Don't Be Lulled Into False Sense Of Security, Franklin Says

George E. Franklin, Jr., popular Las Vegas attorney and county commissioner, filed his declaration of candidacy for the office of United States senator, June 8 in the office of John Koontz, secretary of state in Carson City. Franklin issued the following statement, "My decision to file has not been engendered in haste, but is the result of serious consideration of Nevada's constantly diminishing status on the national level. "In sincerely believe that we, the people of Nevada, must now firmly acknowledge to the nation that we are more primarily devoted to the general welfare of all people than we are to the propagation of the politician institutions of any one individual. "I am firm in my faith that the voters of the State of Nevada Kingman connected for only 2 hits off Elsa Lee, the Henderson pitcher, one of them being a home run. Elsa, who seemed to have the Kingman girls hypnotized, struck out 10 batters and hit the only home run for her own team, to help put the game on ice.

A Plea --- Make Our Alleys Safe

Preston Austin, Townsite manager, is again appealing to the citizens of Henderson to help make our alleys safe for children. Numerous complaints have been made by people, in which they have told of various narrow escapes of children from injury by reckless drivers in the alleys. Austin explained that the original purpose of the alleys was that they were to be used only by maintenance trucks and the fire department in case of emergencies. Later, garage trucks were allowed to use the alleys for collection purposes, as the placing of refuse in the front yards for collection was unsightly and offensive. As people made changes in their patios and made car entrances to their homes through the alleys, they were permitted to use the alleys as an access to their homes — and they will still be allowed the use of the alleys, provided that they do not abuse the privilege. The speed limit in the alleys is 10 miles per hour and slower if there is danger of harming children. The sheriff's office is cooperating in the enforcement of the speed limit. If offenses continue, it may be advisable to close the alleys to all traffic but that authorized by the Townsite management.

MORRY'S STORY

By MORRY ZENOFF

Robert L. Wilson of our town is a handsome, blonde haired young man of considerable knowledge in the field of rocks, soil, water, and mechanics he can tell you what day it was two zillion years ago when Old Mother Earth hiccupped and split the Grand Canyon asunder.

He draws a paycheck as a geologist from Uncle Sam.

In checking his credentials afore consulting him on one of the big topics of the day—oil—I found he had been a student of Dr. Longwell's teachings. The eminent geologist from Yale rock-pounded these parts last summer.

And so, with charts in hand, maps of every part of Clark County, from the Flamingo to the California border, I called upon Mr. Robert L. for some unofficial but expert opinion on the oil that burns the lamps of China.

Being a leaseholder of a few hundred acres (at 50 cents per) and being on the receiving end of cries of fake oil boom, real oil boom, boom, boom, boom until my ears ache—I decided to consult, not a psychiatrist, not a mind-reader, not a fortune-teller, not a doctor—but a geologist.

And so—Mr. Wilson, if you please, and the ensuing questions, as asked by me, and answers, as answered by him:

Q—Do you think oil will be found in Southern Nevada?

A—No, I don't believe commercial quantities will be found in the southern part of the state.

Q—What is the reason for your statement?

A—You are probably aware that no producing wells have ever been found in any part of the area known to geologists as the Basin and Range province. The Basin and Range province embraces an area including the southwestern one-third of Arizona, southeastern California, the Mojave Desert Region, and almost the entire state of Nevada. It appears to me that the absence of oil in this extensive area is more than a coincidence.

Q—Could you tell us other reasons why no producing oil wells have been discovered in this area?

A—I believe there are two principal reasons for the lack of oil in this area. The first is that the area is intensely faulted, a condition which is conducive to destruction of large oil trapping structures. This condition may have provided the oil with paths of escape to the surface. The second reason is this region has been subjected to intense igneous or volcanic activity in relatively late geologic time, in fact, many millions of years later than when the possible oil carrying formations were deposited. As a general rule, oil is not found in areas where severe igneous activity has taken place, possibly due to the fact that the high temperature induced into the surrounding rocks drives off the volatile constituents of the oil.

Q—In case a person finds a good oil structure, what should he do about it?

A—That is a good question! My guess is the average person can't tell a good oil structure from first base, so he will need some first class advice. I would suggest contacting the American Association of Petroleum Geologists to obtain the name of a competent consulting geologist. Have him make an inspection of the site and give you his recommendations. If the site is no good, his fee will not be comparable to the average investment in leases. If the site is good, it can be sold to a major oil company without a great deal of trouble, or if you want to develop the site a number of drilling companies will drill a well for a percentage of the returns or a flat fee.

Q—Mr. Wilson, will you write some oil structure detail for my next week's edition—you've already made my head ache, my pocket book turn green and my dreams go into a tailspin. I can't take more—except, are you willing to back up your predictions that oil just ain't for Southern Nevada—are you willing to bet on it? (I figured I had him there with his book learn' stuff).

A—Bet? What's that, I'm not a betting man. I'm a geologist. (I had him all right—until he continued with) But I've got a hundred that says I'm right.

Q—Let's make it two bucks, son, and let Ray Collins hold it? (says I with a sickening feeling in the pit of my oil belt).

Conference May Solve Housing

James Farnsdale, executive director of Victory Village and Carver Park, left Friday night for Santa Barbara. Farnsdale will attend a regional conference of the National Association of Housing Officials.

High officials from Washington, who will attend the conference, are expected to shed some light on the problems which are to be met in the transferring of the Housing projects from the Federal Government to the County.

Wiley Files for Governor

Roland H. Wiley, of Las Vegas, prominent lawyer and former District Attorney of Clark County, in a statement today announcing his Democratic candidacy for governor, declared "we must have a progressive new leadership keyed to a consistent policy to create new opportunities for the people."

The gubernatorial candidate seeking the post now held by Vail Pittman, told Nevada voters he will be "a people's governor."

Assailing Pittman as a "do nothing" governor, Wiley asserted "we must all work for the development and expansion of the state's industrial, mining and ranching resources."

Declaring that he is a "free man and an independent-type candidate," Wiley said "we cannot accomplish the development that is required here by serving special and selfish interests."

Wiley accused the present administration of being a "well-financed political machine which seeks perpetual control," and added, "this type of government is not in the true Nevada tradition."

"A governor should lead, not ride the fence. He should not serve the interests of the selected few," he asserted.

Wiley said that the type of governor needed is one who is "unafraid to use the influence of his high office in the best interests of all the people."

"I am prepared and ready to be the people's governor," the Democratic gubernatorial candidate said, pointing out that he "is not aligned with any man or group of men, and not connected or identified with any clique or faction either in business or politics, professionally or socially."

"Because there are no strings attached to my candidacy," Wiley said he is confident that he will be able to "bring peace and harmony to the conflicting groups that often arise and even now exist." He said unhesitatingly, "it is time for a change."

Wiley concluded by saying that when he is elected, "there will be but one governor," and pledged "there would be no buck-passing and no broken promises."

Elks to Rededicate Original Flag Pole Memorial at Boulder Cemetery Sunday

Nearly two decades after its dedication of February 22, 1932 at the original Observation Point overlooking Hoover Dam, the Elks flag pole and dedicatory inscriptions will be re-dedicated at its present and permanent location in the Boulder City cemetery as a part of the Order's regular Flag Day ceremonies, Sunday evening, June 18 at 7:30, it was learned from a statement by Chester W. Widner, Exalted Ruler of the local lodge of Elks.

Originally dedicated as a part of the Elks ceremonies commemorating the Bi-Centennial of the birth of George Washington, the flag pole was presented to the Boulder Canyon Project by the various Elks lodges of the Colorado River Basin States. Participating in the original ceremonies were officers of Salt Lake City Lodge No. 35 and Las Vegas Lodge No. 1468. Also participating were representatives of the Bureau of Reclamation and of Six Companies, Inc., the contracting firm engaged in building the dam.

At the base of the pole were placed plaques bearing inscriptions from the Grand Exalted Ruler of the Order of Elks, from the President of the United States from the Elks Lodges of the basin states, and from the Bureau of Reclamation and the Six Companies.

The 50-foot pole was raised on a high promontory above the Colorado River at a point just back of the present location of the Southern California Edison Company's switchyard. At that early date there was no highway leading to the dam site, and only the first stages of actual construction of the huge barrier had been undertaken. The point seemed to be ideally suited for the memorial.

But, with the construction of the highway, which crosses the dam, the point became more or less isolated and definitely difficult of access. Furthermore, after the Bureau of Reclamation had erected the memorial at the Nevada abutment of the dam, which consists of the Winged Figures of the Republic and a flag pole, the original pole dedicated by the Order of Elks was never put to use. As a result, very few if any, of the millions who have visited the dam have been aware of its existence.

Recently officials of the Boulder Canyon project suggested to members of the local lodge that it might be advisable to move the pole from its original site to a spot more suitable and more accessible.

The Boulder City Lodge, which was instituted in 1945, and many of whose members were unaware of the existence of the memorial, were in accord. When various sites were considered, it was agreed that one of the most suitable was the Boulder City cemetery.

After concurrence had been secured from those concerned with the initial presentation, the local lodge offered the pole to the Boulder City Cemetery Association, and it was accepted.

The local lodge had the full cooperation of the Boulder Canyon Project. Its labor force removed the pole from its original location, and brought it to the cemetery. Here, members of the lodge took over, built the base, and erected the pole.

At its new location the base will carry the original inscription together with a suitable plaque inscribed with a dedicatory message. The latter to be presented by Boulder City Lodge.

Participating in the ceremonies will be the officers of the Las Vegas and Boulder City lodges, representatives of the Boy Scouts from troops in Henderson, Las Vegas, and Boulder City. The regular Elks Flag Day services will be held in the Elks home in Boulder City, and immediately thereafter the groups will go to the cemetery where brief ceremonies of presentation will be held.

New Gas Tanks Give Jet F-86 Longer Range

Development of new external gasoline tanks to give the Air Force F-86 Sabre jet fighter greater combat range and increased maneuverability was announced this week by North American Aviation.

Designed to fit the aerodynamic contour of the sleek Sabre, the "banana shaped" combat tanks cause less drag than the larger ferry tanks previously used, thereby stretching the airplane's range on less fuel.

The small tanks have little effect on performance, and are designed to be used throughout combat, keeping the Sabre supplied with additional fuel. The ferry tanks would have to be dropped during combat operations because of their restricting effect upon performance and maneuverability.

Although the Sabre, which holds the official world's speed record, and has averaged 710 m.p.h. on operational Air Force flights, can streak through the sky at a higher speed without external tanks, airflow over the top of the new tanks is so similar to the flow over the Sabre's swept-back wings that there is little reduction in top speed.

In steep dives the tanks have no limiting effect upon speed, whereas the ferry tanks caused considerable buffeting. It was this buffeting effect that led North American engineers to the development of the new smaller tanks.

The combat tanks are being installed on all F-86s now coming off North American assembly lines, and earlier Sabres will be fitted with the new tanks.

THE ALLEYS

A farewell potluck supper was given last Wednesday night for Mr. and Mrs. Fred Alley. The supper was held at the apartment lounge with the ladies of the Dorcas Circle as hostesses.

Mr. and Mrs. Alley are leaving soon for Idaho where they will make their home. Mr. Alley had served as moderator for the Community Church Council last year, and Mrs. Alley was vice-president of the Women's Association in the Community Church. The couple were presented a farewell gift.

on the more familiar methods of maintaining good teeth.

Sodium fluoride brings marked improvement to the teeth of the rising generation, but it won't do the whole job.

It would be a sorry thing if we let up on personal care of the teeth and waited for the day when there won't be any more toothaches.

Many large cities of the nation have begun adding a trace of sodium fluoride to the public water supply, to give all the children in town the benefits of this remarkable preventive.

Unless it contacts the teeth in early childhood, sodium fluoride is ineffective.

Hence the majority of people now living cannot be helped by sodium fluoride, and must depend

There is no need to worry — Lake Mead is not going dry. The very low water pressure between 10 and 10:45 a.m. Wednesday morning was due to the installation of a new meter. The plumbers were installing a new meter at the water treatment plant, hence the subsequent loss of water pressure.

HARRY MacKAY TALKS ABOUT HIS LOST WEEK-END

I am an easy going character, always willing to give the other guy the benefit of the doubt. I wouldn't push a baby duck in the water or pat a child on the cheek with a roll of dimes in my palm. I like animals and if a dog wants to argue, I always give him the first bite.

Last week I was positive that two and two make four, convinced that drawing to an inside straight is bad poker, and reasonably sure that honesty is the best policy. I firmly believed that accidents don't happen but are "made" to happen by accident "prone" people; which did not include me.

Today, I am not so sure. Maybe you CAN fill an inside straight. Maybe accidents DO happen. Maybe my Mother's son IS accident prone. In short, my dogmatic attitude has had a can tied to its tail.

The series of events which jolted me out of my mental pants, started several days ago; on a Wednesday evening, to be exact. At that time my effervescent wife presented me with a cracked rib. It was a playful gesture which had nothing to do with and in no way resembled, Eve returning Adam's compliment.

As a matter of fact it was one of my own personal ribs and I was all wrapped up in it when a beach brogan, containing Lucy's foot, sent me to the showers. I thought it was all in fun, a cracked rib is a minor item, and I might make a little money on my accident insurance. Time, however, proved me wrong in more than one detail.

I found that the only way I could turn over in bed without help, was to roll across and out one side, walk around and roll in on the other side. I used this system with good results until I happened to realize that every time I rolled, my good ribs were sitting ducks in the event Lucy regained her playful mood.

The alternative was to call in my next door neighbor and have him reverse me. He was big hearted about it and rolled me five times the second night. I was unable to get him on the phone the third night; understand he was called out of town.

I had, of course, received first aid when the accident happened. Treatment consisted of three strips of three inch adhesive tape placed in such a manner that my loose parts could not rattle around. It also gave me considerable support and helped correct a definite list to port.

This uplift job worked fine for a day or two and then it started to slip. By Friday evening it had completely lost its effectiveness. The Mills Brothers could have improved their rendition of "DRY BONES" by listening to me wail. Not only that but to a gang of infinitely small devils equipped with piteck forks and blow torches; seemed to be at work on the covered portion of my epidermis.

So I removed the adhesive tape for examination and the tape removed four square inches of me, or rather, my hide. CALAMITY. I had developed an allergy to adhesive tape and could not again use the stuff to prop up my busted rib. Furthermore I had no method of dressing my denuded umbilicus. I had to figure an angle and that quickly, because I was due at a beach party within the hour.

My mind cast furiously and finally got a strike. Why not try one of those strapless jobs? The idea looked good but a few telephone calls proved it nothing but a brain storm. It seems that the nearest thing in my size was what they called an "A" cup. I didn't need a tape measure to prove that the best I could do was a minus "AA" or as they say in the trade, "Completely uninteresting."

One sales person suggested that I buy the "A" size and maybe the surgical paste necessary to seal the wound would take up the slack. The store could supply equipment for rounding out the deal on the other side.

For a moment I thought she had the answer, but more sober reflection indicated that it might not be so good. Come Monday morning, the way some people talk, and I would be with twins. A few days later I discovered that some stores sell A/2 or half bras (The country sell be in worse shape than I realize). The information was of no benefit because by that time I was practically in the market for a mortuary sized laundry basket.

Time did not permit a reasonable or proper solution to the problem. All I could do was plaster my outraged abdomen with a thick layer of goo from an anonymous jar found in the medicine cabinet — ant paste, I found out later—and go to the party.

I wore a sport shirt, swim trunks and sneakers which provided comfort but very little support or protection as later events proved. (Next time I will wear a Sherman tank.) At this type of affair, someone always gets dunked in the water or two of particular being served in this case I received a box of ice tea inside the neck of my shirt and the bib of my shorts; a token of affection from — you guessed it — my wife.

I forgot my wound, my busted rib and my dignity which I didn't realize was showing at the time.

Throwing caution to the winds and my sneakers into high gear, I observed the ritual and pursued the gal around the tables and among the other guests with great rapidity.

Just as I was about to snag the slack in her swim suit, a rock turned under my right foot and I was forced to continue the race on my hands and knees . . . by my heart just wasn't in it. After about five yards more, I gently skidded to a dead stop, set the brakes and again received first aid. The doctor muttered something about "multiple contusions and bruises."

I understand that's Latin for "Beat all to hell". In my case it meant no skin on my right knee, right hand or the left side of my elbow. My big toe was horse de combat too, although I failed to realize it at the time. What burned me up was the fact that the Park Service people were unhappy over what I did to their beach. Nuts, they should have thanked me for plowing under some of the damn rocks.

But everyone enjoyed my interpretation of the ritual of the race and that night I STOOD IN BED. Wasn't anything else to be considered the condition I was in.

The next day, Saturday, it was suggested that plenty of sunshine might iron out some of the wrinkles and bumps in my clobbered chassis. After a sleepless night I was a sucker for anything so we went back to the beach.

Spending a very pleasant day lounging around on the sea place ramp, drinking stuff out of cans and shooting the breeze with four lists. An occasional dip in the lake cooled me off and the hot sun eased my aches and pains; for a while anyway.

I think it was shortly after I wore my wrist watch in the water, that some party over on the boat rock started shouting, "Fire, Fire, Fire." We looked around, but could see no smoke. Then someone yelled, "Get that seaplane out of there, your ramp is on fire."

The guy was wrong because it was not the ramp that was on fire. It was simply the remainder of my epidermis, which after five hours exposure to the sun had turned a beautiful fire engine red. The seaplane pilot got excited and pushed me overboard in an effort to extinguish me, but I continued to glow.

Cooler heads eventually took charge and after moving the seaplane out in the bay a few hundred yards, they landed me out of trouble and sent me home. I stayed in bed for two or three nights with a fire extinguisher handy in case my burn ointment reached the flash point. But nothing happened and I was able to stagger to work on Wednesday. Starting to peel now.

O yeah, I reported the busted rib to my accident insurance company. They were on the point of paying me a nice little sum, but one of their investigators started nosing around and discovered that Lucy had rocks in her shoes at the time the accident occurred. "That was no accident," they said.

SOFTBALL

The girls softball team and their coach, Hugh Moran, went to St. George, Utah last Friday, for a game with the girls' softball team there. The game was a close one all the way, and in the last inning the score was tied 11 to 11. Then Henderson girls made two runs in their half of the last inning and the Dixie girls made one run, making the final score 13 to 12 in favor of the Henderson girls. The girls made money for the trip by holding a raffle for a radio. Members of the team are: Margie Mainor, Betty Hostetler, Betty Byers, Ramona Church, Sharon Jeffrey, Darlyne Eaudman, Shirley Banks, Louise Roden, Patsy Deal, Betty Peisker, Gail Mann, Dorothy Morris, Joan McCain, Marlene Blakely, and Suzanne Schwartz. The girls had a good time and all wished that they could stay longer.

Expenditures for furniture, not including house furnishings or household appliances and equipment, are now at a rate above any previous year on record and amounted to about $2.8 billion in 1949, says the U. S. Department of Commerce.
