LAS VEGAS AND NORTH LAS VEGAS

With a population of approximately 50,000 permanent residents, Las Vegas is one of the fastest growing communities in the United States.

Last year more than 12,000,000 tourists visited Las Vegas and the surrounding recreational area, taking advantage of the ideal climate, top-flight entertainment, 24-hour activity and smart shopping centers.

Recreational facilities, schools, churches, day and night nurseries, complete shopping centers, modern hotels, more than 250 motels, famous Fremont Street and the fabulous resort hotels are all within a ten mile area. Exceptionally low rates and moderate prices make Las Vegas the west's favorite vacationland.

Also contributing to the basic economy of Las Vegas are the B.M.I. plant at Henderson, Nellis Air Force Base and other military installations, Manganese Inc., and many other industrial plants. An ever increasing building program is unsurpassed by any other community of its size in the United States.

Greater Las Vegas is what it is today because of the cooperative drive on the part of far sighted business and civic leaders who constantly look to the future and who have unwavering faith in their community.

HISTORY OF LAS VEGAS (Meaning Las Vegas - "The Meadows")

Las Vegas, county seat of Clark County and distributing center for a very large but thinly populated mining and ranching country, it is also developing into one of the chief travel and recreational centers of the Southwest. In part this new role is a matter of accident, the result of a key position in an area with widely varying natural attractions plus the man-made wonder Boulder Dam. A sound and far-sighted policy, however, has taken advantage of national interest in the Dam to make the city and the area around it attractive enough to bring visitors back repeatedly. Attractive public buildings and houses are under construction all over town, the rows of catalpas and of poplars planted during the early days of the town, are being protected and lengthened.

The natural meadows and the springs on the Old Spanish Trail, which curved north from Santa Fe and west around the Colorado River to Southern California, were known soon after 1776, when the Escalante party made the first attempt to establish a trail between Santa Fe, New Mexico, and the missions of California, to promote trade in donkeys and mules. Although this expedition advanced no farther than the valleys of central Utah and apparently returned to Santa Fe without traversing the Las Vegas area, others later extended the route they had started to explore. By 1830 caravans of traders were using the trail regularly and the big springs and meadows of the Las Vegas valley were a welcome camping place on this circuitous desert route. Whether the old mine workings found in the area south of Las Vegas (particularly Eldorado Canyon) belong to the Spanish or Mexican periods is unknown. Possibly they predate the Escalante expedition.

Captain John C. Fremont in reporting his visit here in 1844 wrote of "a camping ground called Las Vegas . . . two narrow streams of water, four or five feet deep, gush suddenly, with a quick current, from two singularly large springs . . . the taste of the water is good but rather too warm to be agreeable."

Jefferson Hunt, sent late in 1847 from Salt Lake by the Church of the Latter Day Saints to obtain seed and foodstuffs in California, camped at this spot and reported favorably on it when he returned. Soon the springs were a stopping-place for people traveling from Salt Lake City to California by the southern route.

The first American occupation of Las Vegas came in 1855, when William Bringham of the City of Great Salt Lake, arrived with a band of 30 young men detailed by Brigham Young, "to go to Las Vegas, build a fort there to protect immigrants and the United States mail from the Indians, and to teach the latter how to raise corn, wheat, potatoes, squash, and melons.

The settlers cleared the mesquite away; built an adobe stockade 14 feet high and 150 feet long; hauled logs from the Charleston Mountains to the west; built cabins, fences, a dam and bridges; and planted crops. The enclosure was referred to as "The Fort." Some of the orchards and vineyards started then, still bear. On January 10, 1856, a post office was opened and named Bringham for the president of the mission.

Families followed the men and a school was built inside the fort. Meetings were also held in this building. The Mormon gospel was preached with typical zeal, and it is recorded that "many Indians were converted and baptized."

The history of Las Vegas Mission records one of the few instances in which mining was practiced by Mormon pioneers. When the existence of extensive lead deposits in a district some 18 miles southwest of the colony was reported to Brigham Young, he at once dispatched Nathaniel V. Jones to the area, investing Jones with authority to call the settlers and missionaries to his aid in "mining and manufacturing" lead. The first ore was smelted in December 1856, and 9,000 were run off, but the metal was found to be "very hard to smelt" as Jones reported. He also said that attempts to cast the metal in bullet molds had given poor results.

On January 28, 1857, the mines were abandoned, though it was not until 1861 that the reason for the poor luck in bullet-making was brought to light. In that year miners more familiar with their business discovered that the "lead" of the Mormons was a galena ore carrying silver.

But it was not this bullet-making fiasco alone that brought an end to the Las Vegas colony. Despite conscientious attempts to teach the Indians the rudiments of agriculture and the presentation of generous gifts, the Paiutes could never quite overcome their natural habit of helping themselves to whatever unguarded livestock, provisions, or crops they saw. The venture simply was not profitable; and with trouble from the Federal government reaching a peak, Young called for a concentration of Mormons near the Great Salt Lake. On February 23, 1857, the settlers were "released from the mission." To those few who remained to harvest the crop a final blow came when the "remnants of Israel," as the Indians were called, descended and carried away the entire crop.

Though Las Vegas was not entirely abandoned, the cabins and the stockades the Mormons built remained. Carriers of the overland mail were glad to break their trips at the protected spot near Vegas Springs.

Following the Mormon abdication, O. D. Gass acquired the land and water rights. During the Civil War, three companies of cavalry and one company of infantry were stationed by the spring for the protection of the travel route to southern California and the post was called Fort Baker. Mining began in the surrounding regions and Eldorado Canyon was an important gold and silver producer.

About the time Gass acquired the ranch — and until 1869 — it was the Territory of Arizona and Gass sat in the legislature of that territory. He operated the ranch with Indian labor. One day a recalcitrant native was killed and Gass hastily fled with his family to Barstow. When post riders and other travelers brought no reports of an uprising or of signs of devastation, Gass made a hesitant reconnaissance.

Approaching the old stockade he was amazed to find water running in the irrigation ditches and his place as well cared for as if he had never left it. Looking cautiously around he discovered Qua-ech, a wily old Indian who had long lingered about but never done any work; the Paiute was sitting on top of a hay-mow directing operations in his usual costume — a bright red blanket and a high hat some miners had given to him. Inclining his head gravely he gave the long-absent owner a full account of affairs on the estate, acting as though he had been the duly appointed superintendent. Gass' mystification apparently showed in his face because after the report had been given, Qua-ech, with twinkling eyes, said abruptly, "Why you no ask squaw how much for brave?" It had not occurred to Gass that his dilemma might be settled in this simple manner. The squaw felt her strong position and bargained long but the affair was eventually settled. The price for peace was $18.

In 1822 the range and water rights were acquired by Archibald Stewart, forty-niner who had his stake in Angel's Camp and later established a cattle ranch about 100 miles north of Las Vegas. Stewart's wife was induced to come to Las Vegas with her small children on what was to have been a visit lasting a single season, but this became the home of the delicately bred young woman until her death in 1929. Three other children were born in the following years, two of them in her mother's home in California. For many years neighbors were far and the children had to be taught at home; eventually they were sent to school in California. Under such conditions social life developed along unusual lines; a single dance meant a party lasting nearly a week. News and mail came in by pony rider. Chief diversions of the flock of children were horseback-riding and hunting. Stewart was killed during a quarrel by the owner of the Kyle Ranch — now the Taylor Ranch. When word was brought to Mrs. Stewart that her husband was dead she immediately set off on horseback to bring back his body. Lacking wood, she had to take the doors of her house to make a coffin. Later Mrs. Stewart married again; but in the meantime she had increased her holdings and ranching activities.

In 1903 when the San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake Railroad was projected, the ranch was bought for a townsite and division point by W. A. Clark, former Senator from Montana, acting for the company. Before the railroad's townsite was opened another townsite beside it — now Old Town — was acquired by J. T. McWilliams. People flooded in, in part because of the boom in the newly discovered Bullfrog and Greenwater districts. Known as McWilliamstown then, the camp was prosperous and busy by reason of the immense freighting business to the mines.

On May 15, 1905, Las Vegas was really born. Around a platform erected under a spreading mesquite tree near the present freight depot, nearly 3,000 people gathered to hear C. O. Wittemore, representing the railroad company, explain guarantees of future development contained in the bills of sales for lots. These included a water system that would place water under pressure on every lot, the improvement of all streets, the building of a handsome depot and other railroad structures, and, finally the erection of railroad shops to employ several hundred men. The sale of lots lasted two days, and during that time 1,200 were sold at a total price of $265,000. The promises of the company were taken seriously — and they were all fulfilled.

On the morning of the 17th, tents and lumber and other building materials were being enthusiastically hauled to the site. Because the streets had not yet been cleared, eager men and women had to search among the greasewood for the stakes marking their lot corners. Before darkness came the town had appeared — a grotesque assortment of buildings in all possible stages of completion.

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT LAS VEGAS

CITY GOVERNMENT: Las Vegas is governed by a mayor and a board of three city commissioners. They hire a city manager and an assistant city manager. All city employees are civil service, including the police department and fire department. The police department consists of 75 officers and a chief of police. There are 3 fire stations, 54 firemen and 8 trucks.

COUNTY GOVERNMENT: The County of Clark is governed by a three-man board of county commissioners.

CLIMATE AND LOCATION: The Las Vegas Valley is semi-arid, with a typical desert climate. The average annual rainfall is less than 4 inches. The Valley is surrounded by hills and mountains, but has flood drainage to the Colorado River. The Valley is composed of alluvial fill, including alluvial gravels, sand, silt, clay and caliche. Near surface water occurs over most of the valley, ranging from zero to 50 feet below the surface.

Las Vegas is located near the center of a broad, level valley almost surrounded by mountains. The Valley is about 25 miles wide in an east-west direction and about 30 miles long in a north-west, south-east direction. The land is desert, vegetation is sage and mesquite, except that the City itself has a plentiful supply of trees. Origin of the large underground water supply has not been determined. The highest mountain is Mt. Charleston, elevation 11,910 feet. The nearest body of water is Lake Mead, 20 miles east. To the west lies the Spring Mountain Range.

Summer temperatures are high but not uncomfortable, due to the extreme dryness of the air. All buildings are equipped with air conditioners, mostly the evaporative type.

Las Vegas is geographically located as follows:

In tents were a post office, saloons, and gambling houses, as well as hotels and a bank. The hotel was a huge canvas structure 140 feet long, with large additions for dining room and kitchen. Until the following winter this great ungainly tent was the center of all social activities.

But within 30 days Las Vegas was more than a tent town. Stores and houses were taking shape everywhere. During the summer, the Las Vegas Land & Water Company, a subsidiary of the railroad company, graded and oiled 10 miles of city streets, built concrete or wooden curbs throughout the town, and brought water to every lot.

With the completion of the railroad from Salt Lake in June 1905, and the construction of the Las Vegas & Tonopah Railroad in 1906, Las Vegas rode into commercial and political importance. In 1908 more substantial buildings were erected; and to protect them a volunteer fire department was organized. In 1909 the town became the seat of the newly organized Clark County.

In January 1910, however, a phenomenal rainstorm wrecked 110 miles of railroad track in the Muddy Valley Wash south of Caliente, and more than five months elapsed before train service was resumed.

But the town revived; in 1911 the legislature passed a bill creating the City of Las Vegas. In 1925, after the water from Las Vegas Springs was found to be inadequate for city needs, an artesian well was sunk that brought up three and a half million gallons every 24 hours. In 1937, after the Boulder Dam construction boom, the city, looking forward to continued growth, sank another, which produced a larger flow than the first. During dam construction days the town was the scene of much shipping and had a greatly augmented population. Few people, however, realized the possibilities of the city as a resort center.

CONSTRUCTION COSTS: While no exact figures are available, it is generally believed among the builders of the area that construction costs are comparable in Nevada to any other inland area.

LAND COSTS: Industrial land within the city limits of Las Vegas which has all utilities available has recently been selling for 40 cents to $1 per square foot, depending upon quantity and location as to truck routes and railroad sidings. Railroad frontage in the county available to power and roads, runs from $2500 to $5,000 per acre.

TRANSPORTATION: Las Vegas is served by Union Pacific Railroad, Greyhound Bus Lines, U. S. Highways 91, 95, 93, 466. There are 28 flights daily by major airlines — Trans World Airlines, United, Western and Bonanza. For the first four months of 1954, 44,228 passengers deplaned at McCarren Field, Las Vegas, and 46,991 enplaned at McCarren Field. In addition, the City enjoys good service by several established national motor carriers. A road is in the final stages of completion that will link Las Vegas to Pahrump Valley, Sheshone, California, Bakersfield, California and San Luis Obispo, California.

NATURAL GAS: A 113 mile pipe line to bring natural gas from the El Paso Natural Company's line near Needles to Henderson and Las Vegas is now completed at a cost of 2½ million dollars. This 10-inch line is expected to alleviate potential power shortage and to permit unlimited industrial development.

WATER: The City of Las Vegas and surrounding territory has depended exclusively upon the underlying artesian basin for water since the community was first established. However, since 1945, the population has grown so rapidly that in 1948 the voters of the Las Vegas Valley established the Las Vegas Valley Water District which has an area of 196,480 acres. The Las Vegas Valley Water District was formed for the purpose of providing expanded service including additional supply of water from Lake Mead. On September 30, 1953, a bond issue of $8,700,000 was voted to accomplish this expansion and the supplemental water supply from Lake Mead will be available in the summer of 1955.

HOUSING: Rental housing is rather scarce in Las Vegas, due to the rapid growth of population. For rentals, you might contact the Leverton Realty Agency, 305 Ogden Street, or the Nevada Realty Company, 411 Ogden Street. The newspapers are always a good source for rentals. There are excellent motel accommodations that might serve as temporary quarters until permanent housing is found. There are many fine homes for sale. These are handled by local realty companies. Rent for one-bedroom, furnished dwelling runs about $100. Food costs are comparable to any town of this size in the area.

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT LAS VEGAS (Continued)

EMPLOYMENT: Inasmuch as the Chamber of Commerce does not maintain listings of available job openings, it is suggested that inquiries pertaining to employment be directed to the Nevada Employment Service, 2nd and Stewart Streets, or the Las Vegas Employment and Personnel Service, 319 Fremont Street. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES: Due to the rapid growth of Las Vegas, there exist many fine business opportunities. We will be glad to answer any queries regarding the specific advantages of Las Vegas as a location, if we are advised as to the type of business to be engaged in. License information can be obtained by writing to the City Clerk at the City Hall. Sales of businesses are generally handled by the real estate brokers.

TAXES: Nevada is known as the "haven for the tax weary." For many years it has had no income tax, no inheritance tax, no death transfer tax, no gift tax, no sales tax and no tax on intangibles. Property tax in Nevada is limited to a total of $5.00 per $100 of assessed valuation, based on 33½% of bonafide present values.

SCHOOLS: The school system in Las Vegas is considered an excellent one. It offers one year of kindergarten for five year olds, eight years of elementary school, and four of high school where the curriculum is selected to prepare the student for a higher education as well as offering many practical courses to help prepare him to earn a living. A large-scale building program is now being carried out to take care of a rapidly increasing enrollment. There is one Catholic elementary school — St. Joseph's. They are in the process of building another elementary school and a high school that should be ready in the fall of 1954. The Nevada College of Commerce is at 131 North 3rd Street.

RECREATION: Besides the activities of many civic, social and service organizations, this area offers splendid facilities for horse back riding, swimming, golf and excellent bass and trout fishing on Lake Mead and Lake Mojave. The City Recreation Department carries out an active program for young people, and the Wildcat Lair, the teen-age club, offers the young people many pleasant activities. Accessible for short trips are such famous scenic wonders as the Grand Canyon, Bryce & Zion Parks, Death Valley and Hoover Dam and Lake Mead.

MISCELLANEOUS: There are approximately 30 church groups, representing almost every faith. There are two hospitals, Southern Nevada Memorial Hospital, 1800 W. Charleston and Las Vegas Hospital, 201 North 8th. The area is served by 2 daily newspapers, the Las Vegas Review Journal at $1.50 per month and the Las Vegas Sun at $1.25 per month. Four radio stations carrying all major networks and one television station. Child care centers: Dream Boat Nursery, 401 Ogden and Las Vegas Nursery, 114 Mesquite, Cinderella Nursery, 212 South 5th St. Southern Nevada Power Co., 109 So. 2nd St., Southern Nevada Telephone, 515 So. 5th St., First National Bank of Nevada, 115 So. 3rd St., Bank of Nevada, 200

So. 5th St., Bank of Las Vegas, 1200 E. Charleston. City Hall is located at 5th and Stewart St., Nellis Air Force Base is 9 miles north on Highway No. 91. Court House is located at 2nd & Carson Streets. HOOVER (BOULDER) DAM: Open to visitors every day of the year. Conducted tours of the Power Plant and Penstock Tunnel are continuous from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. The tour takes 45 minutes and it is recommended that visitors view the motion pictures showing the construction of the Dam. These pictures are shown continuously at the Visitor's Service Bureau, Boulder City.

LAKE MEAD — BOATING: From Boulder Beach Boat Landing below Boulder City on Lake Mead, excursion trips are made daily to the face of the Dam at 9:00 and 10:30 a.m., 12:00, 1:45, 3:00 and 4:30 p.m. Boats of all kinds are available for fishing and scenic charter trips.

FISHING: Bass and trout fishing in Lake Mead and the Colorado River are excellent the year around. Large mouth Black Bass ranging in weight from 2½ to 8 pounds are regularly caught. Trout fishing in the Colorado River below the Dam is exceptionally good. The river can be reached from Willow Beach, 15 miles downstream from the Dam on the Arizona side, or at Eldorado Canyon, which is reached via U. S. Highway No. 95 south toward Searchlight; then State Highway No. 60 to the river. Fishing in Lake Mead and the Colorado River is permitted the year around. The cost of a non-resident license is $7.00 per year; $5.00 for a 5-day period. These licenses are available at any sporting goods store. Camping is permitted at the lake and also at the river. Swimming in Lake Mead is delightful from May to October at Boulder Beach and Vegas Wash in placid fresh water. Safe swimming areas are provided with life guards on duty.

CHARLESTON MOUNTAINS: Mount Charleston Lodge Resort (Kyle Canyon — elevation 7,500 feet) is 35 miles northwest of Las Vegas on paved U. S. Highway No. 95. The Forest Service maintains public camping grounds with stoves, tables, fuel, water and sanitary facilities in both Kyle and Lee Canyons. Elevation of Charleston Peak is 11,910. The peak is reached by marked trail from near the Lodge and camp grounds. This trail rises 4,000 feet in 3 miles and passes through the largest grove of foxtail pine in the world. Lee's Canyon, just below Charleston Peak (elevation 8,300 feet) is 43 miles from Las Vegas off Highway No. 95. Weather is delightfully cool all summer. During the winter months snow sports may be enjoyed in both Kyle and Lee Canyons with meals and lodgings available at Mt. Charleston Ski Bar Ranch in Kyle Canyon.

VALLEY OF FIRE: The Valley of Fire is one of the most scenic and colorful sights in the Southwest. It is within a few minutes drive of Overton. Turn east off U. S. Highway No. 91 at Glendale through Overton, center of the melon district, to the Lake Shore, or proceed from the same road south and west to the vivid Valley of Fire, and Campground, Atlanl Rock, on which there are many picture writings, and the petrified trees. Take a desert road of 13 miles out of the Valley to U. S. Highway No. 91 at Crystal (filling station) or the return trip may be made by retracing the Overton route.

BOULDER CITY

Boulder City's tree-lined streets, its green lawns and blossoming flowers, its many acres of parks and its modern homes make it the "Paradise of the Desert."

This desert blossom which Uncle Sam planted as a home for the families of construction and maintenance workers on Boulder Dam has become one of the most desirable cities in the state.

Ideally located on the southern crest of a long, sloping highland to catch the prevailing afternoon breezes, Boulder City looks down on the world's greatest man-made reservoir, Lake Mead, behind the world's highest river barrier, Boulder Dam.

It has grown to be one of the nation's greatest tourist meccas. It is the center of a playground which includes fishing, water sports, boating and sightseeing. Yet it is a delightful residential town free from the distractions common elsewhere.

More than 500 fine accommodations are available in its modern hotels and motels.

There are trapshooting, rifle and pistol ranges, hiking trails, ghost towns, ancient Indian habitations and numerous scenic wonder spots.

The finest schools in the country are found here, with a new junior-senior high school plant. Classes are not crowded and there are no half-day sessions. There are 11 churches, a theatre, a bowling alley and all prominent civic and social organizations.

Free movies of the construction of the dam run continuously, guided tours through Boulder Dam are conducted daily, an exhibit building at the dam shows the entire Colorado River basin in relief.

HENDERSON

Men without vision could have stood on the sun-baked, greasewood-covered slopes and seen nothing but dry-arid desolation, but engineers are not ordinary men. To an engineer the slope on which the huge, sprawling Basic Magnesium plant was to be erected represented a site with proper drainage, proper wind direction and proper qualifications for a $147,000,000 investment.

At the time the plant was constructed, the world was in turmoil. The greatest war in history was being fought over-seas. The United States had just entered the war, and the Nazi war machine was running rough shod over country after country. Realizing that there was a desperate need for magnesium for "block busters," England and the United States joined hands to erect a plant which would produce the materials for such bombs. Such a plant had never been built in this country, but England knew how and we knew how to put it into mass production.

When the plant produced for the first time in 1942 it set a record which still stands for such plants. It not only produced but it over-produced with the result that magnesium was stock-piled and the plant was used for small arms.

This record was set by approximately 15,000 employes working 24-hour shifts. A town was constructed to house the employees; 1,000 homes and 58 apartments. Still more housing was needed, and on the other side of the Boulder highway more apartments were built. Even then men were living in tents up and down the highway or in trailer parks laid out near the plant. Men and women poured into the townsite, named Henderson, from all parts of the country. Schools were built for their children; clubs were organized and community projects worked out. Without a city government councils were organized to bring the community problems to those in charge of the plant and townsite.

Liking the climate and the freedom of the state of Nevada, many workers stayed on even after the plant was closed down and it looked for a while as if the town and plant would be sold to the highest bidder.

When the Stauffer Chemical Company leased the chlorine section of the plant, the people took hope. When the Western Electrochemical Company leased other units at the plant, the people tightened their belts and decided to see the thing through. Maybe there was a chance of saving the plant and the town, and they could settle here and make their homes here.

The people were right. Although the years in between were slim, work was scarce, they hung on and were rewarded when the State of Nevada stepped in and purchased the plant from the federal government in 1948 and turned it over to the Colorado River Commission to either sell or lease. By the end of 1950 all space had been leased, all power contracts drawn and by 1952 the plant and townsite were both sold to private industry and to the people. In 1953 Henderson became incorporated and began facing and meeting its problems with gusto.

The future of Henderson is not built on today's economy but on 50 years from now. Planners at the various plants are looking ahead to a future far beyond the vision of the average man or woman.

What is in store for Henderson is a steady growth based on the firm economy of industrial plants. Industry is something new to Southern Nevada and because of this there have been misunderstandings. Industry moves slowly, makes long-range plans and studies carefully every phase of an operation before it steps in and goes to work.

Plans are still being made by the various companies at the huge Basic Magnesium plant. Power must be found to meet the demands of the companies. This is being done by the Colorado River Commission. Raw materials must be located, markets must be found for products, and profit and loss figures studied.

Although the plant is now devoted to production for defense, its products can serve both civilian and defense economies. The work of the companies is geared to switch from one type of production to another. Chlorine, caustic soda, insecticides, weed killers, lime, titanium, manganese, to name a few of the products produced, are all valuable in peacetime as well as wartime.

Because the products of the companies are useful in both peacetime and wartime, there was no wholesale disruption when peace came. For this reason the economy of Henderson stands on firm ground. The growth of the plant and town will be a steady growth built on need and as a result there will be no boom town atmosphere about the place.

The impact of industry upon Southern Nevada is already being felt, not only in increased tax revenue, but in the influx of new people into the state. These people are coming in with new ideas and new ideas mean growth no matter what the community or its location. These ideas will be felt throughout the state.

The existence of a new town having a population of nearly 12,000 is important to a state as scarcely populated as Nevada. The increase in the number of young men and women is extremely important to the state because they are the ones who will carry out the plans of the future.

Opportunities of all kinds are available at Henderson for men and women with vision. Here is a new town, not yet settled in its ways. Here is opportunity to pioneer and bring forth a model community which could rank with the best in this country for its size. The next few years in Henderson are important because it will be during this period that the future of the town will be laid. Only people with vision and the will to see things through can do the job. It will not be easy, but it is a chance few persons have an opportunity to participate in today.

The path is clear — an industrial community with large payrolls, large number of employes, for years to come.

CLARK COUNTY

AGRICULTURE IN CLARK COUNTY

By JOHN M. FENLEY

Clark County Agricultural Extension Agent

Picture if you will, a train of 350 refrigerator cars filled with agricultural produce. If the total season's production were shipped out in one train, it would be almost three miles in length. Its load is onions, bunched radishes, cantaloupes; and celery, tomato and pepper transplants.

As great as this amount of vegetables may seem, it is the normal production each year of the Moapa Valley 60 miles northeast of Las Vegas. This valley ranges from 1600 feet elevation down to about 1250 at the shores of Lake Mead.

Agriculture in Clark County is not new. It was the search for agricultural land, in fact, that brought many early explorers into this area, enroute from Salt Lake City to southern California. During the early 1850s Mormons began their settlement expansion into what is now Clark County.

With the advent of the Union Pacific Railroad, agricultural production in the county shifted to cantaloupes and watermelons, followed by asparagus, carrots, beets, radishes and onions, and last the development of the transplant seedling industry. As the city of Las Vegas began to expand, other shifts were made in local farming practices to supply the ever-growing population. Chief among the new phases of farming stimulated by the young city was milk production, originally started on a commercial scale during the building of Hoover Dam.

When Hoover Dam electric power became available dairy farming spread to the Virgin Valley 30 miles northeast of Moapa Valley. Both valleys have continued dairy activity, until they are now the chief milk producing areas of Clark County.

Clark County has a total land area of a little over 5 million acres, a water surface of 145,000 acres in Lake Mead and ranks sixth in size in Nevada. Within the county is the 56,000 acres of the Charleston area of the Spring Mountain Range. Administered and protected by the U. S. Forest Service, Charleston gives us a complete change of climate within 40 miles of Las Vegas.

Of the 5 million acres in Clark County about 3 million are in the Searchlight Grazing District of the Bureau of Land Management. Most of the remaining 2 million acres are administered by other bureaus of the Department of the Interior. These agencies are the Fish and Wildlife Service which manages the Desert Game Refuge, the Bureau of Reclamation administering the Lake Mead and Lake Mojave areas, and the National Park Service that handles Lake Mead and Lake Mojave areas, and the National Park Service that handles Lake Mead Recreational Area and Hoover and Davis Dams.

Geographically Clark County is cut off from the direct paths of moisture-laden winds originating in oceans. It therefore has a true desert climate, with an average rainfall of about 4½ inches a year. Even though summer temperatures may climb to 110° and above, most generally the heat is not oppressive because of low humidity. Heat prostration is seldom encountered. Winters may bring night temperatures below freezing, occasionally in the 20s and sometimes lower. But the days for the most part are warm and pleasant. The last spring frost may come as late as the middle of May with the average date around March 30. Although November 7 is the average first fall frost, it has come as early as October 15. An average growing season for frost affected crops is around 220 days, a favorable situation that allows a wide planting selection. Small grains, many pasture grasses and clovers, as well as a large number of vegetables, all survive our winter temperatures.

About 5 percent of the population are rural residents, located in the agricultural communities of Overton, Logandale and Moapa in the Moapa Valley, and Mesquite and Bunkerville in the Virgin Valley. Around Las Vegas, developing as a fringe around the city, is an extensive part-time farming area. Pahrump Valley, Nevada's land of cotton, lies partly in Clark County.

Agriculture in Clark County depends entirely on irrigation. Water comes from a variety of sources — springs, artesian and pumped wells in Las Vegas and Pahrump, Lake Mead water (soon to be delivered in Las Vegas), from the Muddy River which originates in springs and furnishes water for both Upper and Lower Moapa Valleys, and from the Virgin River bringing water from southern Utah's Cedar Mountains into the Virgin Valley.

Total irrigated land in Clark County is estimated between 12 and 14 thousand acres. As additional wells are developed and more storage is provided, irrigated areas increase. Thousands of part-time farmers with from one to twenty acres each are swelling the totals of irrigated lands. When additional water becomes available a minimum of 50,000 acres of adaptable agricultural land awaits the plow and irrigation. This acreage is the equivalent in productive capacity of some 75,000 acres in more northern climes having a much shorter growing season.

Agricultural production in Clark County can be summarized under four major categories. First of these is livestock and livestock products (other than dairy). Several extensive regions in the County produce sheep and cattle. These are spring-summer-fall ranges in the Virgin Mountains, winter ranges near Searchlight and on the Mormon Mesa, and spring-fall ranges in the Spring, Desert, Sheep, and Muddy Mountain ranges. In addition several thousand head of cattle are brought during the fall into Clark County from other counties in Nevada and adjacent states for winter feeding and grazing.

As indicated heretofore dairy production in Clark County, since the inception of Hoover Dam power, has become a major activity in the Virgin and Moapa valleys. Conforming to the requirements of the Nevada Code for Grade A dairies, our dairymen are continually increasing and improving their facilities to produce a sustained supply of market milk. Nearly half of the consumptive demand for table milk of the Las Vegas area is produced year-round by dairies of Clark County.

Field and truck crops produced in Clark County are not only high in quality but represent a tremendously wide variation in number and kinds. Specialty crops, such as transplant seedlings, are produced by the millions. Over 40 million is the average number of tomato seedlings shipped each year to central Utah, western Colorado and parts of other western states. Radishes are produced by the hundreds of thousands of bunches. An estimated 30 thousand tons of alfalfa hay are produced in the County, furnishing feed not only for dairy animals, but for winter feeding of thousands of riding horses kept in and around Las Vegas, and for poultry and rabbit feeding. Winter wheat and barley are also raised, and many thousands of acres of permanent pasture provide grazing for sheep, cattle, and horses.

Poultry and poultry products is the fourth largest agricultural pursuit in Clark County. Meat and eggs produced for local sale meet an excellent demand. Mild winters and early springs common to Clark County, mean a steady flow of products. Effects of hot summer weather are easily overcome by providing suitable shelter for the birds.
