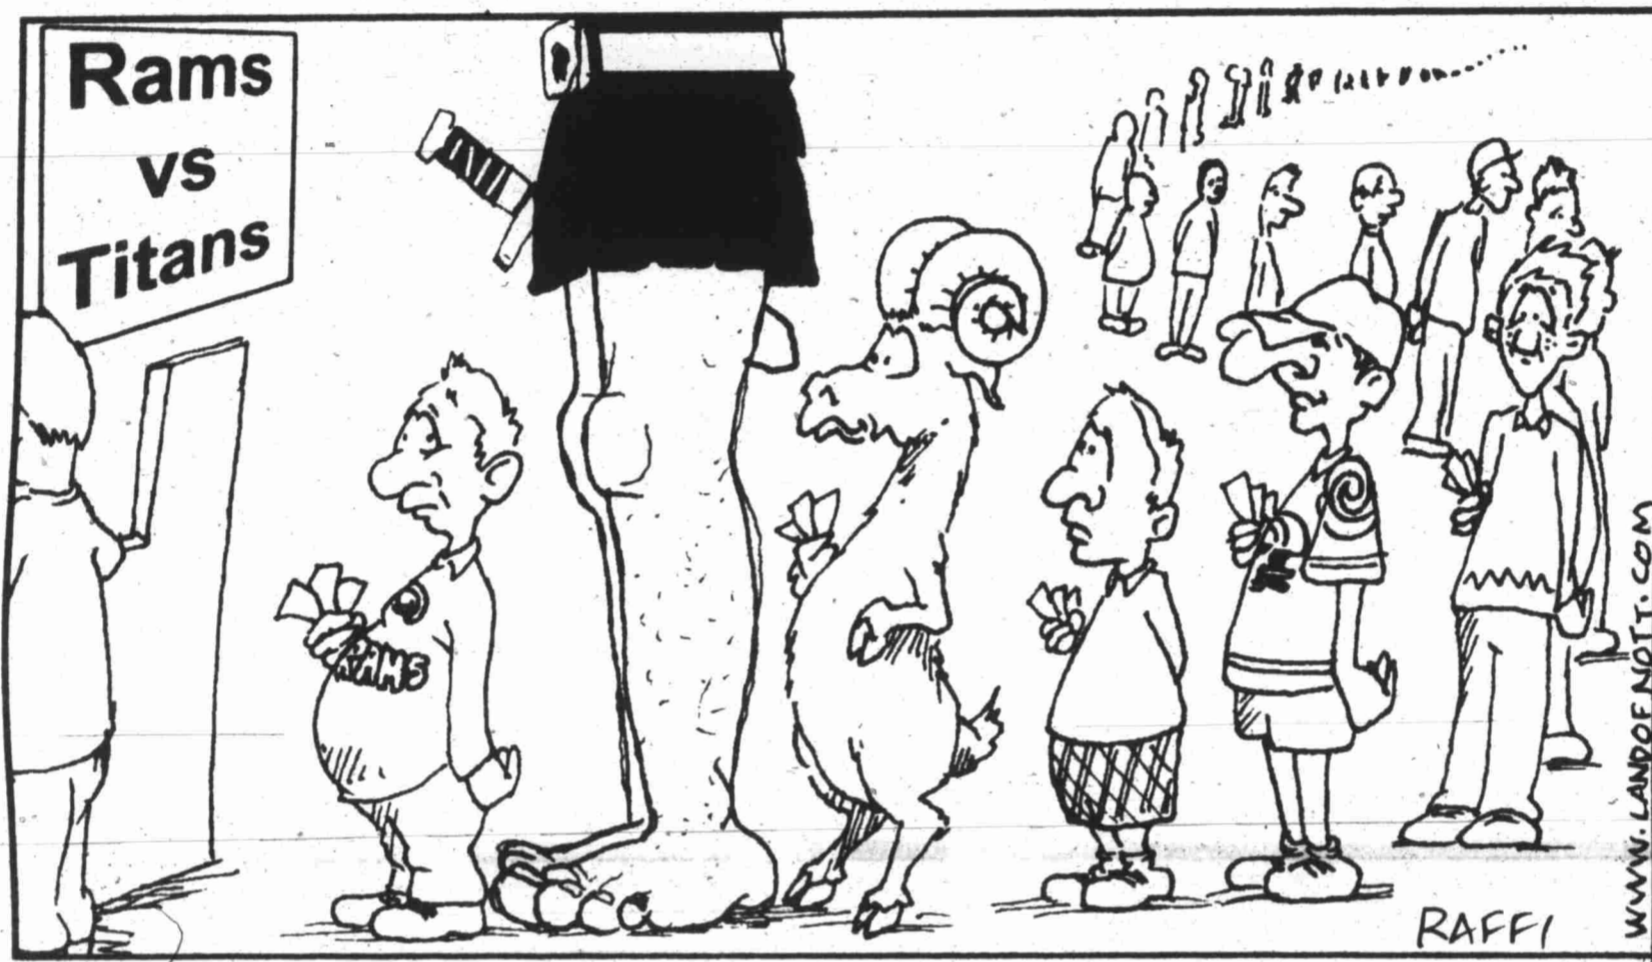

Proposition bets, such as the number of rushing yards by Titan star Eddie George, make every single play a possible money maker.

"We have a variety of prop bets on the board," said Tom Smilanich, race and sports book manager at Sunset Station. "We have prop bets on yardage for the two quarterbacks, yardage for the running backs, who will score first, who will score last."

"We have just about run the gamut of things to have a prop on. We have made it so you have action on every play of the game."

All it takes is a minimum wager of five dollars and interested patrons over the age of 21 can get into the action.

Wagering on the game isn't limited to your typical male bettor — the one who has action everyday. All walks of life, from females to college students and senior citizens get into the activity.

For the record, the Rams are seven point favorites over the Titans with a total of 48.5. This means if you bet the Rams, they have to win by eight or more points for you to collect and if you bet to game over 48.5 points, both teams' final score has to equal more than 48.5.

"This has become popular because basically the hype that goes on with the Super Bowl," said D. Wayne Mauldin, sports book director at The Reserve. "If they only make one bet a year, they bet on the Super Bowl."

The proposition bets have become more popular than betting the game straight up. It's become a habit of local sports books to try to out do each other in posting the most exotic props.

The Imperial Palace, for example, has odds on whether the coin toss will be heads or tails. In previous years, there have been prop bets that involve other sporting events — for instance, will Michael Jordan score more points Sunday for the Chicago Bulls than the Denver Broncos do in the Super Bowl?

"This is a way every one becomes involved in the action," Smilanich said of the prop bets. "From grandmothers to grandfathers and husbands and wives, everyone has action at

Hermansen's faith makes him on-field success

"But life is worth nothing unless I use it for doing the work assigned me by the Lord Jesus."
Acts 20:24 (TLB)

Five years ago, while dozens of friends, family and media members were downstairs in his parents' Henderson home, 17-year-old Chad Hermansen was upstairs on the telephone.

The at-the-time Green Valley High senior was setting himself financially for the future. Yes, he was going to be a millionaire — and it had nothing to do with having to answer 15-straight questions correctly in front of a national television audience.

Minutes later, it was official. The Pittsburgh Pirates had made the eldest son of Bruce and Lisa Hermansen their No. 1 pick in the amateur draft. Chad was chosen 10th overall, which came with a price tag of $1.15 million.

As you may expect, Chad was all smiles.

"I warn every one among you... not to have an exaggerated opinion of his own importance; but to rate his ability with sober judgment."

Romans 12:3 (AMP)

Five years later, Chad is still all smiles.

In less than three weeks, he will leave for spring training with a chance to be an Opening Day starting outfielder for the Pirates — with whom he played 19 games with last September and October while hitting .233 and collecting his first major league homer.

Professionally, this year may be the biggest in Chad's life. He knows it will be important to impress Pirate management. He knows Pittsburgh's local media has anointed him as the chosen one. He knows it is time for him to fulfill his franchise's prophecy.

Chad is a gifted athlete. Speed, strength, agility. He was born an individual blessed with the tools to be a world-class athlete.

And this isn't just a hometown journalist talking. Do the homework and you will see: "He has natural, easy power — like Rafael Palmeiro," said veteran Dale Sveum in the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette last September. "He hits the ball 400-feet without any effort. He stood out at [Triple-A] Nashville. He was a man playing with kids."

Said Pirate first baseman Kevin Young in the same story: "He's one of those guys I actually look forward to having here... He works hard and puts his ego on the back-burner."

Many people involved with the game believe Chad will be an all-star at the Major League level.

That means hitting 30 home runs a season, collecting 100 RBI, stealing 25 bases and becoming a top-notch outfielder with his strong throwing arm. That also means big money, big fame, big contacts and big choices. But those choices Chad will make — and currently makes — aren't made with fame or riches in mind, they are made with the help of his religious faith.

As a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, his baseball talents led him away from serving a conventional mission for his church. But that hasn't stopped him from spreading his Christian word.

"Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your father which is in heaven."
Matthew 5:16

After combing for 60 home runs in his last two seasons at the Triple-A level, Chad is considered the top prospect in the young Pittsburgh organization. And, as Baseball America reported a month ago, he is also considered one of the most-liked individuals in that same organization.

"That's very important to me," said Chad of his growing reputation. "I try to meet everyone in the organization, everyone out there. I try to have an impact with the religious background I have."

Chad may not be in a foreign country

The Super Bowl — Agree to Disagree

Titans are no joke, they cruise to victory

Ray Brewer
News Sports Editor

OK, everyone repeat after me: The Tennessee Titans will win the Super Bowl, the Tennessee Titans will win the Super Bowl...Go Titans.

Brewer

I'm convinced the Titans will walk away victors of this Sunday's Super Bowl. Now, it's your turn to jump on the Titans' ship. Just like they did when they were underdogs against Jacksonville and Indianapolis in past weeks, Tennessee will have the last laugh. Plain and simple, the Rams aren't a good football team. Granted St. Louis is super fast and their defense is special, but they have thrived on beating up the NFL's worst teams all season.

When they were challenged, the Rams looked bad and lost. In fact, I'm hard pressed to find one win on the Rams' record that is overly impressive.

The Rams tore up a weak Minnesota Viking secondary in the second round of the post-season, but struggled against a real defense in Tampa Bay while rallying to win the NFC title game.

Trust me, the Titans are a lot better than the Saints and 49ers — two of the more miserable teams in football the Rams

See TITANS
Page 18

More of the same from the new Rams

Joshua Primack
News Staff Writer

For so long, the belief in all of sports was that a good defense would beat a good offense.

Primack

Whoever said that never saw the St. Louis Rams this season. Their offensive weapons are so diverse that they became the third highest scoring team in NFL history — touted as this year's Minnesota Vikings.

The difference between St. Louis and the Vikings is that the Rams are in the Super Bowl and their defense is better.

The Rams put their talents up against Tampa Bay, one of the best defenses, last Sunday and the Yellow and Blue still got the big play that gave them a 13-3 record this year.

Who can forget Ricky Proehl's remarkable touchdown catch under double coverage in the fourth quarter to give St. Louis its 11-6 victory.

Sure the Buccaneers' defense controlled the tempo of the game, but the Rams still found a way to get off the big play.

St. Louis's offense sports Marshall Faulk, league MVP Kurt Warner, Isaac Bruce, Az-Zahir Hakim, Torry Holt, Tony Horn, ad in finum.

They are as dangerous as a nuclear missile in Saddam Hussein's hands.

plenty to be happy about. "I have a good idea of who our [starting] five guys are," Silverado coach Kevin Soares said. "We have a strong base and I hope that some guys come off the bench and give us a spark."

One of those starters is Derek Freeman.

Freeman scored 35 points for Foothill (0-19, 0-4), nearing his school record of 39 a month ago.

"I was able to drive through the lane and get fouls," Freeman said.

Nearly half the junior's points came from solid free throw shooting, 16 of 22.

"Derek was playing very aggressive," Soares said.

The main feature of the Falcons' game plan involves the second half.

They were down 33-21 at the half and held their own late in the game, just getting edged 43-42.

Chris Cochran was second in scoring for the Falcons with eight points, all in the fourth quarter.

"The kids played hard and I like the way we finished," the coach added. "We cut a 16-point lead at one point."

With efforts like Monday, Foothill's first win may be within reaching distance.

"Our kids have set a goal of trying to win at least one," Soares said. "I want to see progress and want to be able to put two solid performances back-to-back."

If you stop the run, they will throw it to one of their five receivers, a tight end, one of their two running backs and, as they did in the divisional playoff game, toss a touchdown to an offensive tackle.

They can use any combination of speed and power in addition to evasive moves that would make Barry Sanders a fan.

Howie Long described the speed of St. Louis's offense like NASCAR races.

"When you watch it on TV, it looks fast," Long said on the Dan Patrick Show on ESPN Radio. "When you stand on the corner of the track, it is unbelievable."

The Rams snuck onto the scene by mounting victories at home that make the Green Bay Packers of old jealous. The only time they didn't score more than 21 points was last weekend against the Bucs.

The other two facets of St.

Louis's team, special teams and defense, combined for more touchdowns than the New Orleans Saints scored all season.

Their defense is No. 1 against the run this season and shut down Tampa Bay's Mike Alstott in the NFC Championship game.

Sure Tennessee defeated St. Louis 24-21 earlier this season, but the last half of that game looked like the Rams everyone fell in love with this season — outscoring the AFC representative 21-3.

JOSH'S PREDICTION — Rams 30, Titans 20.

TITANS

whipped twice each this year.

Take Oct. 31 against the Titans as another example. Tennessee dominated the first half in opening a three touchdown advantage en route to the win.

Remember, this is the Rams we are talking about. The same Rams that have made it a franchise tradition to win four or five games a season.

True, the Titans have had equal struggles in their history. But that won't make a difference when professional football's hottest team takes the field Sunday.

Tennessee is the total package.

Quarterback Steve McNair will dissect the Rams' defense with his scrambling ability and field awareness.

The Titan defense, fresh off holding Jacksonville scoreless in the second half last week, has two post-season safeties under its belt while yielding just 46 points in three games.

Last, but definitely not least, Tennessee has Eddie George. I can already picture Tennessee with a lead late in the game and George — the four-year pro from Ohio State — running out the clock with a the same hard-nosed style that has made him one of the league's fiercest runners.

...The Tennessee Titans will win the Super Bowl.

RAY'S PREDICTION: Titans build a two touchdown lead and hold on for a 23-19 victory.

Skyhawks hold on to beat Falcons in girls soccer

Ray Brewer
News Sports Editor

Entering halftime at Foothill High School Tuesday, Silverado appeared as if they were in for an easy second half.

The Skyhawks, in first place of the Southeast Division, had a comfortable 4-1 lead against the first-year Falcons.

However, Foothill (5-9, 2-3) scored two goals in the first 10 minutes of the second half to make things interesting before Silverado pulled away with a 6-3 victory.

"[In the first half] Silverado had some players unmarked running the center of the field," Foothill coach Natalie Thomas said. "We had our halfbacks play man-to-man on their key players and that really helped us."

The Falcons' Ananda Erickson slotted both goals in the second half as her team almost rallied for the upset.

"The girls came out with some fight in the second half," Thomas added.

But Silverado sophomore striker Abbey Mathis scored her third goal of the game late in the second half to ice the victory.

"There were shining points and bouts of sloppy play," Silverado coach Daryl Arrighi said of her team's effort. "We know where the breakdown occurred and we'll work on that before the playoffs."

Mathis scored twice in the first half while Shawna Park and Heather Tsukamoto also slotted in building the three goal advantage. Amanda Clayton scored the Skyhawks' other goal.

GREEN VALLEY VS. BASIC

The Gators held off a late surge by the Wolves en route to a 3-1 victory at Basic High School.

"We played well, considering there was kind of a let down from the Silverado game," Green Valley coach Ken Goettsche said. "The kids were ready for this game and pumped for this game."

Kim Chock, Lindsey Frakes and Lauren Castronova each found the back of the net for the Gators.

Green Valley led 2-0 at halftime before Basic's Crystal Chadwick cut the Wolves' deficit in half with a goal.

"We played a lot better," Basic coach Joe Stellavato said. "Defensively, we are still trying to pick it up. That's our biggest problem, trying to get the defense down."

With the win, the Gators are 11-0-4 overall and 3-0-2 in the Southeast Division. Green Valley along with Silverado and Chaparral have identical 3-0-2 division marks.

parties all over town. "It's a fun thing to watch your prop action all throughout the game. This way, if you have no loyalty to any of the teams, it doesn't matter, who wins the game."

Sunset Station has odds on the team to make the longest field goal, the team to score the longest touchdown and the team to score last in the first half.

All in all, Sunset Station has over 30 prop bets available.

For the most part, casinos make record profits over the Super Bowl weekend. Tourists from all over the globe choose the Las Vegas valley to enjoy the festivities, making more than the sports book big winners.

"Every hotel has some kind of Super Bowl party," Mauldin said. "They bring in all of their high roller and other guests and they make it over to the sports book."

Mauldin says that if the Rams win Sunday, several houses will be out some serious cash. The Rams opened in the neighborhood of 100-1 to win the Super Bowl at the beginning of the season and stayed at the high number for roughly the first month of the season. "Some books in Vegas, if the Rams win the Super Bowl, they'll be out six digits," Mauldin said. "And the first digit won't be a one...The Rams didn't even have a winning record last year."

It's this type of uncertainty that makes wagering the "Big Game" that much enjoyable.

BOWLING

game by just 35 pins, rallying from a 50 point deficit late in game.

"They had us down in the first game and we stayed real focused on what we had to do and pulled it out," Duncan said.

Needless to say, the Wolves weren't as happy with the outcome.

"The boys could have realistically won two games, but they couldn't close the door," Snively said. "It came down to missing easy spares that need to be converted in order to win."

Basic's Justin Andrews had the Wolves' high series with a 520, followed by David Clark with a 477.

GREEN VALLEY

The Gators' boys team went 3-1 (3,019-2,943) against Chaparral Monday at the Sunset Lanes.

"We still have not bowled well since our first match," Green Valley coach Ron Moracco said. "We keep changing our lineup looking for one more person to fit into the varsity mode. When we find him, hopefully we'll be rolling."

Jim Saucedo paced the Gators with a high series of 672 and Chris Stratter added a 649.

On the girls side, the Gators were defeated by Chaparral 4-0, 2,629-2,385.

"In the first game, we faulted," Moracco said. "Then, we made some changes for the second and third game and that helped out. I'm sure they [Chaparral] are the team to beat this year."

FOOTHILL

The Falcon girls defeated Vo-Tech 4-0 Monday at Terrible Lanes for the programs' first victory.

"The girls all pulled together," Foothill coach Diane Blick said. "That was the biggest thing. Once we won the first game, the enthusiasm of teamwork was fabulous."

Freshman Bridgette Townry had the high game for Foothill with a score in the 140s.

Foothill's boys team was swept by Vo-Tech 4-0, but Blick hopes they can learn a thing or two from the girls.

"The boys right now want to catch the girls," Blick said.

spreading his faith, but don't be mistaken, he is serving a mission.

"That's how I've always felt," he says. "I felt this would be my mission for this point and time in my life. If I don't do the things the Lord asks me to do, He can take away just as quick as He has given."

"When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things."
1 Corinthians 13:11

As Chad is well aware, life is not all about baseball. He has been blessed with more than just superior athletic talent — particularly with a supportive family and longtime friends.

But more recently, he and his wife of 15 months, Bracken, have been blessed with word that they will become parents in early July.

Bracken will accompany Chad this season wherever the Pirates assign him — they hope Pittsburgh, of course — and her mother will join them in the weeks prior to the baby's due date.

Professional baseball has been more than fair to Chad and Bracken, his high school sweetheart, but the travel schedule does take its toll.

"That's one of the things that's so hard about playing baseball — how often you're away from family. That's kind of the part I've dealt with since being away from high school."

While Chad was riding buses across the South in the lower levels of minor leagues, Bracken was earning her fine arts degree in illustration from Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah. At the same time — thousands of miles away — Chad's friends and family were keeping touch with him via phone calls and looking at updates on the Internet.

However, Chad stayed focused on his roots.

In fact, hours after making his Major League debut at home against San Diego the first week in September, Chad remembered many of the people who supported him somewhere along the way.

It was a simple e-mail to a group, but it said more than Chad's brief description of his first night in the bigs.

All wrapped into one, the e-mail was a thank you message, a sharing message and a message that told the readers one important thing, this guy hasn't changed.

"I don't think [I've changed]," Chad says. "I think I'm still the same person I was coming out of high school. Hopefully I've matured, but I always like to have fun. I'm just thankful now that I have a wife and a kid on the way."

"A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches."
Proverbs 22:1

Money is all around Chad. His agent, Jeff Moorad — super-agent Leigh Steinberg's baseball partner — represents some of the highest paid players in the game today. And those are highly paid elbows Chad has rubbed with.

So think about it — this is a young man with the world in front of him and over a million dollars already to his name. On top of that, Chad has spent the past year on Pittsburgh's 40-man roster, which pays in the low six figures annually. And finally, there is the potential for huge nine-digit contracts down the line if he blossoms into the player many believe he will.

Where would you be in Chad's situation? I can almost guarantee you it would not be the same place as Chad and Bracken are currently — at the bottom, literally.

The newlyweds moved into the basement of Bracken's Grandma and Grandpa Stevens' home in Utah after the wedding and haven't moved yet. They do plan on moving back to Henderson this next off-season, but for now, the basement works just fine.

And, in case you are wondering, Chad's faith remains when it comes to his pocketbook. From his bonus alone, 10 percent — that's $115,000 — went to the church for tithing.

Chad has money — and plenty of it. But he understands money doesn't make the man.

"We obey his commands and do what pleases him."
1 John 3:22 (NIV)

You think watching police blotter on "SportsCenter" every

"That's how I've always felt. I felt this would be my mission for this point and time in my life. If I don't do the things the Lord asks me to do, He can take away just as quick as He has given."

night bothers you? What about a straight-arrow professional athlete who is having a stereotype set for him?

It hurts.
 "That's half the show," says Chad, not trying to take the politically correct route for fellow athletes. "It's really kind of sad."

Forget Charles Barkley, Chad knows athletes are role models to our children.

"Just going to a baseball game, I see the kids everywhere," he says. "When I was a kid, I'd see the players on TV and follow what they did. Growing up and playing in the backyard, I was Ryan Sandberg."

"The good guys you see in baseball are examples for little kids. But I kind of think there are only a few of those guys around. Little kids need athletes to look up to emulate."

But who said it needs to be limited to just little kids. Chad is young, but he is wise beyond his years and we can all learn something from his humble ways.

He is a shining light in a sports world that is many times too bleak. And that, my friends, is his mission.

"God has given us all certain talents," Chad says, "and we have to learn to do the best that we can with them."

Ladies and gentlemen: Tommy and Shelby Chong!

A night of madness, mellowness and 'Mary Jane'

Eric Tischler
News Staff Writer

"I had to quit smoking for a while. I got a hold of one of those child-proof lighters."

Tommy Chong

Tommy Chong — comedian, singer, poet — brought his traveling roadshow, to Sunset Station's Club Madrid Saturday night for two sold-out shows.

Tommy, 61, the burned-out stoner who captivated audiences as the second half of the comedy duo Cheech & Chong, is still the same loveable doper immortalized in the films "Up In Smoke," "Still Smokin'," "Nice Dreams" and many more.

For those concerned that the outspoken advocate for marijuana, madness and mellowness may have tried to shun his earlier days with a different brand of humor, don't worry, Tommy still talks the talk and walks the walk.

"I can never find my stash when I need it," he told his audience of fans. "Until I get to the border and a guard picks it up and asks, 'What's this?' Hey, you found my stash, thanks man."

Since the 1985 split with comedy partner Cheech Marin, Tommy has set out on his own and joined forces with a new partner on stage, as in life, his wife Shelby. The duo brought their lives to stage with a series of skits that detailed the turbulent, often frustration, always hilarious life with a stoner.

During the show, the happy couple outlined a typical night with the Chongs. Even though it's not a night of consequence, it's a night based on life experience.

Shelby takes hours to get ready, while Tommy waits in the car and has a puff. Shelby gives Tommy the once-a-week opportunity to decide where to eat — and with all the indecisiveness of a stoner — can't make up his mind. Finally, the thought comes to him, and they make the journey to Taco Bell, a stoner's Garden of Eden.

Tommy and Shelby playfully bicker like any normal couple. Tommy had been arrested, more than once, trying to cross the border 'carrying'. "You never let me forget," Tommy told Shelby. "I make one mistake, one, and you hound me every day."

Tommy's show took on much more than a comic doing a written routine with a script.

Rather, Tommy made the evening more like chatting with a bunch of friends. Fans near the front were all active participants in the show and offered suggestions that simply took Tommy on another tangent.

Sunset Station's Club Madrid is a perfect venue for Tommy. The smaller room and intimate setting enabled him to bring the audience into the show. Many who watched Tommy's first set stayed for the second in which Tommy threw in different jokes and routines.

Always dedicated to his fans, Tommy spent a part of the evening signing autographs and shaking hands. Everyone who bought a T-shirt got it signed, but many asked him to autograph a package of Zig-Zag rolling papers.

Taking a cue from recent events, Tommy played multimillionaire and sex symbol Ricky Martin, with a twist. Tommy's version was not the teen heartthrob and former Menudo member. Instead, his Ricky was a baggage handler for American Airlines at Miami International Airport.

For Tommy, no subject is sacred or untouchable. In one skit with Shelby, he confuses the classic, timeless "The Wizard of Oz" as "The Wizard of Ounce," insisting that Oz is the abbreviation of measure of weight.

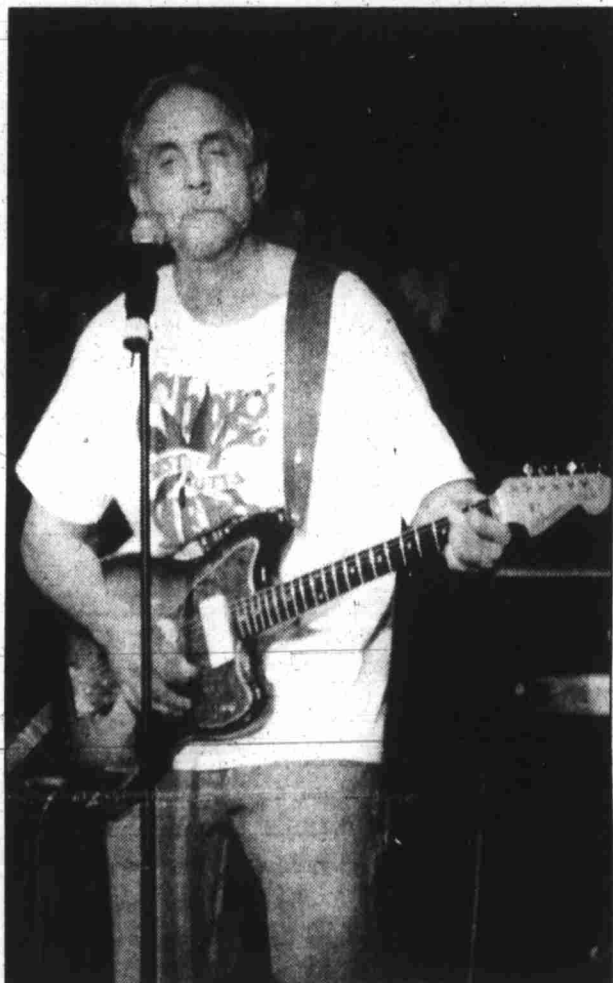

Cheech and Chong movies are still mainstays in rental stores and video sales and as surprised as Tommy may be over their success, the real surprise came to the movies' producers.

"For every time a movie is shown, we still get royalties on them," he said backstage between shows. "Last year, we got about $28, but hey it adds up. In 20 years you're looking at ... ummm ... a lot of money."

The shows were a mixture of new material along with classic bits from Cheech and Chong days. For these, Shelby often played his counterpart, but as the show progressed, Tommy bellowed for an audience member to join him on stage.

An enthusiastic audience is essential for any Tommy Chong show and the crowd went berserk when he invited someone on stage. Tommy chose an understandably nervous, but excited woman named Emily from Las Vegas, who joined him in the classic "Fifi meets Ralph" routine immortalized in the film "Still Smokin'."

The two got on a table on all fours and played a pair of dogs. With all the gross-out gags he could muster about canine behavior — including identifying each other by smelling their rumps — Tommy brought out the comedienne in Emily.

GUITAR LICKS — Tommy Chong, a master of the guitar, mixes music and comedy into his shows.

YIN AND YANG — Shelby, the stunning partner to the comedy duo, plays alongside her scruffy husband, Tommy Chong during a performance at Sunset Station last weekend.

Although Tommy split with Cheech over "creative differences" he still takes playful jibes at his former partner. In another bit that Tommy and Shelby sang about renting a Cheech and Chong movie.

Once he realized that he left the video at the store, he surfs the Discovery Channel to watch frogs procreate then flips on "Nash Bridges" and notices that Cheech looks funny without his shaggy handlebar mustache.

An accomplished guitarist, Tommy has traded licks with Jimi Hendrix and has recorded with Cypress Hill, Dr. Dre and the Spin Doctors.

One night, long ago, or as Tommy put it, "Before tonight," he found himself backstage at a Grateful Dead concert with legendary guitarist Jerry Garcia. Garcia, a fan, raised his hand and said, "I really like your stuff, Cheech."

A common mistake that Tommy doesn't mind, so not to be outdone, he said, "It's a pleasure to meet you, Mr. Santana."

On another fateful summer night in 1995, Tommy was at another Dead show in Chicago. He proudly announced that he shared a last joint with Jerry Bear.

"What are we smokin'?" Garcia asked. "I don't know, some guy gave it to me," Tommy said.

A week later, Jerry cashed it in and took his show to the next world bringing a crushing blow to all Dead fans and T-shirt vendors.

"I can't always recall my times with the Dead as they are a bit fuzzy," he said between sips of beer. "I did a lot of experimentation with some illicit substances."

While continuing to perform and record albums, Tommy has also made guest appearances on "Dharma & Greg," "That 70's Show" and the soon-to-air "E! Cheech & Chong True Hollywood Story" on Feb. 2.

Tommy's next project on the television will be a sitcom starring Shelby and his kids Rae Dawn, Robbi, Precious, Paris and Gilbran called "Father Grows Best."

"I'll play an herbalist, hemp, environmental scientist ... who with his family's help ... looks for ways to legalize and cultivate ... I'm sorry, what were we talking about?" he said.

A native of Edmonton, Alberta, Tommy has a house in British Columbia where the rich soil, temperate rain forest and long summer days make perfect land to cultivate his favorite flora.

When not crisscrossing the hemisphere selling out venues, Tommy stays busy with a number of projects. He is the national spokesman for Urine Luck and has his own line of T-shirts and hand-blown glass pipes, rather "incense burners." Tommy is also the proud mayor of Stonerville located on the Web at www.tommychong.com.

Tommy plans to step into an activist arena and will call for the end of the war on drugs.

"We'll have a big party to celebrate the end and the only way to win the war is to pretend we won the war," he said.

Tommy wrapped up the evening singing a duet with Shelby, "Up In Smoke." For Saturday's performance, he changed it to "Me and My Old Lady," but the message was the same:

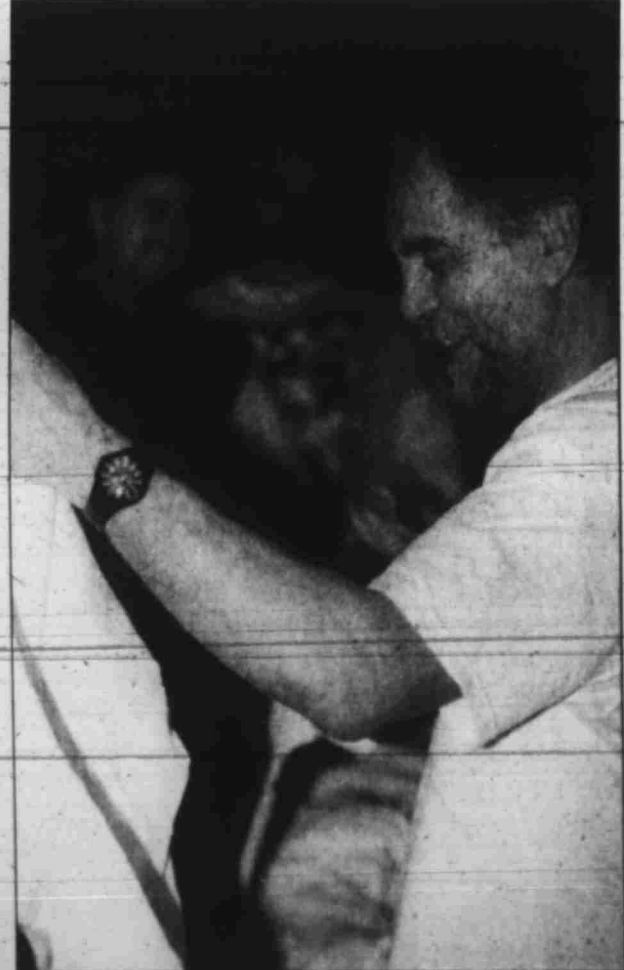

"I take a toke and all my cares go up in smoke ..."

Still the hippie love child, Tommy finished by paraphrasing John Lennon's "All You Need is Love" to "Love is all you need."

Same difference.

MEETING THE PUBLIC — After each show, Tommy Chong takes the time to meet his fans and sign autographs. Often he gets swamped with requests but Tommy's motto is to keep the fans happy with what they like. Many fans ask Tommy to sign albums, videos, T-shirts and the occasional pack of Zig-Zag cigarette rolling papers. Chong performed for two sold-out shows last weekend at Sunset Station's Club Madrid.

LIFESTYLES

Consider giving brother his space

Dear Carolyn:

I have a younger brother who seems to hate our family. He is jealous of any small success any of his siblings may have, even though he enjoys his share of professional success also. He does not have many friends. I think because he tends to cut others down, although he has a lovely girlfriend. I worry that he may be depressed. I don't know how to approach him. Can you suggest any way his family can reach out to him?

— MARYLAND

"Hate" is such a strong word. Are you sure it's not just "want to run screaming barefoot over earthworms to get away from"?

If you think he's really in trouble, I'd go with the lovely girlfriend. She has both things you want: his side of the story, and his ear.

But I'm not convinced backing off isn't the better move. In fact, since he's all but asked you to do that, not backing off might come across as disrespect.

Think about it. Your family's pretty successful, and also pretty tight, yes? And you see nothing but good in these things? Now imagine not being able to see anything in yourself that's better than what you were born with — what you achieved just by breathing. Imagine not having any real sense of yourself outside the family. Suddenly, all that good doesn't sound all that good.

TELL ME ABOUT IT

It's just a theory, but I'm willing to bet your brother is stuck in that spot. Before you make another pass at reaching out" to him, consider just giving him space.

Dear Carolyn:

I know golf is a poor analogy for love, but I've got a great long game and can't putt worth a nickel (which is paraphrasing what my platonic girlfriends tell me).

There's this girl in my class I've chatted up. I'm an amateur artist of sorts, so I drew her a quick pencil sketch — it was really cute — and she was amused and impressed. But now I don't know how to follow it up. I just have a feeling that let's see a "movie" isn't going to work — we're too busy right now with school. But if I overcompensate after having gone a little over-the-top with the picture, I fall into the "you're scaring me, dude" situation. I keep trying to trust the "vibe" thing, but my faith is faltering.

So, when the wind's at my back, should I shoot for the green and risk hitting it in the lake, or two-hit and hope my putting game pulls through?

— TIGER

Go for the nine-iron, then beat your analogy silly.

Keep your faith in the vibe. If the vibe rejects, "Let's see a movie," go with something more spontaneous and therefore less threatening "I'm getting coffee, wanna come along?" Just aim for the windmill and don't think so much.

Putt-Putt is a great analogy for love.

Carolyn:

I have had a huge crush on this guy in one of my classes. We were friends and had been hanging out, until finally he told me he was interested in more than just friendship. I was ecstatic, of course, and we made a date for that weekend. Anyway, he stood me up and didn't call. I called him the next afternoon to find out what happened, and he said something came up but was very vague. He's a pretty shy guy, so it could have been a case of nerves. I'm curious as to any theories you might have.

— COLLEGE TOWN, USA

Maybe he left his brain in his other pants.

You had the guts to ask him, and that's good, but now you're grilling yourself, and that's just prolonging the pain. Some questions don't have answers.

Dear Carolyn:

How do I respond to a friend who sharply criticizes me, and then tells me it's for my own good to make me a better person?

This friend is a fun girl most of the time, very witty and the life of the party. Yet when she directs comments to me about an outfit, the way I'm wearing my hair or something I said that she thinks is inappropriate she can be really vicious. And I am not being overly sensitive — I can respect a friend who tells you the truth.

I've told her to keep her comments to herself that I am happy being the imperfect person I am, but she continues to do it.

— SAN FRANCISCO

Uh-uh, there's no most of the time... "but." She's a control freak, full-time, and you're her pet power-trip.

Tell her that if the only way you can get the criticism to stop is to avoid her entirely, you're ready to give it a shot. And that her outfit totally sucks.

Gallagher named VP for development at UNLV

John Gallagher has been appointed vice president for development at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, according to UNLV President Carol C. Harter.

Gallagher will also continue to serve as the executive director of the UNLV Foundation, a position he has held since May 1995.

"John has done a superb job of managing the Foundation's growing assets and staff and has served UNLV extraordinarily well in his nearly five years here. It is appropriate at this time to promote him to vice president, given the increasingly complex duties associated with his position," Harter said.

"John's extensive development, administrative and public relations experience has enabled us to increase the effectiveness of UNLV's development efforts and will provide leadership in expanding the development activities of the university," said Don Snyder, chairman of the UNLV Foundation and president of Boyd Gaming Corp. "On behalf of the UNLV Foundation Board of Trustees, it is my pleasure to congratulate John on this well-deserved promotion."

Gallagher's academic career spans more than 25 years. Prior to arriving at UNLV he served as vice president for university relations at the University of Puget Sound (UPS) in Tacoma, Wash. Before joining UPS, he was assistant vice president for university relations and director of development at Seattle University.

His development experience began when he founded the department of corporate and foundation relations at St. Martin's College in Olympia, Wash. The shift to development came after nine years as a faculty member in the division of social science, where he was also dean and an associate professor.

Gallagher earned his bachelor's degree from St. Martin's College and a Ph.D. in political science from the University of Washington in Seattle. He serves on the board of directors for Habitat for Humanity in Las Vegas and on the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education District VII. He was a member of the Las Vegas Chamber of Commerce Leadership Las Vegas class of 1998.

Boating facilities and safety committee meets

The Clark County Boat Facilities and Safety Committee met earlier this month to review funding requests that were presented by local, state and federal organizations and agencies.

These funds are a result of the marine fuel tax paid by skippers who purchase fuel at the various marinas on the lake. In fiscal year 1999, that amounted to more than $130,000, all of which stays right here in Clark County.

Chairman Bill Wagner was elected to another term and two new members were appointed to this committee during this meeting. Michael Davis and Britt West were sworn in and should make an immediate impact as they have been attending previous meetings as members of the public. The meetings are open to everyone and they do ask for public input.

All of the funding for the volunteer safety patrol program which I have written about on several occasions comes from this committee's approval of the request from the National Park Service.

Under the direction of volunteer Jack McGlone and National Park Ranger Tim Simonds, skippers donate their time to patrol the waters of Lake Mead as well as help out at the launch ramps. Assisting and advising all those using the lake is a vital and important program that helps to make our lake a lot safer. They can always use help even if only for a few hours a month.

Why not give Jack a call, 294-

1941, and see where you can help. I still have a promise from Jack to teach me a little about GPS. Maybe this year I can make some time to go out with him.

Seven funding requests were considered, including maintenance and upkeep for the wind talkers to T-shirts and PFD's. Each request relates to the safety of the public using the facilities at Lake Mead. Both the Nevada Yacht Club and the Las Vegas Power Squadron made requests for funds for their educational programs and Sea Scout Ship 5037 also requested funds for educational and safety material.

There were many duplicate requests for boat safety material to be distributed so every person using the lake, whether they're swimming, sailing, power boating, using scuba or just plain enjoying the recreational area.

While the total of the requests exceeds the amount available, after careful review, the committee will recommend to the Clark County Commissioners the amount of money for each request.

The committee deserves our thanks. Until next time ... keep your bilge dry.

Three additional wild horses found dead

In the course of an investigation into the recent horse shootings, U.S. Forest Service law enforcement investigators found three additional wild horses that had been killed.

These horses were found in the same vicinity as the other four wild horses and two burros that were found killed under suspicious circumstances several weeks ago on the Spring Mountains National Recreation Area of the Humboldt-Toiyabe National Forest.

A veterinarian has confirmed that these wild horses were killed at the same time as the others. The three horses were badly decomposed and one of the three horses was identified as an eight-month-old horse.

This brings a total number of seven wild horses and two burros that were killed sometime in December near the Lee Canyon Highway (State Route 156).

Anyone with any information is urged to call either Secret Witness, 385-5555, or the Forest Service Law Enforcement Investigations, (888) 818-8177. Anonymous messages can be left after 7 p.m. at (435) 652-3119.

Forest Service law enforcement agents, working in conjunction with law enforcement agents from the Bureau of Land Management and the Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department, are continuing their investigation. Federal law enforcement officers have received several phone calls and are closely following up on possible leads in the investigation.

The U.S. Forest Service, the National Wild Horse Association, the Nevada Humane Society, the Virginia Range Wildlife Protection Association, Nevada State Assemblyman Tom Collins, the Doris Day Animal League, and the Humane Society of the U.S., and some anonymous donors are offering a reward up to $17,250 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person(s) responsible for the death of these wild horses and burros.

Secret Witness is offering up to $1,000 for information leading to the arrest and indictment of the person(s) responsible for the death of these wild horses and burros.

"We express our heartfelt thanks to the many people throughout Nevada and the rest of the country who have called with information and pledges of support in this investigation," District Ranger Tom Kuekes said. "Our law enforcement officers are vigorously pursuing any and all leads and we continue to enlist the public's assistance to help us solve this case and bring the person(s) responsible to justice."

Schools, teachers, organizations get arts funding

Twenty-four schools, teachers and organizations throughout Nevada have received more than $21,000 from the Nevada Arts Council (NAC) for special projects that use the arts through education.

Activities include professional development grants for teachers to attend national visual art, music and dance conferences while learning about arts education projects that enhance their teaching experiences with Nevada students.

Schools and organizations received funding for a multitude of projects including arts and technology, regional touring and school outreach programs, and the development of arts education curriculum guides.

"It is very encouraging to see so many exciting and innovative arts education projects and the individuals who are dedicated to making them happen," said Laura Rawlings, program coordinator of the Arts in Education Program for the Nevada Arts Council. "For instance, in Washoe County there are currently no visual art teachers at the elementary grade level. Sierra Arts has taken the initiative to develop 'Art Boxes' to help regular classroom teachers incorporate the visual arts programs into their classrooms."

The teacher awards are Vicki Allen, Las Vegas $730; Cindy Barber, Las Vegas $670; Rachel Gerstein, Reno $500; Gwen Gibson, Las Vegas $730; Robert Goldsmith, Las Vegas $730; Cathy Heath, Las Vegas $670; Nathan McClendon, Las Vegas $715; Linda Murphy, Elko $730; Dikka Rian, Las Vegas $500;

Susan Silver, Las Vegas $700.

The school organization awards are Basic High School, Henderson $800; Clark County School District, Las Vegas $800; E.W. Fritsch Magnet School, Carson City $800; Las Vegas Philharmonic $1,585; Moapa Valley Arts Council $700; Reno Performing Arts Center, Reno, $1,585; Rex Bell Elementary, Las Vegas $700; Round Mountain Elementary, Round Mountain $700; Sage Ridge School, Reno $700; Sierra Arts, Reno $1,585; Swope Middle School, Reno $700; VSA arts of Nevada, statewide $700; Wing and A Prayer Dance Company, Reno, $1,585.

For more information about the Arts in Education Program and Special Project Grants, contact Laura Rawlings, (775) 687-6680, or (702) 651-5807 or

Girl Scouts glean donations to support Goodwill

This February, several hundred of Clark County's youngest citizens will make one of the most significant contributions known to help Las Vegas valley residents with disabilities and other special needs.

The project, which involves many hundreds of hours contributed by local Girl Scouts, is the third annual Good Turn Days to benefit Goodwill of Southern Nevada, Inc.

During the project, which runs through Feb. 25, Girl Scouts of Frontier Council will ask family, friends and neighbors for "gently" used clothing and other household items. Their activities will do more than create closet space for residents, and even more than keep thousands of items from being tossed into the landfill. They will be helping their neighbors with disabilities and other special needs start new lives of independent through work.

The Good Turn Days project is a source of revenue for Goodwill's vocational services programs. It is also a "values" training ground for tomorrow's leaders.

During January, the Girl Scouts deliver empty donation bags to their family, friends and neighbors, and in early February return to collect the filled bags for Goodwill. Each Girl Scout Troop and individual Girl Scout participating in Good Turn Days receives special awards.

This is the third year for Good Turn Days and Goodwill and Girl Scouts officials are hoping for the project to be as successful as the previous two years.

For additional information on Good Turn Days, call Darbie Adams at Girl Scouts of Frontier Council, 385-3677, ext. 242.

Student artists needed for Duck Stamp design contest

The U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service has announced that the 2000 Federal Junior Duck Stamp Conservation and Design Contest is now under way.

Students in kindergarten through 12th grade are encouraged to participate in this nationwide program.

Patterned after the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service's highly successful Federal Duck Stamp Program, the Federal Junior Duck Stamp Conservation Program is designed to increase awareness among our nation's youth of the need to conserve North America's wetlands and waterfowl through an educational curriculum incorporating art and wildlife management principles.

Entries must be original, hand-created drawings (not computer generated) of live North American ducks, geese or swans. The entries are first judged at the state level.

A panel of Nevada judges will select three first, second, third place and honorable mention winners from each age group (Kindergarten-3rd grade, 4th-6th grade, 7th-9th grade, and 10th-12th grade).

These artists will receive ribbons and prizes.

The winning stamp design will be printed as the 1999 Junior Duck Stamp, and also may be reproduced on cards, calendars, and other souvenir items.

Guidelines for the contest and entry forms can be obtained by calling Donna Withers, Nevada Junior Duck Stamp Coordinator, Stillwater National Wildlife Refuge in Fallon, (775) 423-5128.

The deadline for entry is March 15.

The duo's unique interpretations and refashionings of material from the Irish folk tradition also incorporate sensibilities from the worlds of classical, blues and jazz.

The Winchester performance is presented by the Clark County Parks and Recreation Department.

Additional funding has been provided by a grant from the Nevada Arts Council, a state agency.

'Africa's Last Eden' comes to Las Vegas museum

The Las Vegas Natural History Museum is proud to bring a photographic exhibition of wildlife from Botswana's Kalahari Desert by award-winning photographer, Frans Lanting.

"Okavango: Africa's Last Eden" will be on display at the museum Feb. 1 through March 31.

Lanting originally ventured to the Okavango Delta on assignment for National Geographic. What started as a six-week project stretched over two years, and became a book which gives a whole new perspective on African wildlife, and earned Lanting the BBC title of "Wildlife Photographer of the Year."

Museum Director Marilyn Gillespie said, "The museum is very fortunate to display the works of one of the world's foremost wildlife photographers. His works compliment the museum's new permanent "Explore Africa" exhibit, which recreates a savanna and rainforest."

The Las Vegas Natural History Museum, 900 Las Vegas Blvd. N., is a private, non-profit, community-supported institution. The museum is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily. Admission is $5.50 for adults, $4.50 for students, military and seniors and $3 for children ages four to 12. For additional information, call 384-DINO.

LAST WORDS

HOROSCOPE

LINDA BLACK

Aries (March 21-April 19). Watch what's behind you. Push yourself forward. You're the leader of the pack. You're inspired but constrained by finances. If you travel, take care.

Taurus (April 20-May 20). Your friends inspire you. Your own worries could push you. Your common sense takes over. A whim could prove expensive, but it's fun.

Gemini (May 21-June 21). Listen to your elders and let them know you appreciate their insights, or they'll say the same thing over and over again. Your team can win with your help and another's leadership.

Cancer (June 22-July 22). Get a clear scan of the big picture. Accept coaching from a strong leader. Friends help you stick to your schedule. Don't let your inner voice drive you crazy.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22). Spend wisely, not impetuously. Use your mate or an expert to help make the final decision. Travel with a partner should go well, but business requires your careful consideration. Have a great time while you're at it!

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You'll be busy with work. For domestic matters, go along with what your partner or an expert wants. There's plenty of money. Keep it in your account.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Follow a hunch and act quickly at work. Go along with a partner's requests. Count pennies and pay bills. Get out of town with a good conversationalist.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). True love will triumph. Don't worry about a lack of funds. Work your extra weight off, just to stay in the same position. The facts should all be in, and you can make your decision.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You can learn something important by listening in the privacy of your home. There's more than enough love to go around.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Speak up and take action to show you've learned new material. Your house is overflowing with excitement. Settle in with loved ones.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You may think you have more money than you really have. Take care. Catch up on your reading quickly.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20). Work well under pressure by thinking before taking action. The money flows to you, so hold onto as much as you can.

If You're Having a Birthday This Week: Use what you already know to improve your status. A change may be required. You could come up with a moneymaking idea.

DEAR DEBBIE

DEBORAH WHITE

Dear Debbie: One of my friends is like a sister to me. She has been married for 27 years and has five children. Her husband calls her stupid, dumb and retarded. Meanwhile, she has a job paying more than he earns.

He broke his leg at work, and now he's trying to get her to quit her job to take care of him. She refused, but his verbal abuse has gotten worse and he has threatened to "knock her block off." He controls her movements and won't even let her visit her mother who is in a nursing home.

I tell her she doesn't have to live like this, but she says no matter where she went he'd find her and she still has a child in school.

Can you tell me how I can help? He has banned me from the house.

AFRAID FOR MY FRIEND

Dear Afraid: This guy is a textbook control freak and abuser. He's tightening the noose and escalating the abuse because he senses she could bolt once the last kid is gone.

This is way too dangerous for an amateur, even a well-intentioned one. Be there for moral support, but put her in contact with the local agency for domestic violence or the abused women's shelter. They have counselors who know this issue inside and out and can help her protect herself.

Dear Debbie: Thank you for standing up for birth mothers. No, we are not all poor wretches. I come from a very good family, but my parents were so ashamed that I was pregnant at 17, they sent me to a home for unwed mothers. I wanted to keep my son, whom I love very much.

I have written to his parents to check on how he is doing. I don't want to disrupt his life. I remember what it was like at 18. When, and if, he is ever ready to see me or talk to me, his parents know the channels to go through.

I feel many people are narrow-minded when it comes to things they don't know much about. I just needed to voice my opinion.

World is full of questions

The world is full of questions and I want to know why I can't have the answers to a few!

For instance, I want to know why all car salesmen have voices pitched three decibels above the range of the rest of us. Why do they stand in front of the TV camera and shout until little red veins stand out on their foreheads? Do they think we'll rush out and take advantage of one of their "once-in-a-lifetime" car deals just to shut them up?

While we're on the subject, why was I not surprised when I learned the other day the most obnoxious of the "car screamers" is a man named Sid Scumbag Brown? Did his mother spot right off what line of work her little darling would grow up to embrace?

While we're on the subject of the media, have you ever wondered what kind of people read the tabloid newspapers? I have, and personally, I've always thought those who do, possess the mentality of a tree toad.

Actually, I've done a little in-depth study of all those check-out counter publications and I've learned a lot. For instance, I now know that the shoes worn by Abraham Lincoln on the night he was assassinated have mysteriously re-appeared in Richard Simmon's closet. I guess that means my aforementioned theory is incorrect ... why would any tree toad want that information?

Here's another poser: Scientists insist on dragging rats out of sewers and placing them in comfy cages in labs, but do they ever get serious and inject them with a cold virus? No. They just sit around feeding them take-out chicken and blow-drying their hair.

This is all done so they can issue important bulletins advising humans that chicken and hair dryers are injurious to our health. While all this is going on, millions of people are getting miserable, sniffing, sneezing colds of the worst sort and there isn't a cure in sight.

Another puzzler: What on earth did our great-grandparents have to gossip about? Think about it. Way back then, if the president of the country was up to any hanky-panky, by the time the news spread across the country, the "skeleton" in the closet had either dried up or been swept under the bed.

One last question: Who on earth pays attention to the safety lecture given by flight attendants the minute the door bangs shut and you are sealed inside for better or for worse? If you think about it, if you thought the plane

'Van-Go' art project launched

"Van-Go" is a new visual art project being launched by the Clark County Parks and Recreation's Gallery Program.

This project will "wrap" a white County transport van in artwork, using the same technology used to wrap buses in advertising. The artwork will be provided by a local artist, through an open call for work.

This new use of sign technology will enable the county's gallery program to expand the number of public art projects developed by the county since its inception. Other county gallery sites include the Winchester Center Gallery, the Clark County Government Center rotunda, and the McCarran International Airport "C" Gate exhibition space.

All artists residing in Southern Nevada are encouraged to submit artwork which is suitable for public viewing. All two-dimensional media including photograph and digital art will be considered. Interested artists should obtain a submission packet by calling Diane Bush, 455-8239.

was going to crash, you wouldn't have boarded in the first place. Not only that, do you really think sucking oxygen from a flimsy bag that pops out of the ceiling is going to help you when the plane hits the ground at 600 miles an hour?

This brings me to my last question: Wouldn't it be far more practical if the stewardess presented a rousing demonstration showing the step-by-step procedure of opening a bag of peanuts?

Enough! If you want to add anything to this column, don't bother me. I'm busy reading the National Inquirer and eating peanuts.

Volunteer Center offers training seminars

The Volunteer Center of Southern Nevada will soon offer lunchtime training sessions.

The "Lunch and Learn" seminars will allow participants to enjoy the lunch that is provided as a part of the seminar while learning information to help improve skills for those who work with volunteers and in non-profit or corporate sectors.

February's seminar is "Not Another Plaque!" It will be held from noon to 1:15 p.m. on Thursday, Feb. 24. Discover the many personally meaningful, innovative, and surprising ways to acknowledge and thank deserving volunteers. The registration deadline is Feb. 18.

March's seminar is "Getting The Most Out of The Media" and will be held from noon to 1:15 p.m. on Thursday, March 30. A panel of three professionals in the community relations and public affairs fields will share information on how to build media relationships and how to get your agency or event publicized in spite of tight budgets. The registration deadline is March 24.

All seminars will be held at the United Way of Southern Nevada, 1660 E. Flamingo Road. The fee is just $15 which includes the price of lunch.

Call the Volunteer Center, 892-2323 or 892-2322, to register or for more information.
