Henderson, Nevada

ONE MAN'S VIEW

MIKE O'CALLAGHAN

Are you a new arrival to Southern Nevada? If you are and haven't participated in Henderson's Heritage Days, then do so this week. Originally it was called Industrial Days but as the city's make-up changed, it was decided a few years ago to rename the celebration.

One of Southern Nevada's newest high schools, Foothill, has the honor of Miss Heritage Days Queen Tierra Peters being a student. There was but one high school, Basic, for the Henderson area when the first celebration took place. Today there are five, including Vo-Tech, and another one in the planning and building stages.

The celebration has been important to our family since moving here. One year, when governor of Nevada, I asked former Gov. Charlie Russell, to ride in the parade with me and another former governor, Grant Sawyer. Grant was already living in Las Vegas and met us when we arrived from Carson City.

Grant had defeated Charlie in 1958 after he had served two terms as governor and had also been our congressman. It was a tough campaign but Nevada has never elected a governor to a third term. This was true even before the state constitution limited the governor to two terms. Grant, eight years later, was defeated by Paul Laxalt when he attempted a third term.

The three of us had a great day visiting with mutual friends. Following the parade we attended a reception, with cold drinks, put together by Margaret Lomprey and Jo Schreck. Then we strolled down Water Street visiting with old and new friends.

Both of those men had served their state and nation and liked each other. I had been a department head for Grant and Charlie had been both a friend and neighbor in Carson City.

The next time the three of us were together was at Charlie's funeral when I spoke. Later Grant and I recalled that very special day in Henderson. I also thought about that day when attending Grant's funeral a few short years ago.

That's the way it was and that's the way it should be in Henderson when the residents and their guests gather to celebrate.

The time to pay federal income taxes is here again. It seems that I was signing my 1998 income tax statement just a couple of

Henderson's homeless: Waiting for something better

Vince served in the U.S. Navy for four years and has a bachelor of arts degree in electronics. He has a 7-year-old son and pays child support.

Vince may sound like your next-door neighbor.

In 1994, after a mild stroke left him partially disabled, Vince went to the Office of Veterans Affairs and stood in several lines for many hours. He finally gave up.

"They don't care," said Vince, as he stood outside of Labor Express near downtown Henderson.

For the past several years, Vince has been working at any job he can get. Eight weeks ago, his unemployment ran out from his last job as a bartender, and he took to the streets.

"I want to work, not collect money from the government," he said.

Although Vince can go back to the Midwest and possibly find work, he says there are more important things for him here.

"I can't turn my back on my son," he said. Vince said he wants a steady job so he can get his own place again and see his son.

Each morning, Vince joins about 50 men and women outside of Labor Express, a temporary employment agency for construction workers. They start gathering at 4:30 a.m., waiting for Chuck Hawk worked long and hard most of his life, and is now retired. But he lives with a disease that makes him sicker every year.

"I'm not going to live as long as I would like, and I'm living with a disease with no treatment," said Hawk, a Henderson resident. "My shortage of breath and coughing gradually increases as years go by. I look back and all the people I apprenticed with are dead."

Hawk has asbestosis, a disease which effects hundreds of thousands of Americans.

Although the potential health hazards associated with asbestos were known, the material was widely used in the '50s and '60s for such things as wall and pipe insulation and in floor and ceiling tiles. But the link between asbestos and lung diseases had been established in this country as far back as 1881, a couple of years after commercial production of asbestos began.

In 1918, a U.S. Department of Labor bulletin stated that there was an "urgent need for more qualified extensive investigation ..." of asbestos use in construction. By 1924 asbestos-related illnesses had taken on epidemic proportions worldwide. But despite studies done in the 1920s which determined that asbestos was harmful, its production and use continued.

According to a report by the Alice Hamilton Occupational Health Center in Washington D.C., "In 1949, the cancer-producing potential of asbestos was established."

During the '30s and '40s, asbestos was mainly used for industrial purposes, but in the '50s, its use in housing and other buildings became widespread.

"It's a matter of public record about there was knowledge of the harm that asbestos could do before it was put into widespread use," said Rick Devoe, coordinator of the Heat and Frost Insulators and Asbestos Workers Local 135.

New high school's zoning considered

David Hare
News Staff Writer

It's back to the drawing board as members of the Attendance Zone Advisory Commission held a public input meeting Tuesday on establishing preliminary attendance zones for a new high school being built in the Seven Hills area.

The new school, opening in August 2001, will provide relief mainly for Silverado High School, but Green Valley High School and Foothill will also be affected.

"We like to go out in the community about a year ahead of time and get input and questions from the people," said Dusty Dickens of the Clark County School District Demographics, Zoning and Realty Department. "This is the first step of the zoning process for that new high school."

The purpose of identifying preliminary boundaries at this time, according to Dickens, is to provide notice to students

In the Spotlight ... Arturo Sandoval

In 1985, Arturo Sandoval left behind his home in Albuquerque, N.M., and brought his family to Southern Nevada. The main reason behind his move was to provide his children with a better education.

Now, as vice president of planning and administration for the Nevada State College at Henderson, Sandoval says he's doing the same thing all over again, only this time he's trying to provide a better education for all of Nevada.

But first, he has to build the buildings.

"In my 20 years of service in higher education, this is my biggest challenge," he said. "The process is difficult, and not everyone is supportive of the college, but every day is a new day when we get closer to opening the doors to students."

Sandoval hopes to have some of the doors open next fall. Part of his job includes making sure everything runs smoothly, from the current planning stages to the building and maintenance of the facilities. Page 5 months ago. Tax time for me, like most Americans, isn't a time to jump for joy. The entire process is best done by my wife and an accountant but the results are always the same—pay up.

Any time I have the urge to complain about income taxes my father's words are recalled. "Income taxes are the best and most fair method to collect revenue. If you don't receive it, you don't have to pay it," he reminded me. After surviving the Great Depression and raising a family, he was happy to work on construction and make enough money to pay income taxes.

Groaning about any and all taxes is a great American pastime, something like complaining about food in the military services. Just looking around at the schools, roads and other facilities built by taxes is enough to make me pause before complaining too loudly. Knowing that a medic, policeman and firemen, paid and trained with tax dollars, will answer my emergency needs makes my complaining something less than vociferous.

Groaning about any and all taxes is a great American pastime, something like complaining about food in the military services.

Watching the youngsters coming from our schools, fighter planes from Nellis flying over head and an elderly couple being rescued from a house fire gives me reasons to feel lucky that I can pay taxes.

There are some administrative changes being made at St. Jude's Ranch for Children. We don't know all of the details but whatever takes place it shouldn't be allowed to affect the care of children.

The Rev. Herbert Ward designed St. Jude's Ranch to protect and guide the neglected and abandoned children living there. That's exactly what a dedicated staff has attempted to do for three decades. Not enough dollars and other problems familiar to growing families have been faced and overcome. Administrative changes also may cause temporary discomfort but must be kept from hurting the living atmosphere surrounding the children.

Good parents may have their differences over certain matters but they don't allow disagreements to disturb or disrupt their children.

Named among the top 30 UNLV scholar athletes is softball player Nicole Truax of Henderson. It's a high honor to be accomplished on the field with athletic competitors and in the classroom.

The 30 top scholar athletes listed show six from men's soccer and five from women's softball. Women's tennis and swimming both show three athletes as top scholars.

Incidentally, baseball had one top scholar and football had two. Guess what teams didn't have any top scholars? You got it right, men's basketball and women's basketball.

HFD respond to 2 GV fires

The Henderson Fire Department responded to two house fires in the Green Valley area of Henderson on Monday.

Shortly after 9 a.m., HFD and Clark County Fire Department units responded to a fire at 2818 Secret Canyon Road, near Pebble and Pecos.

Four fire engines, three rescues, two trucks and one chief officer responded to the call. The fire was extinguished within 20 minutes.

The second floor was damaged by smoke and flame. The rest of the home suffered smoke and water damage. The garage was also damaged from flame. Much of the ceiling had to be removed to extinguish a smoldering fire in between the floor joists.

The amount of the damage is estimated at $45,000.

The cause of the fire is still under investigation but appears to be accidental in nature. There was no one home at the time of the fire with the exception of the family dog. The pet was uninjured.

Shortly after 7 p.m., HFD units responded to a report of house fire at 12 Rising Sun Court in the same neighborhood.

Henderson Fire Department units arrived and extinguished the fire. One of the residents was home when the fire started. He stated he was in the backyard when he smelled smoke. When he went to the front of the house to investigate he found smoke pouring from the front of the garage.

Three fire engines, one truck, two rescues and two chief officers responded to the call. The fire was extinguished within 20 minutes.

The garage where the fire started was destroyed, along with a 1995 Ford Mustang, by smoke and flame. The rest of the home suffered minor smoke and water damage. The amount of the damage is estimated at $55,000.

The cause of the fire is still under investigation but is believed to be accidental in nature.

Fly-fishing workshop next week

The Henderson Parks and Recreation Department will present a fly-fishing workshop from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. on April 22 at the Kesterson Valley View Recreation Center, 500 Harris St. The workshop is geared toward the novice through intermediate sportsman (ages 9 or more). Participation is $95 per person.

Fly-fishing can best be described as a unique style of angling that allows the sportsman to throw a virtually weightless fly by casting a line and leader. This pulls the fly along behind it rather than casting a weighted lure that pulls the line from the reel.

Advanced registration is recommended as space is limited. For additional information, call 565-2121.

Ford to bring 600 jobs to area

Ford Motor Credit and local officials joined yesterday to unveil Ford Credit's regional service center under construction at Pecos Road and Interstate 215 in Henderson.

The state-of-the-art service center will open this fall and will support collections, accounting and loan administration for 16 Ford Credit branches in 12 states.

The center is designed to enhance relationships and cooperation with Ford Credit customers and is expected to generate about 600 jobs, a company spokesman said. Available positions will be offered to current Ford Credit employees and then open to the general public.

John Kilduff, executive vice president of American Nevada Corp., joined Henderson city officials, the Nevada Development Authority and representatives of the Southern Nevada business community in welcoming Ford Credit to the growing list of prominent national companies establishing operations in Henderson.

Ford Credit has signed a lease with the American Nevada Corp. for a two-story, 110,000-square-foot regional service center.

Bob Donoghue is credit director of global operations and technology with Ford Credit.

"This is part of our growth initiative of separating functions so we can provide a greater focus on sales and marketing," he said. "Of course we'll also provide greater focus on serving the customer."

More than 100 senior management officials from Ford Credit, including Donoghue, were on hand for the unveiling of their company's logo on the new building. Plans for the call center also include a fitness center, cafeteria and a child care facility.

Ford Credit is a wholly owned subsidiary of Ford Motor Co. and is the world's largest automotive finance company. Now in its 41st year, the company provides vehicle financing in 40 countries to more than 10 million customers and more than 11,000 automotive dealers.

One of eight regional service centers located across North America, other service centers are located in Baltimore, Nashville, Tenn., Colorado Springs, Colo., Greenville, S.C., Tampa, Fla., Irving, Texas, and Edmonton, Alberta, Canada.

Kilduff said Ford Credit is an outstanding addition to American Nevada's vast and growing commercial portfolio in the area aligning the Southern Beltway in the Green Valley area of Henderson.

residing within the boundaries of the potential reassignment to the new high school beginning with the 2001-02 school year.

These boundaries will affect ninth graders this year who will be in the 11th grade when the new school opens in the fall 2001.

Preliminary Proposal 1 includes the northern part of the Silverado zone up to Tropicana and the western part along Interstate 15.

According to AZAC numbers, this proposal would place a total of 1,527 students in the new high school, 439 from Foothill and 1,088 from Silverado.

Under Preliminary Proposal 2, students are pulled more from the southern part of the Silverado zone which runs along Silverado Ranch.

A total of 1,535 students would be placed in the new school under this proposal, 439 from Foothill, 228 from Green Valley, and 868 from Silverado.

A small group of parents attended the public input meeting held at the GVHS Theater.

Mary Capannolo spoke on behalf of residents living in the area west of Bermuda and north of Pebble.

"As I have stated before, this area has a very low density of population. This is an old neighborhood with most families living here for more than 10 years," she said. "Please consider keeping us in the Silverado zone and move your west boundary to Giles because of the tremendous growth in the south, the new high school will probably be overcrowded soon and we would be the first sent back out."

Another parent stated she prefers the first proposal because it provides more relief for Silverado.

A more concrete boundary should be established in January, according to Dickens, which is when the next public input meeting is scheduled.

Recommendations from AZAC go before the school board in February when a final decision is expected.

How Long Does It Take?
Just two 35-minute sessions per week for seven to ten weeks.

Added Benefits Of Endermologie:
• Improves circulation and revitalizes skin.
• Helps with toning and shaping.
• Relieves tension.

First Southern Baptist Church plans Seven Hills area home

David Hare
News Staff Writer

The First Southern Baptist Church in Henderson will break ground on a new five-acre site this summer in the Seven Hills area. This will be the church's new home after residing 50 years at 240 S. Cholla at Leak Mead and Boulder Highway.

Currently the congregation holds services on Sunday nights at the Green Valley Methodist Church.

Pastor Marvin Jones sees all this change as a challenge that he and his congregation are more than ready to face.

"It was getting more difficult for us to grow at our old location," he said. "The demographics of the city were just passing us by, plus not many people knew where we were."

Since taking over as senior pastor two years ago, Jones said he's watched the membership transform into a younger more family-oriented congregation.

He described the congregations mood as "excited and motivated."

"We're ready to move to our new location," he said. "That's where the Lord wanted us."

The new facility will start out with about 7,000 square feet of space, eventually covering a total of 20,000 square feet, according to Jones.

In the interim, the congregation will continue to meet at Green Valley Methodist Church.

"We're very grateful to them for providing us a place to meet and worship," he said.

Architects are still working on phase one before groundbreaking begins near the end of summer. At that point, portable buildings will be provided to the church during the construction period.

Phase one includes a sanctuary building with minimal educational space, according to Jones.

Once the entire facility is completed over the course of several years, classrooms and a fellowship hall will be in place.

"We never in our wildest dreams imagined we'd be in such a good location," Jones said. "We appreciate the willingness of our members to move forward. We anticipate a strong ministry."

Red Robin rolls into mall

America's fastest-growing city should have at least have access to one of the country's most popular food items. And that's exactly what will happen when Red Robin and its world-famous selection of gourmet burgers, rolls into town Monday, April 17, to win over locals with a burger for every taste bud.

Henderson's newest restaurant, located in the Galleria Mall, is 6,300 square feet and will seat about 225. The decor of the restaurant is as diverse as its burger selection. Pictures of classic movies, a lion carousel, and a huge mural depicting different cultures from around the world are some of the attractions.

Guests can watch team members practice the highly skilled art of gourmet-burger making from the wall-less display kitchen.

"Henderson is the fastest-growing city in America, so it's only appropriate that Red Robin, one of the fastest-growing restaurants in the country, lands there," said Mike Snyder, president and CEO of Red Robin International. "As more families have moved to Henderson, Red Robin has heard the cry for gourmet burgers, and is looking forward to becoming a Henderson favorite."

Red Robin's menu offers more than 20 gourmet burgers, mostly beef patties and grilled chicken breasts, topped with fresh and flavorful ingredients such as pineapple, guacamole, green chilies, barbecue sauce, grilled onions and sauteed mushrooms, with names like Monster Burger, Bleu Ribbon Burger, Lone Star Burger, Sour Cream Ranch Chicken Burger and Joe's Ultimate Messy Fish Burger.

climbed, an outcry prompted legislation to curtail its use. After a series of facts were passed by Congress, the use of asbestos was banned by the late 1970s.

Because the latency period is anywhere from 20 to 40 years, many of those exposed started getting sick in the early 1970s, when the number of asbestos-related illnesses being diagnosed started climbing.

Asbestos is a dusty, dirty substance, and when being prepared for use can contaminate wide areas. When the fibers are breathed into the lungs, they cause scarring, which diminishes the capacity of the lungs to handle fluids. This leads to asbestosis, for which there is no treatment, and which frequently leads to lung cancer.

A more severe form of the disease is mesothelioma, which occurs when a fiber gets into the lining of the lungs.

Although asbestosis is usually a result of exposure over time, according to Rick Johnson, whose father recently died of asbestosis, "One fiber can make you sick with mesothelioma."

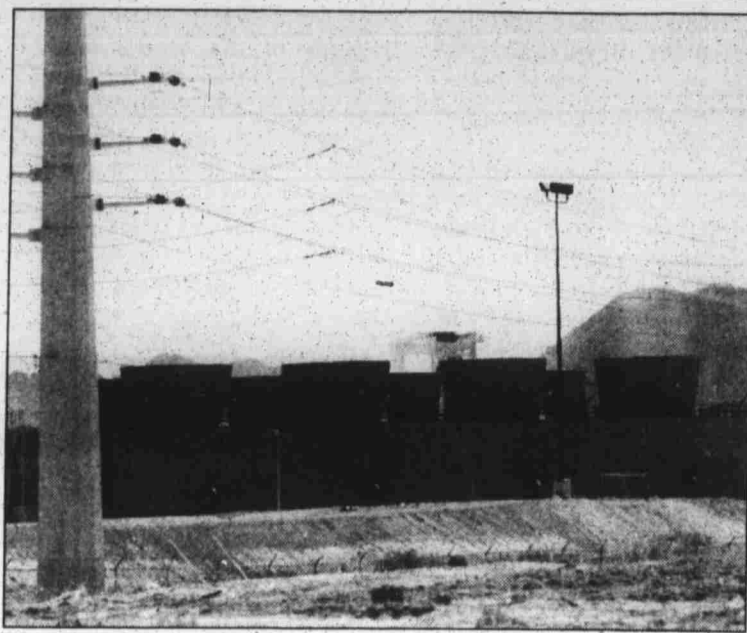

The disease is always fatal within six months to about two years of onset.

Now, those stricken with asbestosis have been able to sue for compensation from the companies for which they worked. Although most cases get settled out of court, the option to go to court to hold a company responsible may soon end.

A bill before the House, HR 1283, would make it almost impossible for those who contracted the disease to be paid by the companies they worked for. The legislation would require a huge burden of proof, with the patient having to identify such things as the asbestos manufacturer responsible for the exposure that made him ill, the job he was working when exposed, the company he was working for and just when the disease was contracted.

"I just think that it is an attempt on the part of the asbestos industry to deny any liability to pay asbestos victims," Johnson said.

According to Hawk, "The asbestos industry has spent $20 million lobbying for this legislation, which calls for $350 million casinos is one example of health hazards the public may not be aware of.

According to Urey, 27.5 million construction workers were exposed to asbestos between 1940-1979. Because they brought the dust home on their clothes, families were also exposed.

To date, 300,000 people have been diagnosed with asbesto- sis-related illnesses. About 9,700 more cases are expected to be diagnosed this year.

"I would like to see things stay the way they are," said Hawk.

"Now you have an opportunity for a fair hearing to get compensation. The new legislation would eliminate about 80% of claims."

Ironically, the legislation is entitled "Fairness in Asbestos Compensation Act."

of taxpayer money to set up a federal agency to go over the claims."

Today, asbestos is still present in many older buildings constructed in the '50s and '60s, including homes, schools and commercial buildings. According to Hawk, Henderson has its share of buildings with asbestos that were built in the '60s and '70s.

"Asbestos is still in the tiling in ceilings and floors, and in the insulation of pipes and walls," Johnson said.

He said that unless it is disturbed, it is not harmful. But according to Urey, much of the asbestos in place is easily "friable, meaning it is easily crumbled. If disturbed, it could easily enter the lungs of anyone nearby, unless proper precautions are taken.

To determine if a building has asbestos, and if the asbestos has been disturbed, testing needs to be done.

Nevada Power Co. has a few plants that have asbestos, including the one on Russell Road near the U.S. 95 interchange. But according to Nevada Power Co. spokesperson Thomas Moore, strict precautions are always taken.

"We've done an inventory and found where the asbestos is," he said. "When there is a pipe break, the area is cordoned off, the equipment shut down and it is cleaned up. While cleaning, the area is tested for asbestos, and after repairs are done, the area is tested again."

According to Richard Urey, chief of staff for U.S. Rep. Shelley Berkley, D-Ne., HR 1283 has just passed out of the judiciary committee, and is headed for a vote on the floor within 10 days. Berkley opposes the bill.

A similar bill, S758, is expected to be introduced in the Senate. U.S. Sen. Harry Reid, D-Ne., said he will do all he can to fight it.

"Those who worked around asbestos should be compensated," said Reid, who says he believes that the industry should be held responsible, not be bailed out.

"Risks may be heightened [for construction workers] as a result of demolition of large structures in a rapidly changing metropolitan area such as Clark County," Devoe said. The continuing implosions of area

Sandoval helps plan Nevada's future

David Hare
News Staff Writer

In 1985, Arturo Sandoval left behind his home in Albuquerque, N.M., and brought his family to Southern Nevada. The main reason behind his move was to provide his children with a better education.

IN THE SPOTLIGHT

ARTURO SANDOVAL

Now, as vice president of planning and administration for the Nevada State College at Henderson, Sandoval says he's doing the same thing all over again, only this time he's trying to provide a better education for all of Nevada.

But first, he has to build the buildings.

"In my 20 years of service in higher education, this is my biggest challenge," he said. "The process is difficult, and not everyone is supportive of the college, but every day is a new day when we get closer to opening the doors to students."

Sandoval hopes to have some of the doors open next fall. Part of his job includes making sure everything runs smoothly, from the current planning stages to the building and maintenance of the facilities.

He held a similar post at the Community College of Southern Nevada for about 15 years, working with then CCSN President Richard Moore for the latter part of his career.

When Moore was appointed founding president of the state college, Sandoval was the first official employee he hired.

"I had to think about it at first," he said. "But then I realized this was a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity and decided I'd try to bring another educational alternative to Southern Nevada."

Born and raised in Albuquerque, Sandoval, 49, joined the U.S. Army shortly after graduating from high school. In 1970, after two years of infantry training in San Antonio and Germany, he was sent to Vietnam where he worked as a medical specialist in South Vietnam, near the Mekong Delta.

His job was to make sure people didn't die from their wounds before the Medivac units arrived. During all this, he celebrated his 20th birthday.

Of his time spent in Vietnam, Sandoval is brief in his description — he says it was horrible.

"Growing up in the '50s and '60s there was a strong anti-war movement, but I had American patriotism instilled in me when I was very young," he said. "That's why I joined the army when I was 17. I wasn't drafted, I joined."

Returning to New Mexico, Sandoval continued as a medical specialist in public hospitals while also working odd construction jobs on the side.

In 1977, he started his own construction business, which he operated for four years.

While working at a community college in northern New Mexico, he heard about a job opening at the Community College of Southern Nevada.

He applied and, in 1985, was hired as director of physical plants.

Sandoval and his wife packed up their belongings, along with their two children, and arrived in Las Vegas a few weeks later.

"I wanted to see if we could get a better education for our children, and we did," he said.

Both his children, graduates of Green Valley High School, attend the CCSN, the same institution their father helped to build.

"When I started there, we had about 200,000 square feet," he said. "When I left, we had 1.2 million square feet."

When he's not building buildings, Sandoval, a Henderson resident, said he likes to work around the house, spend time with his family and travel.

He still visits his family in New Mexico, a place where he feels the land moves at a slower pace, a big change from his usual hectic schedule.

"We have a lot of work ahead of us," he said. "I'm proud to be a part of this state college, and I look forward to the day when we open our doors to the students waiting to come here."

Planning Commission to address commercial, residential requests

Lisa Stiller
News Staff Writer

The Henderson Planning Commission will address several requests for commercial and residential developments at 7 tonight, in Council Chambers, 240 Water St.

The Land Well Company is requesting permission to build a 41-acre commercial center on the southeast corner of Stephanie Street and Wigwam Parkway in the Gibson Springs planning area. The center will have 11 lots, which will feature retail sales, restaurants, a warehouse, a service station and convenience store.

According to Planning Director Mary Kay Peck, the site is about a half-mile to a mile from the area where dioxins were found.

"There is absolutely, positively no danger at this site," she said.

The Planning Commission will also review a request for a commercial development on 17.3 acres located on the southwest corner of Lake Mead Drive and Seven Hills Drive, in the Westgate planning area. Nine lots are planned, including retail shops and a convenience store.

A proposal for a 25.3-acre residential development, also located in the Westgate planning area just south of Maryland Parkway on the west side of West Hills Drive, has been recommended for denial. The plans fail to meet several city regulations.

Also before the panel is a proposal to construct a multi-family residence with eight units on .55 acres on Foster Avenue, in the Pittman planning area. The units will create affordable housing opportunities.

Convenience stores becoming inconvenient

In the past several weeks, Henderson residents have been getting involved.

They are attending Planning Commission and City Council meetings in force, protesting the proliferation of gas stations and convenience stores which are invading their neighborhoods.

The universal conflict between progress and quality of life is played out at almost every meeting. Six, eight, 10 gas stations are popping up within a one, one and 1/2 mile radius of one another.

According to Planning Director Mary Kay Peck, theoretically, four gas stations can be built at each intersection of major arterials, if there's proper zoning.

Peck also says the marketplace should be the driving force behind just how many gas stations and convenience stores the city needs.

But Planning Commissioner Joanne Huffaker has another view. At a recent meeting, she asked, "When are enough gas stations enough? When do convenience stores become inconvenient?"

Good questions.

Huffaker says she wants to investigate the feasibility of an ordinance that would limit the number of these businesses, which if aren't planned properly, become eyesores.

Concerns over traffic and property values are what drive the homeowners to protest these businesses.

Huffaker says she agrees with residents who are concerned that the gas station-convenience store epidemic is destroying the quiet, aesthetic quality of their neighborhoods.

While the marketplace prevails, the city has a certain amount of control through zoning and use permits. It's time to take a look at the question of how much is too much. Do we really need a gas station on every corner?

Pageant was leap forward,
but not without problems

This year's Henderson Heritage Days Beauty Pageant took some giant steps forward.

Too bad it took one important step back.

Instead of the audience leaving the pageant talking about the concentrated effort to focus on the contestants' personalities and verbal poise, it left asking the question, "Who won?"

That question was answered last Friday night with Foothill High's Tierra Peters, but the audience only knew her as "No. 25."

Throughout the night, participants were referred to by their numbers — which caused obvious confusion during the cut-down from 38 to 16 contestants — and, even when the new Miss Heritage Days Queen was announced, it wasn't "Tierra Peters!" It was "No. 25!"

Each participant is a winner for entering the event and each one possesses beauty — both on the outside and, more importantly, on the inside. But the impersonal tone of the pageant was too evident to ignore.

Pageant organizers deserve credit for taking the pageant to the next level. The pacing was exceptional. But better efforts should have been made to keep it more local — like mentioning the girls' names, their sponsors and their schools once in a while.

Proud Henderson residents — celebrating the beginning of the 50th anniversary of the 10-day celebration which has evolved into Heritage Days — cringed in their seats when contestants were asked what they would do "as mayor of Las Vegas" or to help a certain social problem "in Las Vegas."

Another miscue had to make long-time residents wonder: The time when "Timet" — a cornerstone of the Henderson community — was mispronounced by the mistress of ceremonies. (FYI — that's a long "i").

Henderson is growing at a mind-boggling rate and this year's pageant grew with it in many positive ways.

We understand this is not the same city it was 20 years ago, 10 years ago or even five years ago, but our advice for upcoming pageants is to not forget the primary reason the pageant is held — for the young women, their families and their friends.

And, of course, to take pride in where they come from.

After all, aren't we supposed to be celebrating "Henderson's" heritage?

Enough hypocrisy

A while back, I called Ken Bacon at the Pentagon. He's the assistant secretary for public affairs and someone I have known since graduate school. When he had not called back after a couple of hours, I called him again. An aide told me Bacon was in a meeting and would get back to me just as soon as he could. He'd better, I joked, or I'll be forced to write about his sex life.

In a heartbeat, a colonel called The Washington Post to protest this attempt at blackmail. This was a most serious matter, he said — repeating this all to me when I called to ask him what in the world he was doing. It did not matter to this colonel that Bacon is someone I've known for years, that I write about a variety of subjects, but in about 3,000 columns I have never exposed anyone's sex life and, most important, that I was joking. Apparently, the sound of the word "sex" does at the Pentagon what "bomb" does at an airport.

I have told you this anecdote for a reason. It is that certain words — often employed in jokes — seem to cause some people to simply stop thinking. Sex, of course, is one of those words, but so is race and so is any mention of an ethnic group. This explains why Jon Corzine, a Democratic Senate candidate in New Jersey, was forced to apologize — and apologize and apologize — for two jokes he had cracked about Italian-Americans. In many news accounts, they were called "ethnic slurs," but they were nothing of the sort.

On one occasion Corzine joked about how a Jewish lawyer he had just met was probably present to keep the Italian-Americans accompanying him out of jail. At another time, he joked about how an Italian-American in the cement business probably made "cement shoes." As Pork Pig likes to say,

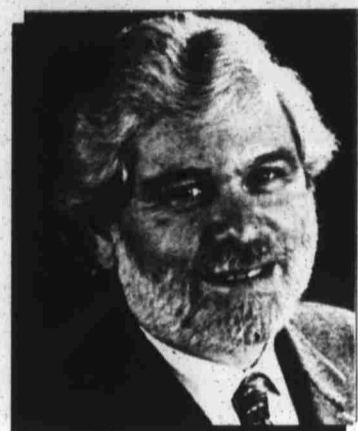

"that's all, folks" — the totality of Corzine's offense.

I happen to know Corzine. He's my friend, has been for a number of years now. On that basis, you might argue that I ought to butt out of this affair. On the other hand, I have something the rest of the press lacks: context. Never have I ever heard Corzine utter a bigoted remark.

But if you don't believe me, just examine not only what he said, but who he said it to: Italian-Americans. These were not jokes told behind the backs of Italian Americans — not something like Jesse Jackson's "Hymietown" remark made to some black journalists — but were jokes about the stereotype itself. The cultural context is a parcel of Mafia movies, not to mention the HBO hit series, "The Sopranos." Tony Soprano, in case you haven't noticed, is not Swedish.

Nonetheless, Corzine's remarks were treated as something pretty close to cosmic. The New York Times promoted the story from its B-section one day to the front page the next. It characterized the remarks as "ethnic slurs against Italian-Americans." Local television was all over the story. You would think Corzine had been discovered attempting to get Italian-Americans to move out of his neighborhood or had once barred them from working for his old firm, Goldman Sachs.

Enough! Enough hypocrisy and enough of this "gotcha" stuff. Life should not be a minefield in which, say, you have supposedly revealed your black, black heart if, by chance, you call a woman a girl, an African American an Negro, a Jewish person a Jew or merely josh about someone's ethnicity. I parse everything I write and say for the world that anyone could possibly find offensive. One "mistake" and you're a bigot.

But I should not complain. Politicians get the worst of it. A slip of the tongue, and they're in trouble.

John McCain said he could usually spot a gay person "by behavior and attitudes" — which is what I would say, too, adding some qualifiers, of course. From the attention the remark got, you would have thought he had condemned homosexuals.

But even a politician deserves to be judged by the totality of a life and not by some slip of the tongue. It is, in fact, the unforgiving and career-crippling nature of such sound bites that discourages qualified people from going into politics. Instead of general acclaim for even attempting public service, you get treated like a bigot on an ego trip. Who needs it?

Jon Corzine's problems are not worth a hill of beans compared with what else is going on in the world. But when a joke about sex or about Italian-Americans gets taken as a serious matter deserving of grave reprimand, then it's a good thing Henry Youngman did not live to see this day. He said, "Take my wife...please."

He didn't really mean it, colonel.

BILL HANLON

So long to class size reduction?

The Nevada State Education Association formally released the details of its ballot initiative last weekend. The Association believes it will generate about $250 million for public education. State Sen. Joe Neal's initiative plan was released a month ago.

The Nevada State Board of Education intends to ask for an increase in the Distributive School Account (DSA). Realizing that it can't happen overnight, the goal of the state board is to have Nevada's per-pupil expenditures reach the national average over the next few of bienniums. Right now, the state per-pupil expenditure is $500 below the national average. The board also supports an increase in the special education funding. Currently, local districts are forced to spend more than $100 million from their general budget to meet these state and federal mandates.

Teacher salaries are also paid out of the DSA. It's estimated that a 1% salary increase for teachers will cost in the vicinity of $42 million over the biennium. Knowing that key legislators are talking about a 4% raise, that translates to $168 million.

It would appear that the Council to Establish Academic Standards will be requesting a longer school day or year so students can meet the new academic requirements they adopted. Last session, the Legislative Council Bureau estimated one additional day would cost the state $11 million.

In addition to increasing instructional time, the council has also been talking about the importance and need for additional professional development to ensure teachers can teach to these new, more rigorous standards.

Another issue to come before the legislature is testing. The state needs to develop new criterion-referenced tests in English/Language Arts, mathematics, science and social studies to determine high school graduation. Other tests that need to be developed include criterion-referenced tests in those same academic areas in third, fifth, and eighth grades.

Speaking of testing, U.S. Sen. Paul Wellstone, D-Minn, has introduced a bill entitled Fairness and Accuracy in Student Testing Act. The legislation, while not likely to pass, would strike at the very cornerstone of the standards-based reform movement.

Many states have been experiencing a backlash to the high stakes testing that determines promotion and graduation. Even Secretary of Education Richard Riley, a supporter of the standards-based reform movement, has asked states for a mid-course correction as more and more parents are questioning the validity of these tests.

Anytime you have high stakes testing, the need for remediation funding can't be too far behind. It's only recently that the state legislature has come to understand this. With more tests and higher stakes, remediation costs will also escalate.

Where's this money to pay for all this going to come from? My guess is both the Neal and the teachers' initiative will pass. I'm also guessing that the class-size reduction program will either bite the dust or be scaled back during this session.

That program is costing the state in the neighborhood of $80 million per year. Critics have attacked the popular program for not showing any measurable results in student achievement. The way that class size was implemented in this state, using a 32-to-2 student-to-teacher ratio with no teacher training, the program was bound to fail.

Knowing the class-size reduction program is in jeopardy, the Nevada State Board of Education, which is statutorily responsible for determining class size, will need to come up with alternative ratios at different grade levels so class sizes don't go through the roof.

The savings in the class size reduction budget will give the governor some wiggle room in his budget proposal. But, no matter how you slice it, a change in tax structure has to be addressed because of the state's structural deficits.

Hanlon, a Las Vegas resident who writes a column about education, sits on the State Board of Education, is the administrator for the Clark County School District's Math/Science Institute and is a part-time instructor at UNLV.

Support State College

Editor:

The political posturing and antics surrounding the new college at Henderson, Nevada State, seem to have become the newest boom industry.

Considerable ugliness has focused on whether and when Nevada should create this new institution. There are many factors to consider: the growth rate of Nevada (number-one of 50 states), Nevada's matriculation to college rate (number 50 of 50 states), the expected impact of the millennium Scholarships (thanks to Gov. Guinn and the Legislature) and like it or not, a community's economic growth and diversification are inextricably tied to high education.

There should be little doubt in most people's mind of the need for another institution of higher education either now or in the near future.

Those against the new college argue that they do not know where the money will come from and that it makes no sense to start a new institution when other educational institutions are under-funded.

Both of these arguments have merit but the other side of this coin is that if a state demanded satisfaction to these questions before creating a new college there would only be one college in each state in America. There is a short-term cost of adding this college, however, in the long term this is the most efficient way to provide higher education in Nevada.

Reasonable people can, of course, legitimately disagree as to whether the new college should begin next year or in five years.

Two compelling reasons tip the scales to begin the college in Henderson now. The first is the overwhelming support and hard work of the people of Henderson and leaders, including Assemblyman Perkins/State Sen Porter, Mayor Gibson and Jim Rogers.

The second is the availability, commitment and dynamic educational leadership of Dr. Richard Moore. The future students and people of Nevada are blessed to have a founding president with his ability, knowledge and record of success to launch this school.

In 10 years, all the citizens of Clark County and Nevada will point with pride to the great institution called Nevada State. Today's critics will conveniently forget their opposition and claim they were among Nevada State's earliest supporters.

Be accountable for clean-up

Editor:

After listening to the presentation of Mr. Zimmerman of the Nevada Department of Environmental Protection in Henderson, I feel I must again protest the clean-up and development of the land east of Pabco Road.

The proposed method of removal and clean-up supposes that the Henderson Industrial Steering Committee will be scrupulous about the containment of dust and the monitoring of the clean-up. May I suggest to you that up to this date the BMI complex and its members have not controlled this problem well.

Up until a few years ago, the only thing that was containing this area was a non-maintained fence and a couple feet of dirt surrounding the area. Surely they knew at that time there was a problem. I know they did, in fact, as a suit had been settled, apparently with some of the homeowners in the area. These things were not known to me at the time we purchased our home, or we certainly would not have bought this property.

You stated at the meeting on April 4, 2000, that there will not be a person from the NDEP on site at all times, and that it is likely that there will be subcontractors doing much of the removal of the 75,000 truckloads of dirt. With free enterprise, unfortunately, comes greed.

I cannot and will not believe that there will not be a toxic dust problem in our neighborhood. My proposal would be for the NDEP to insist upon the Land Well Development Corp., the Henderson Industrial Steering Committee and the BMI complex to pay the salary of either an independent site monitoring company, or another staff member for the NDEP. The job of this additional person or persons would be to continuously monitor the site.

The BMI complex has owned this land for many years. They plan to develop this land for 8,000 homes, and other uses. Assume that in the cost of the homes that are developed, $40,000 is the cost of a lot. If we take a moment to do the math, they stand to bring in $320 million for land that they already own and that will, according to the figures presented at your meeting will cost a maximum of $32 million to clean up.

This will, at the same time, have the added benefit of limiting their liability, I would imagine. This sounds like a great deal — for them!

Meanwhile, the residents of the Pittman area will be heavily exposed on a daily basis, to an aerosol of toxins including benzene, chromium 6, arsenic, radionuclides, lead, mercury, PCBs and others. We cannot even sell and move, because we are aware of the problem and thus required to give disclosure to a prospective buyer.

Many medicines are now being given by the inhaled route because it is a very effective, rapidly absorbed route of administration. Why would we be so foolish as to believe that many of these toxins could not be absorbed in the same manner?

I know that the bottom line of this is money. Money for the BMI complex, Land Well Development, the state of Nevada and the city of Henderson. Will they pay our medical bills? Will they pay to bury our children, spouses and parents? Will they be able to fill the void created by the untimely loss of someone dear? As a mother of a 16-year-old who died last October of leukemia, I can definitely say that nothing could ever ease the loss of a child. Not even $320 million.

It is apparent to me that this project is a done deal. There are too many people who stand to benefit from this financially. But please consider the amount of money these people stand to make from this and force them to be accountable at all times throughout this clean-up.

There are innocent lives at stake, just across Pabco Road from this polluted mess. There are children who attend school only three blocks from the site.

Tax code is simple enough

Max Sawicky

For most of us, taxes are relatively simple. Almost 70% of us do not itemize deductions. More than 80% of us don't have to worry about reporting capital gains or losses. Fewer than 1% of us have to wrestle with the "alternative minimum tax."

The most complicated part of the tax code — business depreciation allowances — is left to professional specialists.

So it is possible to overlay the problem of complexity in the tax code. It is also possible to simplify taxes, but doing this can run aground on countervailing considerations.

One example is the slew of education credits. These could be dispensed with by simply providing that all persons attending an institution of higher learning receive aid of $20,000 per year for four years.

If this proposal, which is discussed in an interesting book titled The Stakeholder Society, were floated before members of Congress, the habitual criticisms would follow.

The first would be the cost of the program. Ill-conceived plans to eliminate the national debt would be invoked as a higher budget priority. A less-expensive program would "target" aid to a smaller group and exclude some students because their parents have relatively high incomes. Put in rules to deny aid or phase it out, and things begin to get complicated.

A second objection would be on paternalistic grounds. You can't just give people cash, some would say; you have to write regulations on how they can spend it. More complexity.

A third objection would raise the conservative specter of bigger government.

A consequence is that we have less in the way of spending programs, and more efforts to address problems by using tax incentives. In effect, we are all drafted as part-time program administrators when we fill out our tax forms.

In general, political demands to address problems without spending money give us a more complicated tax code.

More openness to the use of spending rather than tax cuts and less hand wringing about reducing the huge projected federal budget surpluses would facilitate tax simplification.

Small businesses call for easier tax day

Jack Faris

Tax day is almost here. And nothing can put a damper on spring fever like filling out forms, trying to decipher instruction manuals and, worst of all, writing a check to Uncle Sam, c/o the IRS (makes you shudder just to think about it, yes?)

Even Albert Einstein once said that "The hardest thing in the world to understand is the income tax." It's true, tax day is a headache for all of us. But it is a particularly unpleasant reminder to America's small-business owners that Uncle Sam is actually their silent partner — a partner who demands a lot of time, work and money, but who doesn't add much — if anything — to the growth and development of a small company.

Don't get me wrong — the men and women who own and operate our smallest enterprises are not opposed to taxation in general. But they do wish that taxes were a lot lower and a lot less complicated. If you own a business, you basically have no choice but to hire an accountant to do your taxes — it really is that complex. So this time of year, business owners tend to stop and ask: Why does the government put this extra burden on me?

This is why, for the third year in a row, small-business owners across America are taking action on tax day. After they meet with their accountant, write their check to the IRS, and so on. After they have complied with the current laws, they're going to request — loudly and clearly — that Congress and the president make a real change when it comes to our tax system. Small business owners are going to call, as they've done before, for simplification of our current tax code.

They will talk to friends and neighbors. Some will carry a picketing sign to their local Post Office on April 17 as part of a nationwide event organized by the National Federation of Independent Business (NFIB). NFIB has chosen 20 cities around the country where representatives of small business will gather at post offices to "protest" the flaws of the current tax code, and to tell Congress and the president that the time has come for some serious trimming and simplification.

Protesting tax day may seem extreme, but the bottom line is this: Small-business owners are fed up with having to hire an accountant just to stay out of trouble with the government. And they are right to be fed-up, I think. After all, these are the people who are creating the majority of our country's new jobs, yet they are the ones who have the toughest job when it comes to keeping Uncle Sam happy.

And remember that it is not just the small-business owners who are hurting this spring; every time government burdens small-business, our overall economy is injured, for example, the excess time and money spent on tax payment and compliance is a drag on small business's natural ability to create jobs. Each year, American business spends 3.4 billion hours, and individuals spend 1.7 billion hours, simply trying to comply with the tax code. That's equivalent to a "staff" of 3 million people working full-time, year-round, just on taxes.

This year, after you've filled out your forms, after you've paid an accountant and paid the IRS ... you might want to consider joining the small-business community in their crusade (you can do so by writing your member of Congress and asking them to simplify the code). After all, tax day is never going to change, but Congress does have the power — and the duty — to change the way we pay our taxes, and that would be good for us all.

Jack Faris is president of the National Federation of Independent Business (NFIB), a small-business advocacy group.

Sparks council is wise not to restrict public comment

It's a good thing that the Sparks City Council tied 3-3 Monday on a proposal to restrict public comment.

Of course, Sparks is struggling with the same free speech-abuse of speech issue that the city of Reno is struggling with. Still, it would have been a poor idea to restrict public comment to the beginning and end of the agenda, with no comment as individual items come up, except for public hearings.

This was not as draconian as the Airport Authority board policy (later rescinded) limiting public comment to the beginning of a meeting. But still, people get ideas as topics are discussed, and it is more timely and useful to present their thoughts at that time. Also, people tend to leave during long meetings, and then they might never get their points across.

The problem, of course, is people who abuse their free-speech rights with defamation, wild speculation and veiled or actual threats. To that, there might not be any totally satisfactory response, but the Sparks council is certainly within its rights to insist on a certain level of decorum, and to remove people if they use violence, threaten violence or are unduly loud, boisterous or unruly. Nobody ever said democracy is easy, but it should at least be civil.

Children aren't prepared

Editor:

Bill Hanlon's recent column missed the fact that the grammar school teachers poorly prepare their students in math for high school.

My only job since retiring from an aerospace engineering job has been one day a week volunteering teaching math at a continuation school. Continuation schools in California have about 10 to 15% of the high school students.

Approximately 20% of the students do not know their multiplication tables plus numerous other deficiencies. I spend most of my tutoring time trying to get these students to pass the state math proficiency test. I have a very high success rate.

I try to listen to each student tell me his or her reasons they have problems with math. I usually reply that I like math because it deals with money. This gets their interest. Their stories about grammar school are sad and unfortunate.

Teachers should teach and give tests for feedback to student and teacher. If the tests indicate a problem, teachers can modify their approach and correct.

Proceeding in the course will make students lose interest. Math can be applied to any field. Ratio problems can be used in cooking, construction, money and art, to name a few. I doubt if the interest is strong in calculating cars in a city or ratio of adults to children.

My best students are Latinos. They usually have problems from teachers never explaining to them how to read math which is a universal language.

Shadow Puppetry workshop entices the imagination

A shadow puppetry workshop will be held from noon to 2 p.m. on April 29 at the Whitney Ranch Satellite Center, located at Galleria Drive and Patrick Lane.

Sponsored by the Henderson Parks and Recreation Department, the workshop is open to participants 13 years of age or more. Enrollment is $15 per person.

Shadow puppetry entices the imagination and suggests character through shadow and movement. It is often used in teaching, entertaining and story-telling. There is evidence that this form of puppetry was prevalent in ancient China, where puppets were carved and painted in an elaborate fashion. As this craft gained popularity its cultural influence spread to India, where it took on the form of dark silhouetted puppets.

"This workshop will teach participants how to master the fantasy and illusion of shadow puppetry," said Xanie Derrick, recreation coordinator. "Participants will learn essential techniques while infusing their own creativity into this ancient art form."

Shadow puppets are heavily influenced by the Thai, Java, and Bali cultures. These puppets are thought to be the most detailed and extreme of their kind. They are usually two-dimensional and are cut into intricate, lacy patterns from such materials as leather, fish skin or cardboard. Their full figures are viewed through an illuminated screen so only the silhouette is recognizable to the audience. Dramatic effects are achieved by distancing the figure from the screen.

"Shadow puppetry encourages people to use their imaginations," Derrick said. "It also invites them to draw their own interpretation of the meaning behind the performance."

For additional information or registration, call 450-5885.

Workshop makes Chinese cooking easy

The Henderson Parks and Recreation Department is hosting a Chinese cooking workshop from 6 to 9 p.m. April 14 at the Kesterson Valley View Recreation Center, 500 Harris St.

This workshop is designed to give participants hand-on experience preparing pre-selected dishes including hot and sour soup, egg rolls, pork fried rice, and cashew chicken. Enrollment is $15, with an additional $5 supply fee due to the instructor at class.

Chinese cuisine is not only known for its strong cultural influence, but also for its diversity of textures. According to author Hsiang Ju Lin, author of "Chinese Gastronomy," the secret of Chinese food is that flavors should blend and textures should vary.

Texture is essential when creating any Chinese dish, and proper preparation is the key to maintaining flavor. For instance, an egg beaten once is stiff, but if it is beaten a dozen times it is soft, which adds a whole new flavor. The amount of effort put into making the texture perfect for the appearance and anticipated taste of the food is what measures its overall quality.

"This attention to texture has proven to be the reason Chinese cuisine is universally savored and adopted by other cultures," said Lenore Budyach, CLA, recreation coordinator. "Detail is important in Chinese cooking, so learning texture and taste techniques will help participants become knowledgeable cooks."

American Airlines criticizes leak of route cuts

RENO, Nev. (AP) — American Airlines confirmed the bad news for passengers looking to fly in and out of Nevada after July 2 and criticized those who leaked the announcement "prematurely" over the weekend.

U.S. Rep. Jim Gibbons, R-Nev., announced on Friday that American intends to eliminate more than two dozen routes affecting Nevada — 12 flights to McCarran and 17 flights to Reno-Tahoe international airports.

The move is part of a larger effort to strengthen the airline's West Coast network, with emphasis on service to Los Angeles and San Jose, the company said Monday in a statement from headquarters in Fort Worth, Texas.

The route reductions are "principally at Reno and Las Vegas, where passenger loads have been disappointing," the statement said.

As of July, American no longer will provide service between Reno and Portland, Reno and Seattle, Reno and San Diego, and Reno and Las Vegas.

American, which purchased Reno Air 16 months ago, has been the second-leading carrier in Nevada behind Southwest Airlines. Gibbons and local leaders fear the move will result in higher ticket prices and harm Nevada's tourism industry.

In announcing the reductions, American said Monday it "deeply regrets that word of the changes was reported prema-turally over the weekend.

"The basic elements of the plan were shared in confidential conversations, but the final schedule was still being refined and the airline never intended for the information to be made public before it could be shared with employees and key community leaders," the company's statement said.

"American apologized to anyone who was offended by the news leaks."

Gibbons had been notified of the decision by airline officials, his aide Robert Uithoven said. The route cancellations made public Monday were the same as the list aides to Gibbons provided to the Associated Press and other news outlets on Friday.

"The congressman was never told any of this information was confidential," Uithoven said Monday.

Gibbons is scheduled to meet with American Airlines executives on Thursday. He's trying to gather support among local airport officials to try to persuade American to maintain additional Nevada routes.

American said it will continue to serve Reno and Las Vegas with daily service to Chicago and Dallas-Fort Worth, as well as to Los Angeles and San Jose, Calif.

American's reservations office in Las Vegas also will remain in full operation to help handle the increased call volume that will result from the overall West Coast expansion, the airline said.

Carson City child support office slow in getting cases opened

CARSON CITY (AP) — Local prosecutors have learned something that many single mothers seeking child support here have known for a long time: it can take months to get a case opened and get your first check.

Jennifer Duve filed for help in getting child support from her ex-husband Oct. 29, 1999. She had all the necessary paperwork, including the divorce decree, but nothing happened.

"We just hit the five-month mark and I still don't have a case or a case number," she said.

District Attorney Noel Waters first said he hopes Duve's story is an isolated case. But Vicki Chittenden, who runs the Family Support unit in Waters' office, said a delay of at least several months is normal and that Duve may not be alone in her five-month wait.

Chittenden said the primary problem is that all her staff's efforts now are focused on getting their 1,720 cases entered and converted into the state's controversial and complicated NOMADS computer system.

If Carson and all other Nevada counties don't make it by Oct. 1, Nevada faces millions of dollars in penalties that could hurt child support, welfare and other social service programs.

With just four caseworkers and three temporary workers for NOMADS, Chittenden said her staffers are busy keeping up with NOMADS and the task of managing the existing cases in the county.

"There isn't a single person out there who doesn't fret over what isn't being done," said Chittenden of her staff. "But we can't keep up with the input."

But she believes the staff will be able to catch up once the NOMADS conversion is out of the way.

Gov. Guinn appoints two new commissioners

Gov. Kenny Guinn has appointed Southwest Gas Corp. community affairs manager Robyn Clayton and U.S. Department of Commerce Community Partnership Specialist Gilbert Flores to the Nevada Commission for National and Community Service.

Clayton, a 19-year veteran of Southwest Gas, oversees the company's communications and community affairs departments throughout Southwest's three-state service territory. She was instrumental in starting the company's award-winning Employee Volunteer Teams, and most recently was responsible for Southwest Gas receiving the Points of Light Foundation Excellence in Corporate Community Service Award.

Clayton serves as chair for the Business Community Investment Council and has served on the board of directors for the Southern Nevada Volunteer Center and Habitat for Humanity.

Flores is working as a Partnership Specialist with the state of Nevada Census 2000. He is responsible for the partnerships in data collection, recruiting and promotion.

Flores will promote Census 2000 among local governments, community organizations, businesses, and media sources. Flores has served as a volunteer in several organizations such as G.I. Forum, Nevada Association of Latin Americans, chairman of the Hispanic Education Project for the Southern Nevada Drug Abuse Council, Latin Chamber of Commerce, president for Friends of Youth and trustee for the Nevada Law Foundation.

The Commission was created in 1994 to select and support qualified service programs in the state for AmeriCorps funding, the national initiative which addresses critical service needs by awarding scholarships to participants in exchange for community service. Clayton, Flores and 13 commissioners promote an ethic of service, solicit applications for funding and select qualified programs to receive support.

Some of the programs and their locations that have received the commission's support include: Boys and Girls Club, Serving for Success, Las Vegas; Community Chest, Inc., Nevada Conservation Corps, Virginia City; Washoe County School District, Statewide America Reads Program, Reno; and Paiute-Shoshone Tribe, AmeriCorps, Fallon.

Bryan secures panel hearing for Black Rock Desert bill

RENO (AP) U.S. Sen. Richard Bryan, D-Nev., has been granted a Senate subcommittee hearing on his proposal to protect the Black Rock Desert.

The Senate Energy and Natural Resources subcommittee on forests and federal land management will hold the hearing April 26.

"This is only the first formal step in the process, but I am very encouraged that we are beginning to move forward," Bryan said Monday.

The former governor has made the bill a priority in this his last year before he retires from the Senate. He's proposing protection for more than 600,000 acres of desert and historic trails about 100 miles north of Reno.

U.S. Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, is the chairman of the full Energy and Natural Resources committee. He notified Bryan Monday that the hearing had been scheduled before the subcommittee chaired by Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho.

New elementary prototype unveiled

David Hare
News Staff Writer

Out with the old, in with the new.

A new elementary school prototype is being implemented on four new schools across the valley, including one in Henderson.

The Elise Wolf Elementary School, along with three other elementary schools, is scheduled to open next January. Each school will be representative of a new prototype which will feature additional room space including a separate physical education classroom.

In all, the new schools will each cover about 62,500 square feet, an additional 2,500 square feet of space compared to the current elementary school prototype.

Dale Scheideman, director of planning and engineering with the Clark County School District, said prototypes are introduced within the district whenever there's a change in curriculum and class size.

"We've redesigned these buildings to accommodate more building space for new programs and functions," he said. "The separate PE classroom frees up the multi-purpose rooms which allows for a more flexible learning experience."

The district developed the "98 prototype" with the assistance of two architectural firms, Domingo Cambeiro Corps and JMA Architecture Studios.

The other three elementary school prototypes are John C. Bass Elementary in Las Vegas, Sheila R. Tarr Elementary in northwest Las Vegas, and Ethel Winternheimer Elementary in Summerlin.

Wolff Elementary is located at 1001 Seven Hills Dr. in Henderson and will relieve Lamping Elementary School.

The design for this prototype will be used for all other elementary schools built after January 2001.

Kim Vesely, public information specialist with CCSD Facilities Division, said using prototypes is a both cost-efficient and time saving technique.

"The reason we build all our schools the same is that we do so many of them," she said. "If we used a new design for each school being built, it would take up too much time and cost taxpayers too much money."

Another cost-effective feature of the new prototype, according to Scheideman, is the use of tilt-up concrete.

"In the past, we used concrete block," he said. "With the tilt-up concrete, it's less expensive to use in construction."

The 98 prototype will remain in effect until curriculum or class size changes force the district to design a new one.

Henderson businesswomen earn awards

Lisa Stiller
News Staff Writer

The National Association of Women Business Owners recently honored nine Las Vegas area women with Women of Distinction Awards.

Two Henderson residents, Betty Kincaid and Colleen Misfeldt, were among those honored.

Nine local businesses were asked to nominate one woman for the award. They were asked to take into consideration strides made in personal business achievement, efforts made to mentor others in their own field, professional community involvement and volunteer activities.

The board of directors of the National Association of Women Business Owners, Southern Nevada Chapter, reviewed and approved the nominations.

Kincaid, who was nominated by the Council of Women Realtors, started her own company, Southwest Exchange Corp., in 1990. The corporation is a Qualified Intermediary that helps people protect money from property sales by investing it to defer payment of a capital gains tax. She said she feels she was nominated for her extensive activities in the local, state and national chapter of the organization.

"The Council of Woman Realtors would not run without volunteers," she said.

Kincaid has served as local chapter president, state chapter president and on the national board of directors. In 1999, she was honored as the Council's Member of the Year.

In the community, Kincaid has encouraged fellow Realtors to volunteer with Habitat for Humanity.

"It's all about home ownership," she said. "It's about helping people be successful and be home owners and helping them have part of the American dream. That's what we Realtors do every day."

Kincaid and her employees also volunteer at Ronald McDonald House, an organization that helps families stay together when one member comes to Las Vegas for medical treatment.

"Families are very important to us as a company," she said.

Kincaid is also active at St. Thomas More Catholic Community, where she teaches religious education to sixth graders.

She has been in the real estate industry for about 20 years.

Originally from Greenwich, Connecticut, Kincaid moved to Las Vegas in 1980. She has two children, Jessica and Joshua, both of whom attend Green Valley High School.

Misfeldt was nominated by the Nevada Bankers Association. She is the executive vice president and chief operations officer for First Security Bank in Las Vegas.

"It came kind of as a surprise to me," Misfeldt said.

She oversees facility operations and human resources for the bank throughout the state, and is involved in every aspect of the bank except lending.

But she also finds time for community service.

Misfeldt is president-elect of CARR (Community Action Against Rape).

"I think it's such a tragic experience for victims," she said. When a friend of hers was raped and helped by CARR, Misfeldt said she was impressed by the assistance they offered.

She is also on the board of directors for HELP of Southern Nevada and serves on the Women's Council for the Las Vegas Chamber of Commerce.

When she first started at First Security Bank 16 years ago, Misfeldt played a big role in mentoring for a lot of co-workers.

"I enjoyed watching them be successful beyond expectations," she said.

Misfeldt, who grew up in Michigan, has been in banking for about 30 years.

Reid to address HMO concerns

Lisa Stiller
News Staff Writer

U.S. Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., will hold a hearing on the Patients' Bill of Rights legislation from 3 to 4:30 p.m. Friday, April 14, in the auditorium of the Barrick Museum of Natural History, on the campus of UNLV.

According to Reid, 60% of Nevadans are covered by managed health care plans.

Currently, the Patients' Bill of Rights is in conference committee as separate versions were passed by the Senate and House.

One of the major differences is that the House version allows patients to sue their HMOs, while the Senate version does not.

The deadline for the bill to come out of committee is Friday, but according to Reid spokesperson David Cherry, "There is no way the deadline will be met. There are still a lot of issues."

Reid says that there appears to be Republican efforts to stall the bill in committee because of the upcoming election. He said the Republicans do not want to see the Democrats taking credit for passing legislation regulating managed care.

But according to Reid and Cherry, it is very important that people attend Friday's hearing.

"People's input will be used as legislation is developed in Congress," Reid said.

The hearings are being held in different parts of the country. Cherry said he hopes that these hearings will put pressure on the conference committee to get legislation to the floor.

HOMELESS

"I'm 50. I'd just like to get some good work," he said. At Labor Express, like most of the others, he earns $5.50 an hour.

According to Kenny, there are a few women who wait for work each morning. Sherry is one of them.

She came to Las Vegas more than seven years ago to visit, liked the weather, and decided to stay. Then she met someone.

"I was in a long-term abusive relationship. The only place I could go was the streets," Sherry said. "I've been homeless off and on for five years."

She sleeps in the desert, and has a male partner for safety.

"The desert can be quiet and beautiful," Sherry said. But she wants a real home.

Sherry said part of her problem is that she never had any real skills. She's had many different jobs, including bartending and working in a nursing home.

But she has other difficulties as well.

"I had a drinking problem, and would spend the money I earned on drinking and gambling," Sherry said.

She beat the drinking problem a few years ago, and since Jan. 1, has quit gambling.

"Now I just want to save money and stay clean," Sherry said.

Getting Help

Like many of the homeless, Sherry gets help at Henderson Allied Community Advocates (HACA).

"They let me use the phone to look for work," she said.

HACA also provides food and blankets, and will help people find employment.

The homeless can get also get food and blankets at Giving Life Ministries on Perlite Way. Supper is served Monday through Friday at St. Timothy's Church, and a bag lunch is provided on week-ends.

Homeless families can get some help in finding transitional or temporary housing, but for single people on the street, there are fewer options.

Many don't want to go to St. Vincent's or the Salvation Army in Las Vegas because they have a support system here in Henderson. Some just don't like to follow the rules of traditional shelters.

The Employment Security Office on Water Street has many resources for those who are serious about obtaining steady full or part-time work.

But another problem centers on the things most people take for granted. Showers are available at scheduled times at the Salvation Army. But there is nowhere to get cleaned up enough for job interviews.

According to Henderson Community Police Officer David Wilson, Sherry's problems mirror that of many of the homeless population.

"They work a few days, then go to one of the casinos on Water Street and spend it," he said.

There isn't much in the way of help for people with substance abuse and gambling problems in Henderson, and even less for the homeless population. Twelve-step meetings are held throughout the valley, but transportation can be a problem.

But the biggest barrier is motivation.

Last month, many Henderson residents and social service workers gathered at a community meeting to discuss social service and housing needs in the community. The need for a homeless shelter in the city was raised, but not all agreed that it was appropriate for Henderson.

Henderson Police Chief Michael Mayberry said he is concerned that a shelter could attract even more homeless people to Henderson.

"It's a tough question," he said, acknowledging that more services were needed to serve the homeless population.

Wilson agrees.

"It's a touchy subject," he said. "It would have to be looked at very carefully, so you don't bring down the community around it."

New ordinance against camping, campfires

Early this month, a new ordinance went into effect, which prohibits camping and campfires on public or private land, except with the consent of the property owner. The ordinance also outlines the health and safety precautions that must be in place in order for camping to be permitted.

"A lot of people were camping in parking lots around town, dumping waste and sewage on the ground," Wilson said. "They were staying weeks at a time in parking lots of stores and casinos."

He said a real public health and safety hazard existed, and the ordinance was meant to correct the situation.

According to Wilson, Jokers Wild and Wal-mart were two of the more popular places for campers.

"We were getting complaints from the stores," he said. "In the summer time, the parking lot of Wal-mart smells pretty bad."

Wilson says the homeless have also been camping in the bushes along Boulder Highway. Under the new ordinance, they too will have to find a new place to stay.

But Wilson said people are being given time to comply.

"Right now, it's a new law and we're just educating people," he said. "We're giving people time to comply before we issue citations."

Under the ordinance, property owners who allow camping but do not provide proper health and safety measures can be cited as well.

Wilson said there are places for the homeless to go, but believes the substance abuse and gambling problems often prevent them from getting off the street.

"We're referring them to Las Vegas for shelter, but we can do more by bringing in other resources to help the single homeless situation," said Ann Taylor, a case manager at HACA. "If we can get them on their feet, we can help them get into their own apartment."

Poker Run to benefit MDA

Though the Harley-Davidson name is almost a century old, the world-largest Harley dealership in Las Vegas will be one year old this month. To celebrate, it is throwing a Harley-style party from 2 to 6 p.m. on Saturday, April 15.

Visitors are welcome to stop at the dealership, 2605 S. Eastern Ave., and join in the festivities. Live entertainment, food and Harley-Davidson motorcycles will make it a party only Harley could throw.

Prior to the party, a poker run will be held to benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association of Southern Nevada. Poker run participants can enter a raffle drawing for a new 2000 year Harley-Davidson. The drawing will be held at 6 p.m. at the dealership.

Harley-Davidson has been a sponsor of the Muscular Dystrophy Association for more than 20 years. Since 1980, The Harley-Davidson riding family has raised more than $25 million for MDA.

Those interested in participating in the poker run can call 431-8500 or stop by the dealership at 8 a.m. April 15 to register.

The 104,000-square-foot Harley-Davidson dealership showcases more than $3 million worth of inventory and a 27,000-square-foot service center that boasts four detailing bays, a dyno testing room where visitors can watch their bike being tested and a full machine shop and rental fleet.

Both Harley-Davidson and Buell motorcycles are available for sale and rent. Buell is a wholly owned subsidiary of Harley-Davidson that sells American-made sports bikes. The dealership is the only franchised Harley-Davidson store in Southern Nevada that sells and rents American-made sports bikes.

Additional highlights include attractions for adults and kids, including a replica of a drag strip with bleachers, a video arcade with the latest in virtual reality motorcycle rides, a Harley-themed eatery called The Harley Hog Diner and Harley and Buell MotorClothes, leather goods, souvenirs, collectibles and gifts.

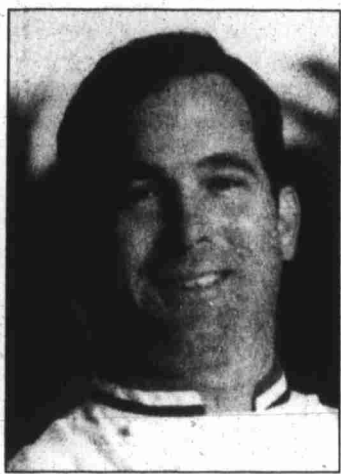

The dealership also provides shuttle service for visitors from hotels to the superstore located at 2605 S. Eastern Ave. The shuttle operates from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Las Vegas Harley-Davidson is open from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Saturday, and from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday.

Scrapbooking tips capture memories

The Henderson Parks and Recreation Department is offering a workshop that introduces participants to the nostalgic hobby of scrapbooking. The workshop will be held from 1 to 3 p.m. April 15 at the Kesterson Valley View Recreation Center, 500 Harris St. Enrollment is $15 per person. Call 565-2121.

Farrell has worked at prestigious properties throughout the U.S. including Beano's Cabin in Beaver Creek, Colo., and was most recently the executive chef at the Castle Pines Country Club in the Denver area. Farrell will introduce exciting menu items for Anthem Country Club members that are unique to the community.

Revere Golf Club nabs awards

The Revere Golf Club at Anthem has collected four coveted national and state awards in recent weeks including being named one of the "Top New Golf Courses You Can Play" in the United States by Golf Magazine in the March 2000 issue.

In Golf Magazine's list of "The Top New Golf Courses You Can Play," The Revere was listed as an honorable mention among 35 of the nation's top new golf courses. The Revere was the only golf course in Nevada named to this exclusive list decided upon by Golf Magazine's Architecture Editor Brian McCallen.

In addition to the Golf Magazine honor, Revere was also named to Golf Shop Operation's honorable mention list of "Top Golf Shops in America." Golf Shop Operations, an industry trade publication, annually publishes a list of the top golf shops in America based on merchandise sales, sales programs and merchandise displays.

The Revere also received the Governor's and the Nevada Commission on Tourism's Tourism Development Award. The Tourism Development Award is presented annually to businesses that strengthen the state's tourism by adding appeal to the out-of-town visitor while helping create additional jobs for the area.

Finally, The Revere has also been recognized as one of three "Best of Las Vegas Golf Courses" by www.bestof-lasvegas.com. Each business featured on www.bestof-lasvegas.com has been carefully reviewed by a selection committee representing a cross section of the Las Vegas community.

SPORTS THURSDAY

Henderson Home News

The war continues: Skyhawks beat Wolves

Ray Brewer
News Sports Editor

So, who is going to win the Southeast Division of the Sunrise Division in baseball?

The answer depends on what day of the week it is.

Basic defeated Green Valley March 31, the Gators defeated the Skyhawks April 4 and Tuesday Silverado beat Basic 9-1.

And this is just the Henderson-based teams.

Chaparral, defeated by both Basic and Silverado last week — albeit in the last inning — defeated Green Valley Tuesday 8-7 on nothing other than a seventh-inning rally.

As the four teams have battled back and forth the past two weeks, all of the games of been close — with the exception on Silverado's win over Basic.

The Skyhawks sent 11 batters to the plate in the first inning in scoring six runs to take a commanding lead.

Ryan Ruiz knocked in Mike Eshragh with the first Silverado run on a double and Tyler Coon put the finishing touches on the rally with a two-run single. Basic starter Jesse Craig hit three batters in the inning.

"We don't want to win one [this week], we want to win them both," Silverado outfielder James Wickman said in reference to the Skyhawks' game Friday against Green Valley. "Last week we didn't swing the bats well, but this week we are more intense."

In addition to the first-inning outburst, Silverado's defense and starter Robbie Van limited the Wolves to one run on three hits.

"I think this obviously puts us in a good situation," Silverado coach Brian Whitaker said. "But you don't want to sit back and be happy about it."

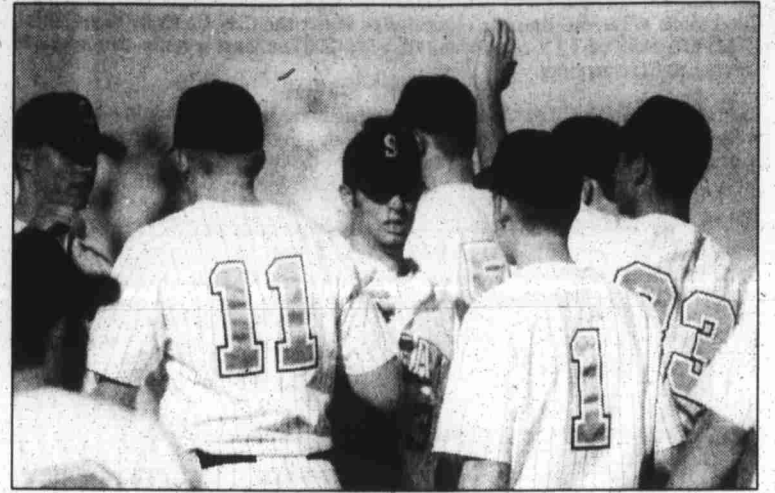

"Hopefully we can come out and play well Friday. They [Green Valley] beat us at their place, hopefully we can even it up in league play."

Eric Nielsen helped Silverado add to its lead in the second with a run-scoring single.

When all was said and done, Ruiz was 3-for-3 with two doubles and two RBI while Coon also had two hits and two runs batted in.

For the Wolves, the first inning was too much to overcome.

"What can you say?," Wolves coach Mike Kazek said. "This is the region, this is where it is at. We swung the bats today, we just didn't hit the ball with any authority — that's something

Silverado losing its basketball coach

Boys' Condron steps down

Joshua Primack
News Staff Writer

After two years at Silverado High School, boys basketball coach Pat Condron is stepping down.

The coach that led the Skyhawks to the program's first-ever playoff berth and Sunrise Regional semifinals is heading to Centennial High, across the valley and closer to his home.

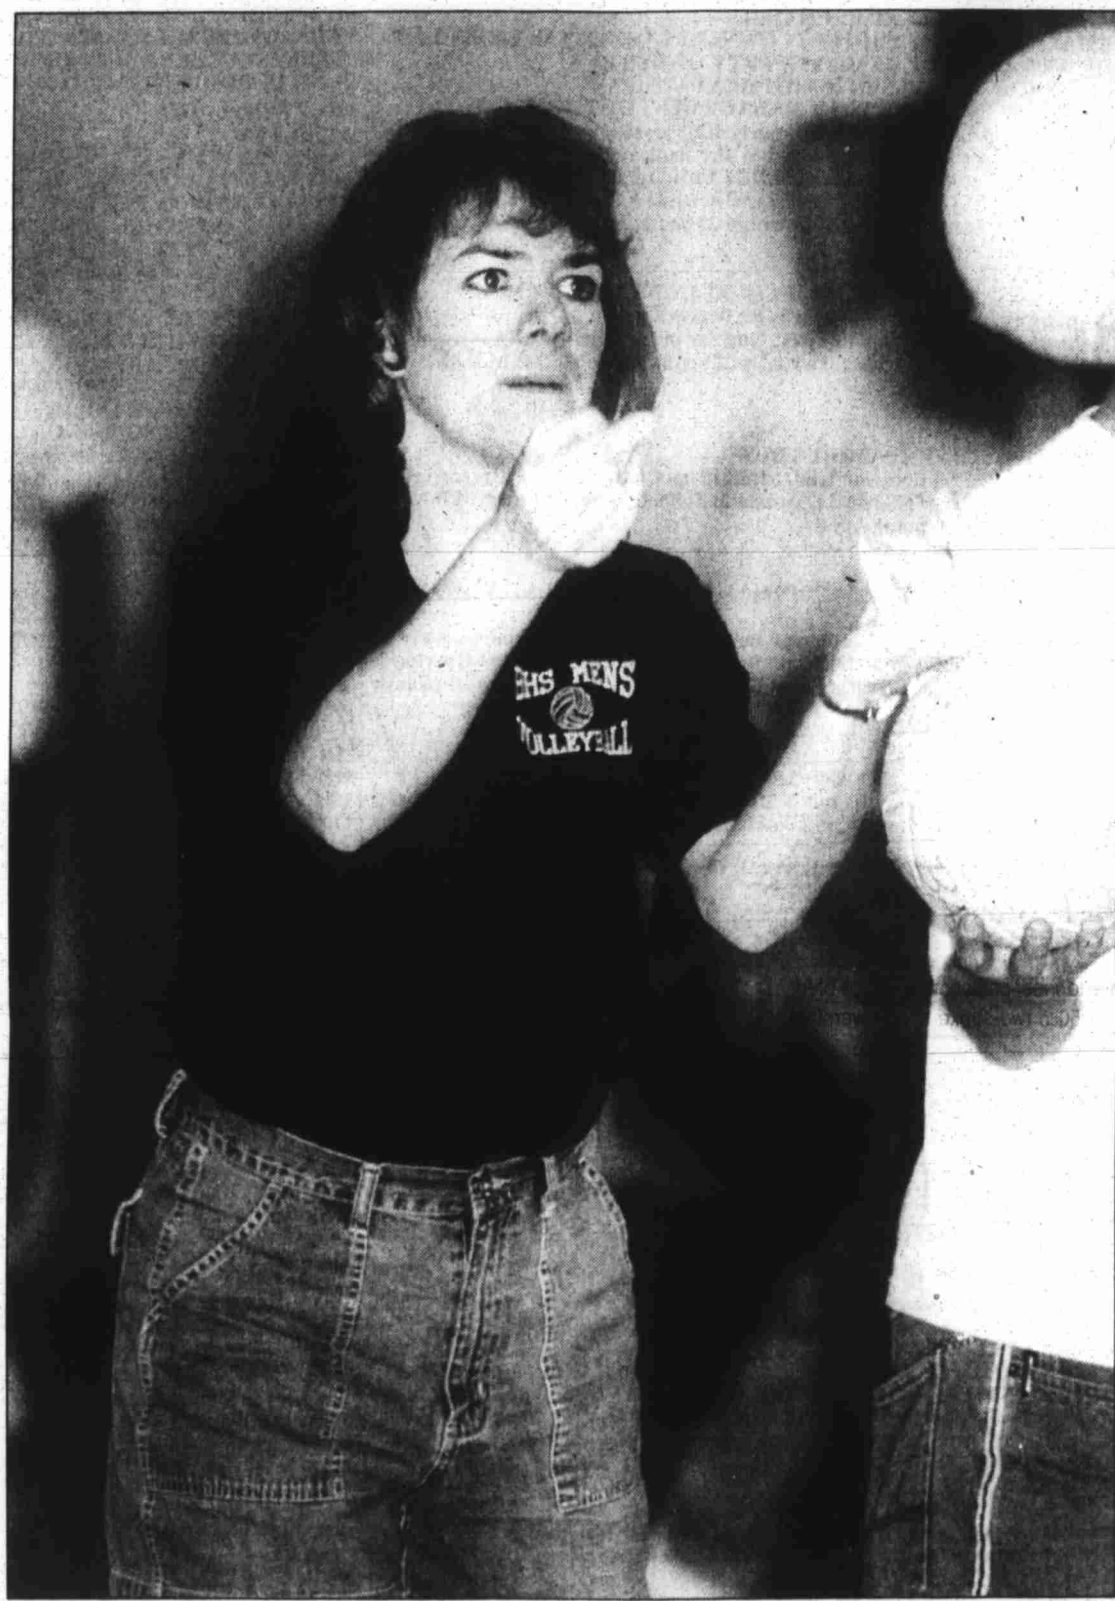

"It's a family decision," Condron said. "The administration has been more than supportive, but at this time in my life, a head coaching job is too time consuming. I don't want to cheat the school or my kids."

Silverado was 17-10 this year. The announcement this week came as a shock to most of the school because of the team's success.

"The school's basketball team wasn't very competitive when he came here," Silverado athletic administrator Dr. Dave Erbach said. "He was calm and patient and the kids worked very hard under him."

Now the team is in a severe rebuilding phase but returns key guards Brandon Cowan and Kyle Hoak.

BALANCING ACT — Basic boys volleyball coach Joan Cinkovich balances her busy coaching schedule with her children and football coaching husband. The only way they see each other sometimes is by stealing moments away when they can.

Balancing act

Cinkoviches coach different sports at different schools and make their marriage work

Joshua Primack
New Staff Writer

"Sometimes you just get lucky," Joan Cinkovich said. "A lot of this sport is personality and we have those kids who might not get all the glory, but without them, this team wouldn't be as successful."

Cinkovich is Basic's first-year boys volleyball coach.

She is talking about the success her 11-0 Wolves have seen this season.

But Cinkovich could also be talking of the team she has built with her family.

Her husband, Kris, is Las Vegas High School's head football coach.

Every fall, they hardly see each other because he is busy scouting out his football games.

In the spring, Joan is nowhere to be found.

"We steal moments away when we can," Joan said. "Kris puts in so much time, we don't have much together. Usually our weekends are full."

Despite the lack of time together, the Henderson couple has one combined focus — two daughters, Carly and Stephanie.

Joan and Kris divide their time between work and family across simple lines.

"I am the caregiver in the fall [while he coaches] and he is in the spring," she said. "The different seasons help. It works out and makes the girls stronger and more responsible."

Both children are getting active, a goal of both parents.

Carly, 12, is heading into volleyball and Stephanie, 9, is taking on softball. Both are taking dance lessons.

"We want our kids to be involved, stay busy and active," Kris said. "That is important to us."

"They enjoy playing. We don't make them play sports."

As for the two coaches, talking shop at home is forbidden with one exception.

"The only business we talk about at home is handling certain situations [with players]," Kris said. "Joany asks me some questions and I go to her. She brings a lot of experience to the table."

Joan has coached for 11 years.

It all started when they met taking similar teaching classes

Recent coverage of Silver Bandits raises eyebrows

Quick, who is Rolland Todd? If you were like me, as of Tuesday morning, you had no clue.

But somehow, some way, Todd's departure as head coach from the Las Vegas Silver Bandits was deemed important enough to get a page one headline — in Tuesday's sports section of the Las Vegas Review-Journal — that was so big it made little Elian's situation back in Florida look like a brief.

And what was next to Todd's story? A feature on the Silver Bandits' top player — I think — J.R. Henderson.

Two months ago, the daily newspaper wasn't even consistently sending out a reporter to cover Las Vegas' own International Basketball League team at home games.

Way back then, there were two ways you could get complete recaps the following morning — either attend the game with the other seven people or call up one of the players' moms the following day.

Now, out of seemingly nowhere, the franchise is as important to the valley as the future of college betting?

If you think the change has to do with the recent announcement of local ownership, you may be right. But it might not have anything to do with former UNLV Runnin' Rebel Jackie Robinson taking over at the helm.

Instead, it may have something to do with the paper itself. Did you know the Review-Journal is now a minority owner of the team?

A newspaper owning and covering the same sports franchise is nothing new at all — just look at the Chicago Cubs and Chicago Tribune — and I am a strong proponent of companies having the opportunity to seek separate business ventures.

But Tuesday's coverage of the Silver Bandits may make readers question the future. Why? Because the additional coverage is not the norm for the paper's sports department.

Professional team after professional team has gone through Las Vegas without proper respect from Nevada's largest newspaper (That includes the International Hockey League's Las Vegas Thunder — the most prominent of all the minor league has-beens.)

And then there sits the Las Vegas Stars, entering their 18th year as a member of the Pacific Coast League and garnering coverage from the Review-Journal as if they played in some double-header league down at the Arroyo Grande Sports Complex every Monday night.

Hopefully, this was just a coincidence.

But I'm sure I wasn't the only person in town with an eyebrow raised that mor-

— there may have been one or two rising at the Stars' offices as well.

'Say Hey Kid' whining?

If I hear one more old-time player or media member whine about the size of new baseball parks... or lack of pitching in the majors... or dilution of talent in the league... or the smaller strike zone, I'm going to cancel my ESPN Classic. (Don't tempt me, I will.)

This time, it was Hall of Famer Willie Mays who set me off on my tangent.

While commenting on the San Francisco Giants' new ballpark — Pac Bell Stadium — Mays remarked that he's jealous of today's players. No, not because the ballpark has such great amenities, but because of how small it is. He said he never played in a ballpark that small, thus, implying about how easy it would be to hit home runs there.

Hey, bitter old man — let it go.

All of this talk about juiced balls, close fences and bad pitching is getting old.

What about the other side of the argument? That's right, there is one.

What about the fact that today's athletes are bigger, faster and stronger than those of yesteryear?

What about the fact that weight-training has become a major part of today's players' year-round regimen?

What about the fact that athletes are eating better these days, taking supplements created by science and, overall, taking better care of themselves? (And I'm not just comparing Mark McGwire to Babe Ruth here.)

What about the fact that players today are growing up with batting cages in their back yards and playing baseball 12 months out the year?

Yes, there are more teams — which means more pitchers — but there is a much larger talent pool from which to draw from as well.

And, if the pitching is so terrible, why don't we see hitters approaching the .400 mark every single season? (No one was hit .400 in 59 years). Isn't that a truer measure of the effectiveness of pitching?

Today's hitters are stronger than ever and are trying to hit home runs. Add those two things together and you get more long balls.

So Mr. Mays, don't "Say Hey" or anything else right now.

Just keep quiet on this subject, please. And that goes to your long-time friends, too.

Your negative comments aren't tarnishing today's players. They are only tarnishing yourself.

D.J.'s Game Notes — Isn't it sad how much time we waste worrying about such things as the Elián González situation and the Ted Binion trial?... Do the Washington Redskins have the same salary cap as everyone else in the NFL?... The story of Atlanta's Andres Galarraga, who is returning to baseball with a bang after a year off due to cancer, is near miraculous.

Future of baseball in Reno linked to stadium's condition

RENO (AP) — Reno civic leaders think that if professional baseball is going to have any future in Reno, a lot of its success will hinge on sprucing up Moana Stadium.

They would like to see amenities like restaurants and shops added to the facility to help generate cash to rebuild the stadium.

The refurbishing began last fall when the Reno-Sparks Chamber of Commerce raised $100,000 to repave the parking lot. New restrooms were on the drawing board when the Blackjacks suddenly pulled up stakes and moved to Marysville, Calif.

Officials think it would take about $1 million to shore up the stadium with restrooms, new locker rooms, a kitchen and perhaps an additional 1,000 seats in addition to the current 1,500.

California League President Joe Gagliardi says that's wishful thinking.

He said the stadium is worn out and should be torn down and replaced. His estimated cost is $6 million-$8 million.

If the money were borrowed over 20 to 30 years, he said payments wouldn't be that outrageous. But Reno would have to find a sure thing to back those installations.

"If they come up with something and want to have a meeting, I'd fly up there immediately," said Gagliardi, who is based in San Jose, Calif.

Al Rogers, city recreation manager, said rents from shops and restaurants at minor league stadiums are one way to make the stadium an entertainment center and draw more people.

Nationwide, other minor league stadiums are adopting this strategy to raise money for improvements. "It's a hefty investment. I don't know if the community is willing to do that," Rogers said.

But he agrees that Moana is not worth renovating.

"Raze this place and build a brand-new facility," he said. The Reno City Council has put reopening the stadium for baseball on its priority list.

This summer, the ballpark will be used for adult and recreation games.

this team has done all year. "If you can't swing the pipe in this region, you aren't going to win. We proved that today."

Over at Chaparral, the action was equally intense as Chaparral scored two runs in its final at bats to steal one from the Gators.

"It was not a good day," Green Valley coach Nick Garritano said. "Especially with the two teams [Basic at home Thursday and at Silverado Friday] we have coming up."

Chaparral took an early 3-0 lead after the first inning, but Green Valley rallied to plate two runners in the second and fourth innings as well as three in the fifth to take a 7-3 lead.

Chaparral scored three times in the sixth to set up the unforgettable seventh inning.

The Cowboys loaded the bases in the seventh with one out and Brice Sells on the hill for Green Valley.

Chris Hansen hit a taylor-made double play ground ball to Green Valley shortstop Zeke Parraz, who let the ball go under his glove, allowing the tying and winning runs to score.

"We should have never got into that situation," Garritano said of the final play. "We stranded nine runners on base."

John Grose led the Green Valley offense with a 3-for-4 performance and two doubles while Parraz was 2-for-2 with two RBI.

Tuesday's action marked the halfway point of divisional play. Both Basic and Silverado have identical 3-1 division records, 15-2 overall, while Green Valley and Chaparral both sport 2-2 records.

FOOTHILL

The Falcons halted a five-game losing skid with an impressive come from behind victory over Western Monday at Western High School.

Foothill scored four times in the top of the seventh and held on for a 15-12 win.

"It was a nice win," Foothill coach Tom Crine said. "Sometimes you think you forget how to win."

Grant Stanley led a 13-hit attack for the Falcons with a 3-for-4 performance while Jabe Beard was 3-for-5 and Tommy Woodring had two hits.

"We still have an outside shot of making the playoffs and we are shooting for that," Crine said. "But again, we are just trying to get better every game."

"If we don't have to face those three teams [Basic, Green Valley and Silverado] in a row, we feel that we can be competitive."

The school is working to have the basketball coaching situation settled by May 1.

"We've had three official internal applicants," Erbach said. "We will entertain outside applicants as well. As they come in we will review them."

The goals of the administration with the new coach is to look out for the best interests of the kids.

"Several kids have told me that they want to see things go on the same," Erbach said. "Hopefully we will be able to continue what Pat brought. He deserves the credit with our whole coaching staff."

The new coach will be Silverado's third as the school enters its sixth year.

Current Green Valley assistant Bill Crego held the post before Condrion.

TRAFFIC — Silverado hitter Ryan Hastings, right, hits the ball amidst Greer Valley blockers Ean Zeller, middle, and Matt Sugden. The Gators won the Tuesday contest in three games to remain undefeated in the Southeast Division.

GV volleyball airs out on Silverado

Joshua Primack
News Staff Writer

Green Valley boys volleyball coach Caroline Carpenter may still be looking to increase her team's tempo on the court, but why argue with success?

The Gators stand at 13-1 overall and are undefeated in Southeast Division play after defeating Silverado Tuesday in three games, 15-5, 15-10, 15-12.

"We are still looking to push the level of play," Carpenter said. "We need to speed this up."

The first game was dominated by Green Valley before the Skyhawks fought back in the second and third games to make the match competitive.

Green Valley's Matt Sugden led all scorers with 14 kills and Silverado hitter DeJaun Ashley trailed with 13 kills.

The Gators won the setter battle with Charles Kallick's 42 assists while the Skyhawks' Joe Rowe had 27.

Also scoring for Green Valley were Mason Vonnahme with six kills and Jeff Walker with five.

Ryan Hastings had nine kills for Silverado.

"We pulled together and battled back for the last couple of games," Silverado coach Eric Drum said.

Silverado fell to 4-7 overall and 1-3 in the division.

BASIC

The Wolves dispatched Vo-Tech in three quick games, 15-4, 15-5, 15-7.

Derek Muaina led Basic with nine assists and seven kills.

"We are still trying to work in our new rotation," Wolves' coach Joan Cinkovich said. "We were still working the kinks out."

Ben Erickson scored four kills, two blocks and two aces.

Senior Mark Williams added three kills and a block.

"There was not a lot of rally-at Carroll College in Helena, Mont., where she was a volleyball player and he played football.

"We took classes together to get our teaching degrees," Joan said. "I was an English major and he was in physical education."

After graduation, Joan took to coaching junior varsity girls volleyball at Helena Capital High School after graduating from Carroll.

Kris went for his masters in physical education in Washington state and she took on coaching junior varsity in Ellensburg, Wash.

Wherever he went for a job, the family followed.

They moved to Oregon, where he was coaching at Oregon Tech. The school closed the football program one year after the Cinkovichs arrived.

Looking for stability in their lives, they honed in on Southern Nevada.

Cheyenne High football coach, George Perry, got Kris an interview with UNLV's football coaching staff under Jim Strong and the family moved to Henderson.

"We came here as a springboard to get his name out," Joan said. "We felt like we were in a much more stable environment. Kris got relicensed and got on with the school district."

Joan went straight to Basic and coached boys junior varsity volleyball there as well.

Kris made it to Green Valley in 1992 as assistant football coach in charge of strength training and helping out on the wrestling team.

She transferred to Bonanza for a similar post and the head football coaching job at Las Vegas opened up for him.

This year, Basic had an opening for varsity boys volleyball when Darren Puana stepped down a year after his Wolves won the state title in 1998.

Joan took the job. "I don't want to compare what we do," Kris Cinkovich said. "I work seven days a week in the fall and they are busy with volleyball in the spring."

"I have summer workouts and she has a fireworks booth."

As for comparing team success, Basic's squad is one of the most successful in Southern Nevada and has hopes of bringing home a state championship.

Las Vegas's football team fell short of the state title game by losing to Cimarron — their lone defeat of the year — in the Southern Zone finals.

Joan might have the upperhand right now because her team is undefeated.

Something Kris doesn't mind at all.

"He's happy when we're successful," Joan said. "It makes it easier on him. Things are going great [at Basic]. I hope to build a whole program where the kids are all involved."

"Coaching is a lot of work but I enjoy it. I love working with young kids and helping them reach their goals."

And she is happy with her team's success, but not satisfied.

"Obviously I want it to continue," she said. "It is a battle. We are working on getting our offense communicating."

This has been made more difficult because the Wolves lost their setter, Jeremy Hartman, this past week.

Luckily for Joan, Basic's team is working well together. They are loaded with senior talent and junior potential.

"There are not a lot of egos," Joan said. "We have fun and work together. This is a team sport and we set the kids who are hot."

As a coach, it is Joan's job to find out who is hot.

But you won't hear gripes from the Wolves.

Silverado uses aggressive base running to blank Basic in softball

Ray Brewer
News Sports Editor

It appeared as if Sonja Randolph had just drilled a three-run home run.

Silverado's speedy outfielder raced around the bases after nailing a shot over Jessica Magro's head in the second inning of the Skyhawks and Wolves softball game Tuesday.

Turns out Randolph's long homer was credited as a run-scoring single after Silverado's Laura Rodriguez — the would-be second run — missed second base.

Despite this base running miscue, the Skyhawks' aggressive mentality on the base paths was key in Silverado's 10-0 disposing of Basic at Silverado High School.

"We are trying to be aggressive and put pressure on other teams," Silverado coach Chuck Pope said. "The younger kids [the Skyhawks start four freshmen each game] are starting to get it."

Silverado scored six times in the fourth inning to put the game out of reach.

During the six-run rally, it was common to see the Skyhawks take an extra base to make things happen.

"We played [Monday] in a non-conference game to get ready for this conference game today," Pope said. "We didn't play well [Monday] and we told the kids to come out today and play like Silverado can."

The Wolves had no answers for Silverado.

"Part of it was mental mistakes and part of it was unpreparedness," Basic coach Bart Black. "I'll take the blame for the unpreparedness."

Julie Brand led the offensive charge for Silverado, going 3-3 with a home run and three RBI.

Silverado (16-7) improves to 4-0 in the Southeast Division of the Sunrise Region with the win, while Basic drops to 3-2.

GREEN VALLEY

The Gators won consecutive games this week, blanking Basic 10-0 Monday and beating Chaparral 3-1 Tuesday.

"I have talked about it all year," Green Valley coach John Culver said. "I knew we'd start off slow with this young team. But we have put ourselves in a position to improve each week and everything is going according to the plan."

In the win over Chaparral, Erika Twesme had a two-run single in the fourth-inning to put the Gators ahead for good.

"I am comfortable with the way things are happening," Culver said. "We are still getting good defense and pitching and we are starting to swing the bats better."

Jaimee Stethem pitched a complete game for the win.

Against the Wolves, Green Valley avenged an earlier loss to their crosstown rivals with an impressive victory.

In the win, Suzanna Raygoza pitched a one-hitter, striking out four batters.

Offensively, Becky Williams went 3-for-3 with three RBI to pace the Gators while Ashley Gebow was 2-for-3 with two RBI.

Lindsay Beckstead added a 2-for-3 performance with two doubles and three RBI.

Silverado's Zabolio medals in golf

Joshua Primack
News Staff Writer

The Silverado boys golf team had a couple of firsts this season on Tuesday.

The squad finished under 200 on their home course in beating Basic 199-225 at the Wildhorse Golf Club as Nick Zabolio shot a one-over-par 37 for his first medalist honor of the year.

"I got up and down a couple of times to help me par out," Zabolio said. "I knew I could shoot this low. There was nothing special about today."

Zabolio's teammates say he was in a hurry to get off the golf course so he could get to a soccer game right after the match.

Incidentally, Nemesis — the club Zabolio plays for — lost 2-0.

As for his golfing game, Zabolio was paired with the Skyhawks' ace, freshman Matt Edwards who finished with a counted team-high 42.

"Everyone on the team plays hard," Zabolio said. "It was nice to play with someone good."

As for the rest of Silverado (8-3 overall and 3-1 in division), T.J. Wagner shot a 39, Cody Clonts finished at 40 and Brad Henson carded a 41.

"We have to play like this to contend with Green Valley," Zabolio said.

Basic's lowest scorers, Matt Davies and Adam Green finished the round at 44.

Basic dropped to 5-6 overall and 1-3 in the division.

GREEN VALLEY

The Gators plowed through the Stallion Mountain Golf Club, Chaparral's home course, to defeat the Cowboys 191-227.

Drew Scott earned medalist honors with a one-over-par 37.

The rest of Green Valley's squad carded two 38s, Nick Lorenz and Jim Lobrovich, and two 39s.

"Everybody shot pretty even," Gators' coach Del Sagers said. "They are still competing with each other for open slots in zone and state."

Green Valley is 10-0 overall and 3-0 in the division.

FOOTHILL

Foothill ended its losing streak Tuesday with a home win over Boulder City.

After suffering three losses in consecutive outings, the Falcons soared past the Eagles 207-226. Daryn King earned medalist honors for Foothill with a three-over-par 39 at the Revere at Anthem golf course.

"We needed to get on the winning side again," Falcons' coach JD Fraser said. "I wish we shot a 207 last week."

The Falcons improve to 8-3 overall.

Basic track teams rely on distance squads

By the News Staff

At Durango Tuesday, the Basic track team had more success in the distance competitions.

The Wolves' took third in both the girls and boys meets.

Durango won the girls meet with 118 points, Palo Verde scored 92 while Basic (51) and Indian Springs (3) pulled up the rear.

The Wolves' Jennifer Bowman won the 800 meter open in 2 minutes, 32.8 seconds.

Natalie Hicken won the 3200 at 12:35, her best time this year, and Meylonn Parker won the 400 at 1:05.1.

The Wolves 4x800 relay team took second to Durango at 10:27.

Hicken anchors the team with Bowman, Parker and Samantha Cerrano running the other legs.

"We have some kids getting personal records at every meet," Basic track coach Larry Burgess said. "Well, we are young and making progress. The seniors are doing well."

Basic's boys squad scored 26 points for third in the meet won by Palo Verde (110 1/2). Durango (96) took second and Indian Springs (14 1/2) was last.

The Wolves' 4x800 relay team won the event at 8:33.1. Nathan Juarez led the squad that consisted of Kolby Campbell, Cole Krahenbuhl and Scott DeVoge.

Juarez also won the 1600 in 4:36.2 and Campbell was victorious in the 3200 at 10:05.

LVMS, Treadway Racing 'Send Smiles to Sam'

After his well-publicized racing accident in Orlando in January, Sam Schmidt could use some support.

Schmidt, paralyzed from the neck down, is at a St. Louis hospital.

To raise money and Schmidt's spirits, Las Vegas Motor Speedway, Treadway Racing, Sprint PCS and local racers are teaming up for "Sending Smiles to Sam."

The event will be Saturday from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. at the Sprint PCS store at 9310 W. Sahara Ave.

Sunday, the event will continue, this time at the Sprint PCS store at 2600 North Green Valley Pkwy., from 1 to 3 p.m.

Locals can stop by one of the two designated Sprint PCS locations to tape a message for Schmidt's video postcard and show that Southern Nevada is pulling for him.

Everyone who stops by will find feel-good fun, food and free refreshments. Fans can also buy Schmidt's racing team T-shirts to raise money for him and his non-profit foundation.

Schmidt's supporters can find out about the April 22 IRL race in Las Vegas at the Sprint PCS stores.

NOTES

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Kenny Bernstein won the Top Fuel final in the NHRA SummitRacing.com Nationals on Sunday, beating Joe Amato in a tire-smoking duel at Las Vegas Motor Speedway.

Bernstein, a 23-time winner in NHRA's top division, had a quarter-mile run of 4.907 seconds with a top speed of 282.78 mph. Amato, who lost traction, finished in 5.213 seconds with a top speed of 314.09 mph.

Jim Epler, Jeg Coughlin, Angelle Seeling and Bob Panella also won their divisions in the $1.8 million race, the fourth of 23 events in the $45 million NHRA Winston Drag Racing Series.

Epler raced to his third career Funny Car victory and first since 1993, beating Tony Pedregon in the final. Epler had a winning run of 4.983 seconds at 302.21 mph, while Pedregon lost traction near the finish in a run of 5.417 seconds at 197.02 mph.

Coughlin won his third Pro Stock title of the season, defeating rival Warren Johnson. Coughlin finished in 7.072 seconds at 195.56 mph.

Skyhawks' Simmons signs with California school

Joshua Primack
News Staff Writer

Another Silverado football player is going to compete at the college level next year as Ian Simmons is heading to Pitzer College in Claremont, Calif.

Silverado's whole offensive line was a key to the team's success this past season and Simmons helped the Skyhawks to its first winning season by excelling at guard.

"I am built to be a pulling guard," Simmons said. "I can block well on the move."

The group grew together over the past four years and spent extra time in the weight room and on the field to improve as a unit.

Simmons will bring this same work ethic, as well as his 3.5 GPA, to Pitzer College, a Division III school that is smaller than 1,000 students and concentrates on its academics first and athletics second.

"I liked the school right away," Simmons said. "It is very Victorian-looking and has a real clean atmosphere. I want to play but I want to get a good education."

Simmons will receive an academic scholarship and pursue a degree in managing information systems, centered mainly around computers.

He likes the small classes and the personal attention he will receive at the college.

"Academically, the team [Pitzer] doesn't have to worry about Ian," Silverado coach John DeNardin said. "He has a good all-around work ethic and can adopt to any situation — on the field or off."

"He is a real quick and is the type of kid that is hard to replace."

Simmons has been preparing for his college career by lifting weights on his own and with the Skyhawks' football team. He also works one-on-one with former teammates.

Mostly, though, Simmons is focusing on his mental preparation for the step to the next level.

"A lot of kids go there [to college] and are not mentally ready," Simmons said. "You have to have the right kind of attitude and want to do it. Even in Division III, you'll get smacked around. It is tough."

"I have a good chance at starting and I'll help them reach another level."

Simmons decided on Pitzer after visiting nearby Chapman, La Verne and Occidental colleges.

Pitzer is part of the Claremont College system which incorporates five colleges, Pitzer, Pomona, Harvey-Mudd, Claremont McKenna and Scripps, an all-girls school, on one large campus.

Pitzer and Pomona share athletic teams to make up the Pomona-Pitzer Sagehens, a form of chicken that dies of a heart attack when cornered. The other three schools share athletic teams as well.

On Simmons' recruiting trip to Pitzer, he attended the game between Claremont-Mudd-Scripps and Pomona-Pitzer. It was CMC's homecoming game.

The Sagehens won 24-21 in overtime.

Pomona-Pitzer finished this past season ranked 33rd in the AFCA Division III college football poll.

In addition to Simmons, Silverado's Steve Vaccaro is headed to Alcorn State and Neil Vanorsow will suit up.

admission and parking are always free.

There is bleacher seating available, but fans are encouraged to bring lawn chairs to ensure close seating for Appreciation Day festivities.

Playing against a national schedule as an independent team without an out-of-state recruiting program, CCSN has won 25 of the last 26 games.

The Coyotes have also earned a berth in postseason play in the National Junior College Athletic Association's Region I tournament.

The tournament is hosted by the Arizona Community College Athletic Conference.

Currently riding a 14-game winning streak on the heels of an 11-game string, CCSN has beaten seasoned and long-established opponents from Arizona, Canada, Colorado, Idaho, Illinois, Kansas, New Jersey and Utah.

Only nine regular-season games remain on the Coyotes' 56-game schedule including three against Dixie College from St. George, Utah.

Going Country in Henderson

Lisa Stiller
News Staff Writer

Linda Karch is a groupie. She has been following Billie Ray Cyrus around the country since 1992. On Friday, March 24, she was at Sunset Station for Cyrus's two concerts.

"I work double shifts so we can go to a lot of his concerts," said Karch, who lives in Missouri.

Her fascination with Cyrus and country music is no surprise to many country music fans in Henderson.

Shendell Doty, a Henderson real estate agent, didn't stop dancing in the aisle until the concert was over.

"You can understand the words," she said

"I use to hate country music," Doty said. "I am a product of the '60s, and always listened to rock. One day I switched on a country station, and I could hear and understand the music."

Doty has been a fan ever since.

Jeff Fuller also likes country because he can understand the words. "The songs have a story and meaning to them," he said.

Peggy Burciaga also said she loved the concert. "I feel country music — I don't feel rock," she said.

This sentiment is common among country music lovers, especially those who converted from being die-hard rock fans.

Glennboy, the morning drive DJ on country station KWNR and a Henderson resident, has been in radio for many years. Before coming to KWNR, the stations he worked at played mostly rock and alternative music.

"I was unemployed, the job was available and I applied," said Glennboy. "At first it was just another gig. It turned out I fell in love with it."

One reason rock and R&B fans are starting to listen to country, said Glennboy, is that country is changing.

"It has more of a pop, alternative sound and so more people are embracing it," he said.

Glennboy points to the many crossover artists that can be heard today, such as Shania Twain, Faith Hill, Joe Michael Montgomery and LeAnn Rimes.

He says that because rock has been changing so dramatically, a lot of rock fans are now starting to listen to country.

"A lot of people who have been listening to rock don't like where it's gone," said Glennboy. "They don't like the music that's coming out, the language, and they don't like rap."

Doty says one reason she doesn't listen to rock music as much any more is because of the way it has changed.

"I don't like rap, especially the words," she said.

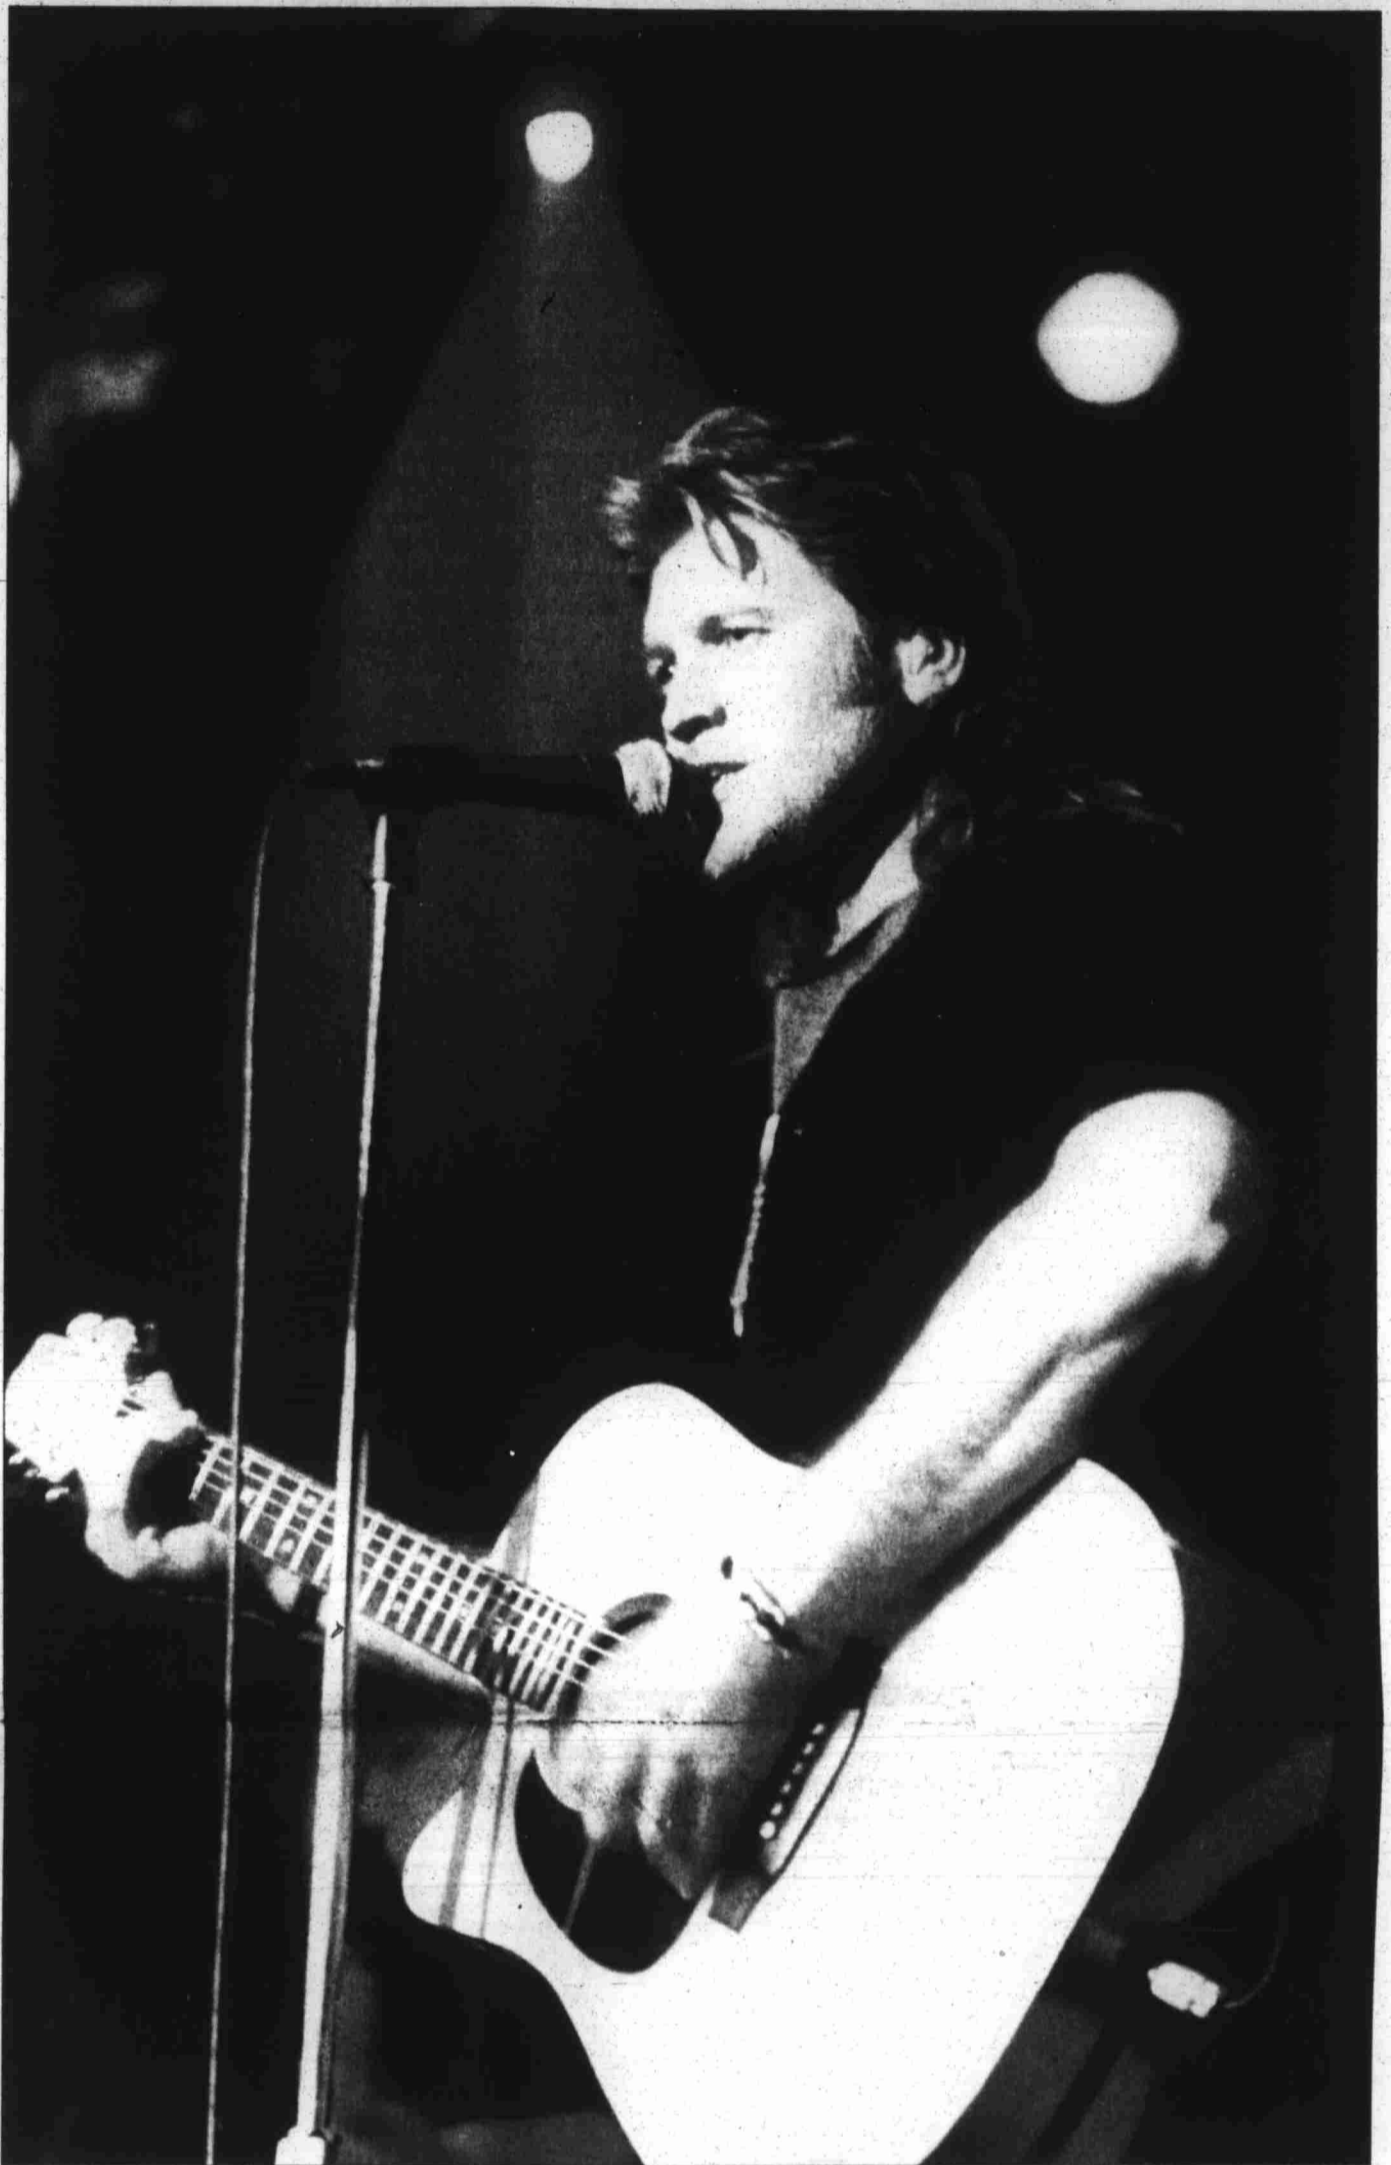

According to Randy Anderson, a well-known local country singer, "Country music has really grown. It has splintered into a lot of different styles to bring a younger listening audience."

Anderson, who does some original material as well as cover songs, says some of his favorite artists and influences include Merle Haggard, James Taylor and George Strait.

Cyrus is a good example of a country artist who tries to have a broad appeal. His concert included songs such as the Rolling Stones' "Honky-Tonk Woman", and Jeannie Riley's "Harper Valley PTA".

When asked how he would define country music, Cyrus said, "It's everything, it's music, baby."

Wanda Vilma is from a small town in the Midwest and grew up on country music. "When I was a kid I didn't know there was any other station but country-western," she said. Vilma says she does listen to rock, but country is still her favorite.

"The music is down to earth," she said.

According to Glennboy, "Country music has a higher morality than other music."

Most fans agree, citing the fact that country is more family-oriented and a lot of older people seem to prefer country.

Brooke Pettenger says the realism of country music appeals to her.

"It tells more of a real life story," she said.

Fans say they like country music because it has a friendlier feel.

"Country singers are the most friendly entertainers and the most down-to-earth," said Darlene Vakot, who likes to listen to Anderson when he plays at Jokers Wild.

Cyrus certainly qualifies as fan-friendly. After his concert, he spent about 20 minutes signing autographs and talking to fans.

Glennboy says most of KWNR's listeners are from Henderson. One reason, he says, may be because it has a more family-oriented atmosphere.

But there are few, if any, places in Henderson that cater mainly to country-western music lovers. Most taverns, music lounges and bars feature a variety of music.

"This [Las Vegas area] is not a normal city," said Glennboy. "Everything is centered around casinos. Other cities have venues that are centered around an act, music or a DJ."

But despite the fact that there is not a specific place country music fans can call home, Glennboy says he believes it is continuing to grow in the Las Vegas area, as well as around the country.

Perhaps Cyrus put it best when asked about the growing popularity of country music.

"You're asking the wrong question," he said. "The real question is — why did all these people come out here tonight. We had a good time."

Use tact when talking about sexual history

Hi Carolyn:

What are your feelings about revealing the number of past sexual partners to a current boyfriend/girlfriend? I am 24 and recently began dating someone whom I know I will marry (don't bother with your typical negative sarcasm, please) and I have been thinking about this topic a lot lately. Everyone has different opinions. I don't ever want to lie to this man, but I also don't feel comfortable revealing a number that I am not proud of. (The not-proud part of the number involves three or four one-night stands in college.) I am leaning toward honesty because, as one of my friends said, are his feelings really going to change whether the number is 6 or 16? Much of my concern centers around the fact that he is mildly Catholic and has mentioned to me before that he has never had a one-night stand. (This is not a health issue, as I have been tested.)

—Somebody, Somewhere

Your friend has expressed a lovely sentiment — the kind they use in a horror flick about a second before the carnage starts. That's why my feelings about revealing your entire sexual history are no, no, don't open that door!

Your boyfriend's feelings will change, fast, if the mutual understanding that there have been others becomes a spirited round of "Picture All 16 of Them While

TELL ME ABOUT IT

CAROLYN HAX

You Stare Sleeplessly at the Ceiling." Would you want all the stats on him?

The way you've interpreted your options, honesty means providing a head count and a lie means not providing a head count. Not only is that wrong — declining to answer a question hardly makes you dishonest — but it also leaves out the most palatable option: tact.

That's what you use when the truth might hurt, or isn't anyone's business. Both apply here. Besides, your asking me means you have no clue how this guy would deal with the information, or how Catholic is "mildly(!) Catholic." That, in turn, means it's too soon to be sharing your deep explicit secrets anyway, even if bedpost-notches were an appropriate secret to share. Which they aren't. (Unless your life is titled "Four Weddings and a Funeral" and you look like Andie MacDowell.)

Tact demands that you leave the subject alone unless you're asked and, if you are asked, it means wondering what kind of person would be tactless enough to ask such a thing. The only response you owe is, "What can either of us gain by keeping score?" That is the question, after all. If he presses the issue, I hope you know not to build your future around a paranoid bully.

Speaking of which — I'm happy for any reader who meets someone so nice that she develops a highly premature certainty that this love will lead to marriage. Really, I positively and unsarcastically hope it works out.

Dear Carolyn:

I have a major problem that has been bugging me for a while. It's my brother. Even though I'm older (by three years), he's always the one taking cheap shots at me.

I don't know what I've done to deserve this. He always questions me whenever I'm in charge at home and he ends up yelling at me. He seems to be complaining whenever I get good grades or beat him in baseball. He always seems mad at me for something. Whenever I get after him, he runs to my parents and complains. My parents are always like, "Oh, be nice to him," or they tell him to stop teasing me, which is a blow to my pride. I have no clue what to do or how to take this.

—Big Sister

So you've got an obnoxious little brother? Forget "major" — your problem is positively earth-shattering!!!

I know, it feels that way to you. But look again at what you wrote. You're three years older, you get better grades, you beat him at baseball, you get to tell him what to do when your parents aren't around.

And he's supposed to like this. Your brother is fed up with being left in your dust — but until he gets older, stronger and/or better in school, what's a fed-up little guy to do? Yell. A lot.

Instead of yelling back, stun him into silence by agreeing with him. "Yeah, it's not fair that I was born first, but it's also not anybody's fault." Believe me, a sudden attack of empathy is the last thing he'll expect.

And, as much as it kills you to do it, you should make this empathy strategy permanent. When you refuse to fight back, that means there will be no fight, period, and nothing to run to Mommy about, and therefore he gets no extra ego boost for yelling. Eventually, he'll either give up trying to start fights, or he'll find his own talents and strengths, or he'll just outgrow this phase on his own. The best way to help with all three? Oh, be nice to him.

Sorry.

Equipment to add to your boat

I received a fax from a reader in response to my recent column about what equipment should be on every boat. He stated he would like to have at least two fishing pole holders along the gunwale and a spare tire mounted on the trailer. In addition, the trailer tongue should be built so that it can swing away or be retracted so that the smaller rigs can be parked in a garage.

Now that is a good idea. I had a friend who had a small utility trailer that had a detachable tongue but a boat trailer that can swing or fold out of the way does make sense. That extra length just might allow you to get your rig into your garage or other limited areas.

Regarding the pole holders, since I don't have them on my present boat, I always tell people that I don't have them as I am too busy catching fish to put my pole in a holder. That's my first tall tale of the year, but yes, I would like at least two but located at the stern of my boat. They make a good storage place when going from beach to beach or back to the dock.

I have yet to add a spare tire holder. Certainly carrying a spare tire is a good decision especially if making a long trip — even if you just throw it in the trunk of your car on the short trips to the lake or river. I am sure there are a lot of other "essentials" that we all just have to have but I know they are usually added over the years little by little any way.

My big boat, Slo Pok III did have all of those goodies which went along with the boat when I traded it in for my current boat so I am adding stuff as soon as I can.

Speaking of trailers, I hope you have included it in your spring maintenance program. Start first by checking the lights, especially the side marker lights if so equipped. Seems as though someone would invent a rubber sleeve that can be slipped over each end when the trailer is not in use. I use a small piece of friction tape but it is a bother to put on and take off.

There is a storage box available on the market but I could not find a convenient spot on the underside of my truck so I resort to tape. Even a plastic bag with a rubber band is efficient to keep out dirt.

Check out your first-aid kit and replace the items you used last year. Make sure your liquid medications have not dried out or leaked. One skipper told me the one thing a first-aid kit should always have is a book on first-aid procedures. Makes sense to me.

Shake up each fire extinguisher and check the service date. It's a good idea to have two extinguishers on board for obvious reasons.

The Great American Clean-Up at Las Vegas Bay was a success with more than 900 bags of trash collected. I registered right at 9:30 a.m. and went to work along the boat storage fence and adjacent dry wash.

I had to leave after about two hours as I had another appointment but people were still coming in to help as I was leaving. It was a great effort by the community. Now let us all help by taking care of our own trash whenever we are at the lake. Hopefully there might be the day when there is no trash to pick up.

Until next time...keep your bilge dry.

Hunt applications due by April 17

The Nevada Division of Wildlife would like to remind hunters that the application deadline for Nevada big game hunts is rapidly approaching. All applications received after the April 17 deadline will not be included in the computerized drawings.

About 80,000 informational packets were mailed out to hunters in mid-March. Systems Consultants, the firm that is under contract to process the applications, reports that to date they have only received about 20,000 of the completed applications in the mail.

They expect that as in years past, most hunters will wait until the last minute to mail in their applications. By applying so late, hunters who may have made an error or omission on their application lose the chance to have their application returned to them for correction.

The Board of Wildlife Commissioners adopted new regulations for 2000 that significantly changed the way hunters apply for tags.

"The new regulations allow hunters to select hunter choice numbers not only by hunt unit, as in the past, but by weapon type as well," said Patty Wagner, NDOW license office supervisor.

Great Western Show announces moves to LV

Great Western Show officials have announced that the Great Western Show, after a 31-year history in Los Angeles County, the last 22 at the Los Angeles County Fairgrounds in Pomona, is moving to Las Vegas.

The show, the largest antique and modern firearms, Western Americana collectibles, knives and swords, hunting equipment, and military memorabilia show in the world, has been providing opportunities for collectors throughout the country to come together to pursue their hobbies and socialize with other collectors.

The Great Western Show drew crowds averaging 40,000 people at each of the two shows held in Los Angeles County each year during the spring and the fall. After the County Fair itself, the Great Western Show was the most profitable event produced at the Fairgrounds, adding $600,000 annually to the Fair Association's bottom line and $8 million to the small businesses and workers in Pomona and surrounding communities.

"We are highly enthusiastic about this move and look forward to new relationships in the entertainment capital of the world," said Karl Amelang, President of Great Western Shows, Inc.

The Great Western Show will be held from Friday, April 28, through Sunday, April 30, in the Las Vegas Convention Center. Show hours will be from noon to 7 p.m. Friday; 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Saturday; and from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Sunday.

General admission is $10, with children under 12 and persons in authentic historic costumes or uniforms admitted free.

For more information, including information regarding opportunities or vendors or exhibitors in Nevada and surrounding areas, contact Great Western Shows, Inc., in Irvine, California, at (949) 261-5700, or on the internet at www.greatwesternshow.com.

SNWA receives 'world's largest' delivery

The Southern Nevada Water Authority (SNWA) received one of the world's largest deliveries March 29 at its Alfred Merritt Smith Water Treatment Facility, located in the backyard of the Las Vegas Valley.

There was no UPS or Federal Express truck involved delivering this package, however. The delivery was more unusual in size than your average package and required about 22 wheels fueled by pure diesel power to make its way through the area.

The mammoth semi-hauler toled the world's largest venturi meter to the treatment facility where the SNWA is constructing an ozone disinfection addition onto the existing treatment facility.

A venturi meter is a tube with precisely engineered dimensions that allows SNWA to measure the amount of water flowing into the facility for treatment. This particular venturi meter has an internal diameter of 15 feet at each end. The new venturi meter is being installed as part of the SNWA's project to add ozone disinfection to the treatment process.

Ozone disinfection is an innovative process of treating drinking water. The process acts by "bubbling" ozone gas through the water. As the gas passes through the water, it kills microorganisms, aids the filtration process, and improves the water's taste and odor, a SNWA spokesman said. Use of the gas offers municipalities increased disinfection abilities for water, eliminating organisms associated with health problems, the spokesman said. Ozonation treatment reduces the need for chlorine addition to the treatment process.

This was no ordinary overnight delivery, though. For the past two weeks the large instrument has made its way from eastern Canada, where it was specially designed by Primary Flow Signal, Inc. located in Rhode Island.

The device was built in Canada at an estimated cost of $650,000. The venturi made its way through Boulder City around noon March 29, head-

UNLOADING — A construction worker fastens large belts around the venturi meter as workers prepare to lift the 40-foot-long device from the flat-bed semi used to haul the instrument. The stainless steel meter is wrapped in a protective coating which will remain intact until it is installed later this year.

ing down the business route of U.S. Highway 95.

It was necessary to make the device so large because of the massive amount of Lake Mead water that will enter the treatment plant through the ozone addition. The new 15-foot diameter, 40 foot-long stainless steel venturi replaces the old 10-foot diameter venturi that has been operating at the plant since its inception in 1971. The new meter is big enough to drive a small truck through and is sized to measure flows of at least 600 million gallons per day.

The SNWA is a coalition of seven regional water and wastewater agencies responsible for developing the regional water system that brings treated drinking water from Lake Mead to the Las Vegas Valley. The Authority has several major projects planned and under construction which will increase the capacity and reliability of water delivery to residents throughout the valley.

Osteoporosis not just a woman's problem

Men — like women — can suffer broken or injured bones as a result of osteoporosis and can benefit from learning about this common malady, says a Stanford University endocrinologist.

"We think of osteoporosis as a disease of older women, but in fact, the National Osteoporosis Foundation says one in eight men over age 50 will suffer a fracture because of osteoporosis, the depletion of bone substance during aging," said Robert Marcus, MD, a Stanford professor of medicine.

"Men need to take steps to prevent osteoporosis or secure a diagnosis and then seek treatment for this condition," said

Marcus, who studies and treats men and women with osteoporosis at the Veterans Affairs Palo Alto Health Care System and directs the osteoporosis clinic at Stanford University Medical Center.

Marcus said men, especially those over age 50, should be alert to the direct and indirect signs of osteoporosis. "Low hormone levels, including estrogen, could be a possible cause of osteoporosis in some men," he says.

Anemia, fatigue and a decreased sex drive are possible indicators of low hormone levels, Marcus said. A more direct sign of osteoporosis is chronic back pain associated with muscle spasms. This can occur when back muscles are straining to make up for the stooped posture that can result from a spine fracture caused by a weakened bone.

If testing confirms osteoporosis, a prescription bone-strengthening drug may be in order. Doctors don't prescribe estrogen replacement therapy for men because of the unacceptable side effects and because it's not proven that estrogen will help reverse the effects of osteoporosis.

Marcus recommends that men — like women — start an osteoporosis prevention program early. Starting in their teenage years, men should get plenty of exercise and take in plenty of calcium. Marcus recommends about 1,000 to 1,500 milligrams of calcium a day — the equivalent to roughly four or five glasses of milk. Calcium supplements are an option for men who don't want to drink milk or eat other dairy products.

"Women are four times more likely to suffer from osteoporosis than men, because their bones are less dense to begin with. It's understandable that so much more attention has been paid to osteoporosis among women, which may be all the more reason for men to pay attention to this possibility before it sneaks up on them," Marcus said.

Lupus affects 2 million people in United States

Many people who have lived for years with a chronic exhaustion, joint aches and pains and sun sensitivity but have been treated as though they are hypochondriacs. Lupus is a chronic disease affecting 2 million people in the United States.

Because lupus is difficult to diagnose, many of them have been misdiagnosed or remain undiagnosed.

Lupus often masquerades as other conditions such as chronic fatigue syndrome, multiple sclerosis, mononucleosis, arthritis, anemia or even psychological problems. It is more prevalent than AIDS, multiple sclerosis, cystic fibrosis, cerebral palsy, and sickle cell anemia, combined. Lupus is not communicable, infectious, rare or cancerous.

Lupus primarily affects women, but men can develop the disease, and when they do, they are often made very ill by it.

Lupus is a chronic, autoimmune disease which causes inflammation of various parts of the body, especially skin, joints, blood and kidneys.

The immune system normally protects the body against viruses, bacteria and other foreign materials. In an autoimmune disease such as lupus, the immune system loses its ability to tell the difference between foreign substances and its own cells and tissues. The immune system then make antibodies directed against "self."

Although lupus ranges from mild to life-threatening, and thousands die with lupus each year, the majority of cases can be controlled with proper treatment. Early diagnosis and treatment can give two of every three lupus sufferers a near-normal life, but without treatment, quality and length of life will suffer.

While medical science has not yet developed a cure for lupus, there are many treatments which offer relief.

For more information about lupus, contact the Utah-Idaho Chapter of the Lupus Foundation of America at 1-800-657-6398 or write to Lupus Foundation, Utah-Idaho Chapter, 550 E. 24th St., Ste. 104, Ogden, Utah, 84401.

Guinn names Kirkland head of DMV

Gov. Kenny Guinn announced that he has named Washoe County Sheriff Richard Kirkland as Director of the Department of Motor Vehicles and Public Safety.

Kirkland, 54, will replace the current director, John Drew, effective May 31. "Richard Kirkland, through his organizational and management skills as well as his outstanding leadership abilities, has made the Washoe County Sheriff's Department one of the finest law enforcement agencies in the country," Guinn said. "I'm looking forward to him taking the helm at DMV and moving the agency forward for the benefit of all Nevadans."

Kirkland, a former Reno Chief of Police, was elected Washoe County Sheriff in 1995.

He has been a resident of Washoe County for 42 years and graduated with a Bachelor of Arts Degree in Management from Sierra Nevada College. Kirkland is a graduate of seven national law enforcement training institutes, including the FBI National Academy, and has lectured nationally on topics including community oriented policing.

"It's difficult for me to leave the Sheriff's Office because of all the accomplishments we've made, all the friendships and partnerships that have been forged, and because of my love for Washoe County," Kirkland said. "However, Governor Guinn has given me a tremendous opportunity to make a difference for our entire state and I'm looking forward to creating a Department of Motor Vehicles and Public Safety that will be a source of pride for all Nevadans."

Kirkland has already begun studying the issues facing DMV and formulating a plan to improve service. His goal is to have specific recommendations for short-term solutions within six weeks of beginning work as director, and recommendations for long-term solutions within 90 days.

Keelan receives Hawley Book award

UNLV poet Claudia Keelan has been named this year's recipient of the Beatrice Hawley Award for her latest book, "Utopic."

The award is given annually by Alice James Books for what it deems to be the best new book of poetry in the nation. The publishing house, which will issue the book in November, will sponsor a reading tour for Keelan in the spring of 2001. She also will receive a $1,000 award. "Utopic" is the third book of poetry for Keelan, a UNLV associate professor of English. Her second book, "The Secularist," was a finalist for both the Los Angeles Times and the PEN Center awards.

"Utopic is a book of poems written between Memphis, Las Vegas and Salt Lake City," Keelan said. "It's been my particular fate to live in cities which have, like it or not, utopian ideas of themselves."

leadership, customer service of Nevada," Kirkland said. "It is my goal to work with the Guinn administration to improve customer service rapidly and dramatically."

WHAT'S PLAYING

Miguelita's Flarumba presents La Vampira

Winchester Community Center, 3130 S. McLeod Dr., will present a performance by Miguelita's Flarumba Dance Troupe at 7:30 p.m. Friday, April 14.

Tickets, priced at $7 for general admission and $5 for seniors and children under 12, will be available for advance purchase or at the door.

Although the group has only been in existence since 1997, Flarumba has already established a unique style of its own.

Artistic director Michelle "Miguelita" Serratore Gibbons is committed not only to the preservation and presentation of yesteryear's flamenco, but to the inclusion and performance of today's modern styles as well.

For the Winchester performance Miguelita has created an original American Flamenco production, "La Vampira," which intertwines traditional flamenco and Spanish Classical melodies with traditional/modern choreography. Featured guitarist Don Juan will perform selections in a variety of styles, including the popular "Fusion" flamenco.

The ensemble will also perform "una juerga" (a gathering of flamencos), showcasing the various traditional flamenco melodies and dances that are popular even today.

Flarumba productions are designed not only to entertain, but to educate. Audiences are informed about various aspects of flamenco, including musical design, dance patterns, cultural references and costumes, before each work is presented.

The Winchester performance is sponsored by the Clark County Department of Parks and Recreation's Cultural Affairs Division. For more information, call 455-7340.

Broadway hit opens at CCSN

The Broadway hit musical, "Blood Brothers," directed by Douglas and Kay Baker, will open at the Community College of Southern Nevada on April 21.

Evening Performances will be at 8 p.m. April 21, 22, 28, 29 with two Sunday matinees at 2 p.m. April 23 and 30.

This stirring musical is the story of a woman, supporting a household of children, who surrenders one of her new-born twin sons to a childless woman she works for. The boys grow up streets apart and become best friends, never knowing they are really brothers. They play as boys, grow up to fall for the same girl and struggle to a bitter and fateful ending.

This English musical plays on the beliefs of superstition and the tragedy of separating twins. The music is rich with ballads and spirited musicality, it is a deeply moving story of love and life.

"Blood Brothers" will be staged in the Horn Theatre on the Cheyenne campus, 3200 E. Cheyenne Ave., one mile east of I-15 North. Tickets are $12.50 for adults and $10 for students and seniors, CCSN students with current I.D. are $5. For reservations, call 651-LIVE(5483).

For more information, call Douglas Baker, 651-4834.

The public is invited to view this flower, known as the Goddess of the Rainbow, which is easily grown in the desert.

Many seedlings hybridized by Iris Society members will be on display. They will be introduced by Stockton Gardens of California.

Flower judges Bryce Williamson and Abe Feuerstein will judge the iris. Awards for different categories will be presented.

LAST WORDS

DEAR DEBBIE

DEBORAH WHITE

Dear Debbie:
 Recently, my mother went into the hospital for surgery, and I couldn't believe how my husband behaved. He was totally selfish. Once she came home, I spent time there every day for three weeks doing her laundry and making her food until she got on her feet. My father is helpless when it comes to these things.
 My husband was outraged. He said I should have taught my "perfectly capable father" how to do the laundry and make simple meals, or they should have hired some help. In protest, my husband even refused to do the laundry, which is normally his job. I'm ready to divorce him over this. What could have prompted this behavior?
- Dutiful Daughter
 Dear D.D.:
 Your husband has some abandonment issues that this apparently touched off, big time. If he were that big of a jerk, you would have noticed it by now.
 Get thee to counseling because this will come up again when both sets of your parents are elderly. And, D.D., he's not entirely wrong. You should show dad how to do the laundry and make simple meals. It's grown-up time.

 Dear Debbie: I had a great roommate in the hospital when I had a baby two years ago. We stayed in touch, and it has developed into a great friendship.
 The problem is my twin sister who's still single. She is jealous of my friendship with "Lil." I admit I've ignored the problem because I thought it was childish, but it keeps getting worse. It's almost like she's a jealous lover.
 What can I do? I love my sister, but I want her off my back.
- Get a Life
 Dear Get a Life: Your friendship with "Lil" feels like rejection to your twin so, of course, she feels threatened. Your comparison to a love relationship isn't that far off base. She feels like she's in a triangle, and she's odd man out.
 Compartmentalize your friendship with "Lil." By that I mean put it in a separate box in your life. Don't integrate it into your family life, and don't discuss Lil with your twin.
 Reassure your sister that she is loved by spending one-on-one time with her and sharing your secrets as always. Maybe when she has her own family, she won't be so demanding.

HOROSCOPE

LINDA BLACK

Aries (March 21 - April 19). Money's a major theme. You might make some extra money simply by asking for a raise.
Taurus (April 20 - May 20). You're lucky, especially if you play by the rules. No problem, right? Travel but watch where you're going.
Gemini (May 21 - June 21). You may feel pensive and moody. Don't worry about money; get creative instead. Figure out how much you've got. Travel looks too complicated.
Cancer (June 22 - July 22). Friends and social groups are important. Take on a big project; you'll get a lot out of it. Discuss your plans with a partner. Figure out a way to get money.
Leo (July 23 - Aug. 22). If you can pass a big test, you can advance to the next level. Focus on your work, especially whatever you can do for other people. Get a partner to help. Decisions you make now will last, so take care.
Virgo (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22). Been thinking about going back to school? In Madrid? Maybe you can make it happen. Your vision should be clear soon. Plan the next several years. You could run into complications.
Libra (Sept. 23 - Oct. 23). You may notice an uncharacteristic fascination with funding. These would be excellent days to buy or sell land or household items. Discuss financial matters with your loved ones.

Scorpio (Oct. 24 - Nov. 21). Your partner is important in your life. Let him or her take the lead - and possibly even do the driving. You can get some things talked out and cleared up.
Sagittarius (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21). Find ways to take care of others and receive marvelous benefits, maybe even more money. You can find whatever you need close to home, so don't wander far.
Capricorn (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19). The coming week should be a lot of fun. Set it up that way on purpose. You're strong and decisive. Communicate your love and have tons of fun.
Aquarius (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18). This week completion is your theme, as well as home and family. It's a good time to put down roots. Contemplate your situation and figure out what you want to change.
Pisces (Feb. 19 - Mar. 20). Your friends can be helpful. You're in a massive learning phase, so ask them to teach you. Don't let rules and regulations slow you down too much.
 If You're Having a Birthday This Week: Travel could be your reward for a job well done. You're lucky in May if you stick to the routine. Reach out and make a friend far away.
Linda explains what's going on in greater detail at (900) 950-9000, for 99 cents per minute. To leave a message, call (888) 522-9533 for free.

Rees appointed associate provost for academic budget

Long-time Antarctic researcher Margaret (Peg) Rees has been named UNLV's new associate provost for academic budget.
 Rees, a professor in the geoscience department, joined the UNLV faculty in 1985.

 "Peg Rees brings to the position considerable experience in managing large grants and in facilities development that will give her a running start in dealing with these issues," Provost

Douglas P. Ferraro said.
 An active researcher, Rees conducted geologic field studies for eight seasons in Antarctica. She also has served on the advisory board for the National Science Foundation Polar Programs. Mt. Rees in Victoria Land, Antarctica, is named for her.

 Rees's research has taken her to six continents and has resulted in numerous scientific publications. She is a fellow of the Geological Society of America.

Help protect wildlife

As Clark County grows, wildlife is attracted to the water and food found in the city. While the city can be a dangerous place for wildlife there are things we can do to help protect wildlife in the city, according to the Urban Wildlife Coalition. Yards can be dangerous places for ducks to nest. Nesting ducks can also be a nuisance to homeowners in the spring, so discourage ducks from nesting in your yard by putting flags or streamers around the yard to scare them off.

Words of Wisdom

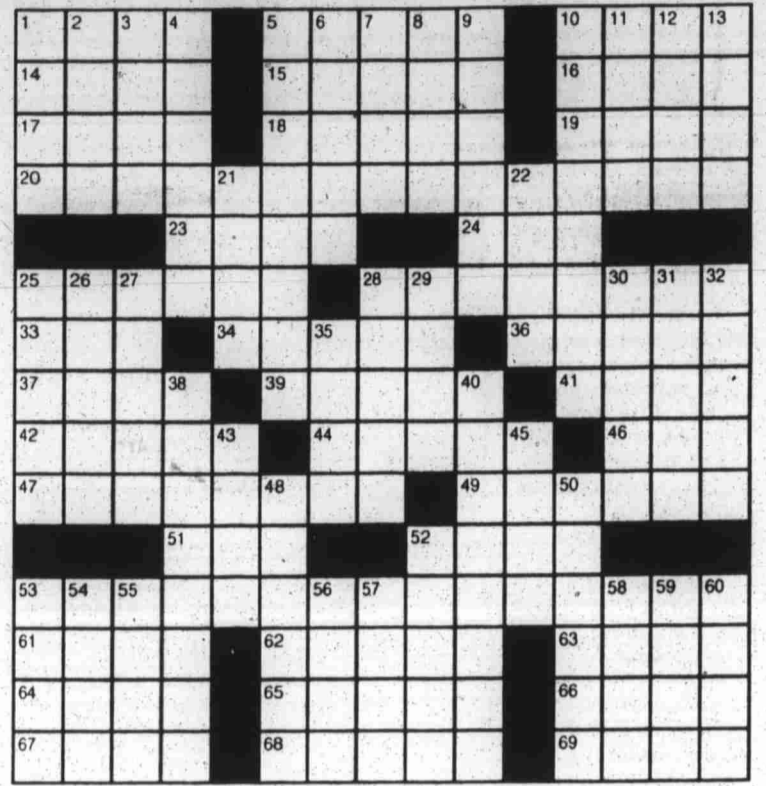

Look twice before you leap.

Men judge us by the success of our efforts. God looks at the efforts themselves.

A good heart will help you to a bonny face, my lad ... and a bad one will turn the bonniest into something worse than ugly.

But he that dares not grasp the thorn should never crave the rose.

MAGICWORD

HOW TO PLAY: Read the list of words. Look at the puzzle. You'll find these words in all directions—horizontally, vertically, diagonally, backwards. Draw a circle around each letter of a word found in the puzzle, then strike it off the list. Circling it will show a letter has been used but will leave it visible should it also form part of another word. Find the big words first. When letters of all listed words are circled, you'll have the given number of letters left over. They'll spell out your MAGICWORD.

Ask not what your Census can do for you. ...

"Ask not what your country can do for you, ask what you can do for your country."

I think this means that I should fill out the 38-page Census questionnaire my government sent me.

Actually, I considered leaving town and claiming burglars stole the form while I was gone. I decided against this when I happened to run across a Census report while I was researching my family tree.

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY

It was shocking. My great-great grandfather was caught red-handed or was it red-faced when the Census-taker came calling. Actually, at the time, he was slopping the hogs and was definitely not into treating the government agent to a cup of tea. At any rate, Mr. Census-man fixed Grandpa's wagon, so to speak — he left a detailed physical description of grandpa and the hogs for the ensuing family to peruse.

Now! I ask you to think about that. Are you or I, or any sober-thinking citizen willing to take our chances on not filling out a form and ending up with a cranky Census-taker at heaven knows what time, knocking on our front door? More to the point, do I want future generations to know exactly what I look like?

No! It's bad enough, I had to mention I have four bathrooms in my house. What is this telling my great-grandchildren? They'll no doubt yawn and say, "Looks like the old girl had weak kidneys."

Filling out this form is not easy. First of all, you have to know who you are. Don't laugh! In case you don't know, it is important whether you are considered person number one or say, number six in your household. This is all terribly confusing. Who do I want to be? My problem is that I start out being #1 and then decide #4 or #5 might be having more fun than I am.

You'll understand what I mean when I tell you I discovered #4 earns more money than I do and frequently travels outside the country for pleasure.

Here I am, old number one, with my four bathrooms and a pet parakeet. My only claim to fame is that I also own a refrigerator and I once visited the Liberace museum.

Let the Census Bureau make what they can out of that.

Museum Guild sets dinner
