History

COMPLETION OF HOOVER DAM marked an epoch in river control and reclamation. It changed the once unruly Colorado River from a natural menace into a national resource.

Along the course of the lower river, fertile soils abound, as today's developments in California's Imperial, Coachella, and Palo Verde Valleys and southwestern Arizona's Yuma and Gila Valleys amply testify. However, fertile soils without adequate water are of little value, and in these arid regions the only substitute for scanty rainfall is irrigation.

Early settlers sought to obtain water supplies by diversions from the river. But time and again irrigators saw their crops swept away by early season floods or, later in the year, watched their fields wither as the river's water dwindled under the burning sun.

However, the early settlers believed in the land. Although early efforts to protect the valleys from floods were not always successful, the idea of eventual conquest of the river persisted.

In order to prepare for orderly control and development of the river, representatives of the Federal Government and of the seven States within whose boundaries the Colorado River Basin lies met in 1922 at Santa Fe, N. Mex., and drafted the Colorado River Compact. The Compact, dividing the use of water between the upper and lower Basin States, was an important factor in the building of a large flood control and storage reservoir in aid of lower Basin projects.

In 1928, the Congress passed the Boulder Canyon Project Act, authorizing the Bureau of Reclamation to proceed with the Boulder Canyon project. The project's most spectacular feature, Hoover Dam—originally planned for a site in Boulder Canyon and known for over a decade as Boulder Dam—was begun in Black Canyon in 1931 and was dedicated in 1935. For the first time, man succeeded in harnessing the lower Colorado River. Commercial power production was started in 1936. On April 30, 1947, the Congress enacted Public Law 43, which gave the dam its present name.

Hoover Dam is the key to control of the lower Colorado River. By capturing in its reservoir, Lake Mead, the water that pours seaward from the high mountains in the upper part of its drainage basin, it protects areas below Black Canyon from floods and stores water for irrigation and for domestic and industrial use. A beautiful lake where all types of water sports flourish, Lake Mead is a magnet attracting millions of visitors annually. Hoover Dam, by controlling the lower river, has made feasible the building of additional dams downstream. Davis and Parker Dams produce electrical energy urgently needed in the expanding Southwest. Parker, Headgate Rock, and Imperial Dams divert water for irrigation and for domestic and industrial use. All of these dams contribute to the further regulation of the river and provide recreational and fish and wildlife benefits.

BOULDER CITY

Boulder City, Nev., first a construction camp for the workers who built Hoover Dam and later used as operating headquarters, today is a man-made oasis symbolic of Reclamation.

Located on a hill 7 miles southwest of the dam, the town has a population of about 4,000 persons. It is an attractive community with tree-lined streets, spacious parks, schools, churches, homes, and thriving business establishments.

Modern conveniences were planned for Boulder City from the very beginning. The town site was leveled and landscaped, and a water system which included a modern treatment plant was provided. Sewerage and lighting systems were installed. Houses were built for rental to those employed in construction of the dam.

Those who planned the town recognized that high desert temperatures posed a problem, and all permanent dwellings were designed to afford maximum comfort during the long summers. At present all buildings are artificially cooled. Winters are short and mild, and most homes are heated by electricity.

All land in the town is owned by the Government, and lots are leased to homeowners or those who have been granted business permits. Supervisory control of the city remains with the Bureau of Reclamation, and land rent is collected from lessees instead of real estate taxes. However, each lessee is required to pay leasehold taxes.

After the dam was completed, the city grew steadily into a permanent community. In 1951, the Secretary of the Interior ordered that steps be taken to separate the city from the Boulder Canyon project and bring about its eventual incorporation under the laws of Nevada. A city manager was appointed in the spring of 1952 and an advisory council was organized to assist in community affairs.

GENERAL REVIEW

Henderson is one of the younger cities of the modern, dynamic Southwest. The original townsite was created during 1942, in order to provide housing for the employees of the sprawling mile-long Magnesium Plant constructed by the Federal Government that same year. At the close of World War II, however, the Government inactivated the $100,000,000 plant and subsequently sold the entire project to the State of Nevada.

Recognizing the potential economic stability which heavy industry could contribute, the State publicized the availability of the extensive facilities and soon attracted several manufacturing firms which could adapt the magnesium-producing facilities to their own respective processes.

The community prospered and grew, and by 1950 it had a population of 5,419. Three years later, on June 8, 1953, it became an incorporated city of 14 square miles. The steady stable growth continued. Today, with an estimated population of nearly 13,000, Henderson, Nevada, is the Industrial Center of the State of Nevada.

LOCATION

Henderson is in the southern tip of Nevada, and is situated on level, desert terrain at an elevation of 1900 feet. It is on the U.S. and Nevada State Highways 93, 95 and 466, and is approximately midway between Boulder City and Las Vegas. The eleven miles to either city is all on modern, divided highways with an average of 12,000 cars passing through per day. Within one day's drive are several National Park areas: Grand Canyon, Death Valley, Yosemite National Park, Bryce Canyon and Zion Canyon. One of the world's greatest engineering examples, Hoover Dam, and the Lake Mead National Recreation Area are just a seven-minute drive from the city.

CLIMATE

The world-famous Southern Nevada climate is one of sunshine, extremely low humidity (normally below 10 percent), utopian summers with hot days and cool nights, and extremely mild winters with a daytime average temperature near 60 degrees. Clear blue skies predominate throughout the year. A perfect place in which to retire permanently or to spend the winters to be away from the snow. Henderson offers to you peace and quietness.

The average monthly mean temperature and precipitation since the establishment of final observation is as follows:
(McCarran Weather Bureau)

	Average Mean Temperature	Average Precipitation
January	44.2	.44
February	50.4	.58

RECREATION

The new Black Mountain Golf and Country Club golf course adds the new touch to Henderson and is open to the public. Green fees are nominal. The Club House features a cocktail lounge, dining room, and shaded swimming pool. The entire project is a lush oasis, its verdant links providing a striking contrast with majestic Black Mountain. Its proximity to other mountains, with their vari-colored rock strata, and its slightly higher elevation provide a panoramic view of the vast Las Vegas Valley painted in pale pastels.

Just a seven minute drive from Henderson is the largest artificial lake in the world, Lake Mead. Created by herculean Hoover Dam, the lake has over 550 miles of shoreline along which the National Park Service is continually constructing new recreational areas. Water sports enthusiasts among the more than half a million annual visitors indulge in year round fishing, swimming, boating and water skiing.

The combination of geographical location and climate permits the enjoyment of both summer and winter sports during the winter months. A distance of only forty-five miles separates the temperate winter climate of the desert from the snow covered slopes of Mt. Charleston, a South-west mecca for winter sports devotees.

We have a 2% sales and use tax imposed on the retailer but by statute and practice the tax is passed on to the buying customer.

FREEPORT LAW

Nevada, through its Freeport Laws, is as free as any port on the sea coast. In 1949 Nevada became the first "Freeport" state through abolishing personal property taxes on goods held in storage while passing from manufacturer to market.

INDUSTRY

BASIC MANAGEMENT INCORPORATED

Basic Management Incorporated is wholly owned by American Potash and Chemical Corporation, Titanium Metals Corporation of America, Stauffer Chemical Company, and United States Lime Products Division.

In order to purchase the Basic Magnesium Plant facilities from the State of Nevada in 1951 the above corporations had to assume the obligations of the State of Nevada to perform certain services relative to water, power, sewage, etc. In order to do this, these companies formed Basic Management Incorporated.

STAUFFER CHEMICAL CO.

Stauffer is one of the world's largest producers of chlorine. The Henderson installation produces chlorine, caustic and hydrogen. Chlorine is used for the manufacture of insecticide intermediates, chlorinated hydrocarbons and for the treatment of drinking water. Caustic soda, both liquid and solid, is used in the manufacture of soaps and detergents.

Trithion, one of the recent developments in the insecticide field, is also produced at the Henderson plant.
