MORRY'STORY

A wonderful shot in the arm in building a bigger and even better Boulder City is being given by the firm known as Federal

The company is in the process of building 60 new modern colonial homes and stands ready to build up to 500 more if the demand for them is evident.

Building homes is good business but it is also a gamble and it entails much work, much capital before the result is realized.

The firm's local developer is big, handsome 34 year old Bert Nicholas, USC graduate, who one day heard of Boulder City's potentialities and came in to investigate. His parent company had built some 3800 homes in other cities and had bids to do many more from

But the soundness of our life here, the beauty of the city now, the solid high average payroll which made our citizens good credit risks-all added up to sell Bert when he came in to investigate.

He conferred with local government leaders and was encouraged to go ahead. There were obstacles-big ones-such as getting FHA to place a value on leased land. In Vegas, FHA would loan $1200 more than here because they didn't like the lease idea here.

Bert and his associates educated FHA authorities and won a valuation of $1000 valuation on any lease here. This means as low a down payment is possible here as any place in the nation. This means the valuation is yours to use whether you use the company's homes or any others. It's a precedent, a valuable one, these men have established.

The Benson-Hurst National Bank of New York, owned by Herbert Kronish and his father is bank-rolling our venture here along with Jules Kern and Nicholas. Kronish and Kern like the west. believe in its future and thus are investing in it. The investment here so far is a half million dollars and may be a million and a half more. They spent $11,000 just in ground work here to see if they could get clearance to build.

Thanks to the Moritz-Douglas-Boynton cooperation, they got

The white tailed jack is known locally by the erroneous name of Snowsho rabbit, grows to large size, is very edible, and is actually an excel lent game animal. The commis sion expressed the opinion that removal of protection would al ow for control in those areas where damage was occurring but population in other areas. It was pointed out that this action does not apply to the true Snowshoe rabbit, which occurs only in the western edge of the state and remains on the game list with a closed season. The White-tailed jackrabbit, in common with the true Snowshoe, turns white in winter time.

The effect of the order will be to remove all restrictions on the losed season, on the limit, and upon the manner of taking these nimals. Should their numbers be reduced to the level at which extensive damage does not occur their status as a game animal will be re-established, the commission said.

NEVADA POLITICS BY THE OBSERVER 'In Nevada State Journal'

Carran very long to designate a successor to R. L. Douglass, internal revenue collector - and thereby saved himself a lot of political grief. He submitted the name of E. P. Caffrey to the president and the treasury department and, since Caffrey now is in federal service, it will not take the T-men very long to check his fitness for the position. It is expected that the president will make the appointment and the senate will conform it without any trouble at There's considerable difference politically speaking, between Caffrey's appointment and what nappened when Douglass was named collector in 1933. Active in Democratic political circles, Dougcratic national committeeman at the 1932 convention in Las Vegas. George B. Thatcher was also a candidate. Senator McCarran had announced his candidacy for the United States senate and was endeavoring to get the nomination without opposition. Senator Key Pittman, in the event the Democrats won nationally, would be the chief patronage dispenser succeeding Senator Tasker L. Oddie, Republican.

Douglass backed away from the national committee ambition in favor of Thatcher with the plied promise from Senator Pittman that he would be named internal revenue collector in the Democratic convention recommended Thatcher for national and at the same time went on place. record in favor of the nomination of Franklin D, Roosevelt for president. This was done at the request of James A. Farley, then national head of the Democartic party.

but Douglass got the job and will have held it for nearly 18 years An abortive effort was made to Bunker, but Bunker, not wise to the ways of Washington, failed to grease the wheels before he announced that Douglass was on his way out. He had even failed to tell Senator McCarran what he had on his mind and when McCarran, who has no particular political love for Douglass, heard about Bunker's offorts he blew up and Douglass flew to Washington Everything was straightened out quickly and in the next Demorratic primary James G. Scrugham, then representative in congress, was urged by Douglass George B. Thatcher, William Woodburn and others to take a crack at the senatorship. He did and dumped Bunker in the Democratic primary and went on to win the senatorship. Bunker, two years later, was elected to the house of Representatives and in 1946 won the Democratic nomination for United States senator He was defeated by Senator George Malone, Republican, and it's a cinch that general election that Bunker's effort to remove Douglass did not help him any. That and the fact that he opposed Senator E. P. Carville, even though Carville, when governor, went way out on a limb to appoint Bunker United States senator.

One of the strange things in the whole picture was the supevent the Democrats won. The port accorded Bunker in the primary election of 1946 by the Mc-Carran forces, although McCar-ran had not approved the ap-Carran for United States senator pointment of Bunker in the first
