In the July issue of the PROSPECTOR (Vol 26 No 3, page11), the article ''REMEMBERING MY BROTHER' there was a mistake in the name of my DAR ancestor, Consider BROCKWAY, it was printed Consider BRICKLAY. I was hoping using the proper name BROCKWAY maybe someone else would be interested.

He was a very early pioneer; he and his family migrated into Pennsylvania and founded the town of Brockway, Pennsylvania. Not sure if there still is such a town or not; hope to find out.

NOTE: Have just located Brockway, PA on the computer. It's one (1) square mile and 2,100 population. There is a Historical Society listed and I'm anxious to write them.

VA GRAVESITE LOCATOR

Records showing where veterans and their spouses have been buried in Department of Veterans Affair's national cemeteries are available online at http://www.cem.va.gov and http://gravelocator.cem.va.gov. The locator will make it easy for anyone with Internet access to search for the gravesite locations of deceased family members and friends. The locator contains information on all veterans and dependents buried in VA's 120 cemeteries since the Civil War. It is updated nightly with information on burials the previous day. Refer to the home page, Burial and Memorial Benefits, to select the Nationwide Gravesite Locator to begin a search. State cemetery records are from those that use the VA's database to order government headstones and markers.

NEWS FROM THE FRONT

Chances are you have an ancestor who served in the US military. Three recent developments could help you uncover information about him or her:

- Genealogy Today has launched MILITARY ROOTS, http://www.militaryroots.com, a free database of information transcribed from sources such as rosters, muster rolls and troop histories. The database started with several thousand names; webmasters add new ones every week. You can search for surnames and opt to be notified if they're mentioned in records added later. Registration is required to read the full transcription. (On the results page, you'll see a $ next to matches, but if you click the Subscribe link, the fee shows up as FREE.) Each match shows a citation so you can consult the original source.
- The National Archives and Records Administration's (NARA) National Personnel Records Center archives.gov/st-louis/military-personnel, the St. Louis facility that holds 20th-century military service records, has opened nearly 1.2 million personnel files of enlisted US Navy and Marine Corps members who served between 1885 and 1939. NARA gets custody of service records 62 years after the service member's separation from the military.
- The Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War, http://www.suvcw.org, the successor to the now-defunct Grand Army of the Republic (GAR), has posted a free database of Union and Confederate veteran's burial information (even though the GAR admitted only Union vets) gathered by members and other volunteers.

Search the National Graves Registration Database on variables such as a soldier's name, military unit and the cemetery where he's buried. Click a name in the results list to see details including death date and age, Civil War unit, enlistment and discharge dates and burial details. You can submit data, too; click Create Account to get authorized.

VA ADDS MAPS to ONLINE GRAVESITE LOCATOR

WASHINGTON (June 20, 2006) - The grave locations of more than three million veterans and dependents buried in national cemeteries can be found more easily now because the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) has added maps of burial sections online that can be printed from home computers and at national cemetery kiosks. The latest improvement builds upon a service begun two years ago, in which a VA online feature permits family members to find the cemetery in which their loved one is buried.

"This new map feature makes it easier for families, friends and researchers to find the exact location of a veteran's grave in all national cemeteries and some state veterans cemeteries," said the Honorable R. James NICHOLSON, Secretary of Veterans Affairs. "It enhances VA's service at national cemeteries, already highly regarded, and our commitment to them as national shrines and historical treasures."

The gravesite locator (http://gravelocator.cem.va.gov), online since April 2004, helps veterans' families, former comrades-in-arms and others find the cemeteries where veterans are buried. With the new online feature, people enter a veteran's name to search, click on the "Buried At" (burial location) link and a map of the national cemetery is displayed, showing the section where the grave is located.

In a related development, VA recently added to its database the cemeteries in which 1.9 million veterans were buried with VA grave markers. These are mostly private cemeteries. This addition brings the number of graves recorded in the locator to approximately five million. Those with maps are in VA national cemeteries and in state veterans cemeteries and Arlington National Cemetery if burials were since 1999.

Beyond the five million records now available, VA continues to add approximately 1,000 new records to the database each day. VA also plans to add to its online database the exact locations of veterans' gravesites in the remaining state veterans cemeteries.

In the midst of the largest cemetery expansion since the Civil War, VA operates 123 national cemeteries in 39 states and Puerto Rico and 33 soldiers' lots and monument sites. More than three million Americans, including veterans of every war and conflict - from the Revolutionary War to the Global War on Terror - are buried in VA's national cemeteries on more than 16,000 acres of land.

Veterans with a discharge other than dishonorable, their spouses, and eligible dependent children may be buried in a national cemetery. Other burial benefits include a burial flag, Presidential Memorial Certificate, and a government headstone or marker - even if they are not buried in a national cemetery. Information on VA burial benefits can be obtained from national cemetery offices, from the Internet at http://www.cem.va.gov or by calling VA regional offices toll-free at 1 800-827-1000.

QUERY GUIDELINES

by John FISCHER (CCNGS), Robert KENNARD, Jr (CCNGS) and Helen SMITH (CCNGS)

"Submit queries early and often"

The following guidelines for writing genealogical queries or posting queries to internet message boards may be helpful.

- 1. WHO: Identify the person or a linking person you are looking for. Use the full name and include alternate spellings and spelling in a different language if known. e.g. John in English, Johann in German and Johannas in Latin. Include diacritical marks in names such as Bohn in English and Böhn in German.
- 2. WHAT: What do you want to know. State exactly what it is that you are looking for. Are you looking for parents, children, siblings, ancestors, descendants, birth, death, marriage, location, etc.
- 3. WHEN: Date and place them in time. Include as much information as possible for the reader to be able to identify the person(s) in the query. You may include their parents names and birth dates, burial dates, emigration/immigration dates, military service dates, graduation dates, baptism or other significant religious dates, names and birth dates of children, etc.
- 4. WHERE: Identify an area where you know the person was living. Include as much information about locations as possible. You may include town, village, county, district and country of birth, marriage and death locations, addresses of residences over a the life of the individual, place of burial, name and location of schools attended, name and location of work places, name and location of marriage place, etc. Include diacritical marks in locations such as Tomazow in English and Tomazòw in Polish. Use both English and foreign language spellings such as Rheinland-Pfalz in German and Rhineland-Palatinate in English or Bavaria in English and Bayern in German.
- 5. All surnames in the heading and the body of the query should be in caps and bolded.
- 6. All surnames contained in the title should be listed alphabetically, bolded and in caps in the heading.
- 7. Names of all countries should be spelled out in their entirety except for the United States where USA is acceptable. USA is not needed if the query is for the United States only.
- 8. Always include the names of counties if possible. The abbreviation Co. is acceptable but the spelling out of the word "County" is preferred.
- 9. Using the standard U.S. postal system abbreviation for a state is acceptable. e.g. MA, PA, NV.
- 10. Normal genealogical abbreviations are acceptable. e.g., b. for born; d. for death date; bur. for buried; m. for married, etc.
- 11. Confine your query to one person or a married couple if possible.
- 12. Always include how you are related to the individual(s) in the query and an easy way for you to be contacted (Email, address, phone, etc.).
- 13. Keep copies and create a log of your queries indicating when and to whom they were sent.
- 14. It is important to be as consistent as possible when writing queries.
- 15. Short concise queries are more likely to be read.

INITIALS IN THE CENSUS

Ann SHUTTLEWORTH

In searching census enumerations, I've found using an initial rare, but when all else fails it sometimes works, especially if the person is an apprentice, patient, or prisoner.

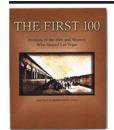

Leaving out all names and using place names also works at times. I found a SMALLPAGE family quite by chance as the index listed them as "Sinallfoge," and it was only by using place name with nothing else that I found this family.

This is trickier in the 1841 census, where my GREATHEAD family continue to have amazing variations in interpretation, Ger* and Cre* being two alternatives under which they were indexed.

OCTOBER - FAMILY HISTORY MONTH in NEVADA

Wordscape: Other Probate Records

Patricia Law HATCHER, CG, FASG

Whether the deceased died with or without a will, if he left estate (property either real or personal), there should have been a probate—in theory. In practice, however, we often find that for small estates with only personal property, there are no records. Other families never got around to doing the paper work. Often what we find is evidence decades later in deed books describing what I call silent inheritance of land (this is not a legal term), through primogeniture, family agreement, or assignment.

Each step in the probate process generated paper. Appearances and actions at the probate court were recorded. Early in our history, you will find these entries amid deeds and other records as officials were thrifty in using one book. Later there was often a general probate volume and even later there were likely separate volumes for wills, administrations, guardianships, court orders, and so on.

The name of the court handling probate varies greatly. Val Greenwood, in Researcher's Guide to American Genealogy, mentions such titles as Court of the Ordinary, Surrogate Court, Orphan's Court, Circuit Court, Superior Court, District Court, and County Court. You will also find a variety of officials involved. I've worked with records overseen by clerks, judges, justices, prothonotaries, registers or registrars, and surrogates.

Loose papers were held in a probate file. Although I've been using the term probate, an equally common term is estate, so you may need to look for estate files. These should (again, in theory) include the will (with your ancestor's real signature) and everything else that came along. You'll find large folded sheets and tiny scraps of paper. In counties where the probate files have been retained, I often find that it is the tiny scraps of paper that provide a key solution to a genealogical problem.

In some places, these files have been destroyed by fire or flood or seriously damaged by rodents, insects, and mildew. Not all jurisdictions have them. I know of one county (which shall remain nameless to prevent an organized band of genealogists from marching on the courthouse) in which the county (many years ago) copied all the wills into books labeled "Wills," administrations in volumes labeled "Administrations," inventories into volumes labeled "Inventories," guardianships into volumes labeled "Guardianships," and then efficiently threw all of the loose paper away.

Miscellaneous Probate Documents

Assuming you are working in a county that still has them, what might you find in an estate file?

At the beginning of the probate process, the executors must present bonds to insure that they will be financially responsible. The identities of the bondsmen may offer substantial genealogical clues. If the widow was the executrix or administratrix, then her bondsmen may be her father and brothers. These documents will have original signatures of the bondsmen, so look for any estate file within your extended ancestral family.

Most files should contain an inventory of the goods and chattels of the deceased, which may also be copied into a probate volume. Basically goods included personal items and household items. The meaning of chattels is a bit broader, including farm animals, notes and bonds and their accrued interest, slaves, and other non-personal items of value. It did not include land. Most inventories did not include specific items that were explicitly disposed of in the will.

At the end is a grand total of the value, often immediately followed by a couple of items that were left out, followed by another grand total. In most cases, it was men taking inventory (usually including a neighbor or family member, with one man chosen for his experience and ability to write and add). They usually signed the inventory, another opportunity for genealogists to locate an ancestral signature.

Often the executors or administrators held a sale of the personal property of the deceased. This may be called a vendue. The record of the items sold, the price fetched, and the purchasers are often in the probate file. Your ancestors most likely attended the vendues for their neighbors and relatives. Look at those probate files, and you may learn that your ancestor bought a pig, or a plow, or a parcel of old clothes.

There may be a separate listing of debts, but most often this is incorporated into the accounting, where we learn whether the estate was solvent. There may be a second accounting, often reporting ongoing expenses for the support of the widow and children. Then there is a final accounting or distribution (occasionally there is also an earlier distribution).

Many estates go on for years and years, so you will find documents relating to changes in guardianship as children grow older and changes in executor or administrator, usually due to death. When an executor dies midprocess, the court can appoint an administrator de bonis non, who is charged with seeing that the remaining goods of the estate are properly overseen and distributed according to the terms of the will.

An estate file may hold signed receipts on which the heirs acknowledged that they had received their inheritance. Often these are small pieces of paper. Most commonly, a married daughter's receipt is signed by her husband.

THE INFLATION CALCULATOR

By Ralph L. McNEAL, Sr.

How often have you looked at old deeds from the early 1800s, a purchase of property, closing documents, Last Wills and Testament and the U. S. Census stating how much your ancestors paid or the value specified for real estate property for tax purposes? Wouldn't it be nice to know the value of your ancestor's estate or assets passed to heirs? Did you ever wonder what the value of that specified amount would be in today's dollars For example property costing $750.00 purchased in 1820_ would be valued at today's dollars $9,031.83. Conversely, anything costing $750.00 today would cost $62.28 in 1820.

What is a First Cousin, Twice Removed?

by Genealogy.com

If someone walked up to you and said "Howdy, I'm your third cousin, twice removed," would you have any idea what they meant? Most people have a good understanding of basic relationship words such as "mother," "father," "aunt," "uncle," "brother," and "sister." But what about the relationship terms that we don't use in everyday speech? Terms like "second cousin" and "first cousin, once removed"? We don't tend to speak about our relationships in such exact terms ("cousin" seems good enough when you are introducing one person to another), so most of us aren't familiar with what these words mean.

Relationship Terms

Sometimes, especially when working on your family history, it's handy to know how to describe your family relationships more exactly. The definitions below should help you out.

Cousin (a.k.a "first cousin")

Your first cousins are the people in your family who have two of the same grandparents as you. In other words, they are the children of your aunts and uncles.

Second Cousin

Your second cousins are the people in your family who have the same great-grandparents as you, but not the same grandparents.

Third, Fourth, and Fifth Cousins

Your third cousins have the same great-great-grandparents, fourth cousins have the same great-great-grandparents, and so on.

When the word "removed" is used to describe a relationship, it indicates that the two people are from different generations. You and your first cousins are in the same generation (two generations younger than your grandparents), so the word "removed" is not used to describe your relationship. The words "once removed" mean that there is a difference of one generation. For example, your mother's first cousin is your first cousin, once removed. This is because your mother's first cousin is one generation younger than your grandparents and you are two generations younger than your grandparents. This one-generation difference equals "once removed." Twice removed means that there is a two-generation difference. You are two generations younger than a first cousin of your grandmother, so you and your grandmother's first cousin are first cousins, twice removed.

Relationship Charts Simplify Everything

Now that you have an idea of what these different words mean, take a look at the chart below. It's called a relationship chart, and it can help you figure out how different people in your family are related. It's much simpler than it looks, just follow the instructions.

Instructions for Using a Relationship Chart 1.

- 1. Pick two people in your family and figure out which ancestor they have in common. For example, if you chose yourself and a cousin, you would have a grandparent in common.
- 2. Look at the top row of the chart and find the first person's relationship to the common ancestor.
- 3. Look at the far left column of the chart and find the second person's relationship to the common ancestor.
- 4. Determine where the row and column containing those two relationships meet.

Just When You Thought You Had it

CAN YOU HELP US?

Here is something you can do for your Society even if you live far away from Las Vegas. We are working to improve "The PROSPECTOR" with people who would be willing to become part of our PROSPECTOR staff. Your job would be to help us [Helen (Editor) and Bob (Publisher)] by getting one or two articles a year which we could use in The PROSPECTOR. You could write the articles yourself, ask interesting speakers you have heard to write an article, contact experts in a field that interests you and ask them to write an article, contact authors who have written interesting articles in other journals to write for us, etc. We think, by getting our members involved, we will have a more balanced journal and be able to print articles that will be of interest to a wider audience.

CLARK COUNTY SCHOOL DISTRICT

The Prospector is pleased to continue a series of articles which feature schools in the Clark County (Nevada) School District named in honor of individuals from the Clark County, Nevada area. The information presented has been extracted from material derived from each of the schools so honored.

Ruthe V. DESKIN Elementary School

Ruthe V. DESKIN

February 20, 1916 - February 14, 2004

The daughter of a pioneer mother Viola A GOLDSWORTHY (b. 1898 NV) and mining engineer-feed store owner father James C DESKIN (b. 1893 UT), Ruthe V. DESKIN was born 20 Feb 1916, in the mining and agricultural community of Yerington (NV).

She was educated in a two-story schoolhouse that today is a state landmark. Her father was a mining engineer who also ran a feed store that he lost because of the Depression.

29 January 1920, Ruthe lived with her parents and sister Eleanor (b. 1919) in Spragg Precinct, Lyon County, Nevada. Then 2 April 1930, they were in Yerington City, Lyon County, Nevada with brother Myron J (b. 1925)

Early on, DESKIN worked as a newspaper girl, loading up her wagon and delivering the Reno Evening Gazette to homes. She was graduated from Yerington High School, where she was all-state in basketball, and from the University of Nevada Reno.

During World War II DESKIN worked as an Employee Relations Director for the Army's Herlong Ordnance Depot, earning the Extra-Meritorious Civilian Service Medal. She was one of only a handful of women in the United States to receive that honor.

She was women's section editor of the Reno Evening Gazette before moving to Las Vegas in 1950.

Among her many honors were awards from the Nevada Press

Association, Faith Lutheran High School, the Las Vegas Chamber of Commerce, the Southern Nevada Association for the Handicapped, the Nevada Woman's Political Caucus, and Hadassah.

Mrs DESKIN was an inductee of the Yerington High School Graduate Hall of Fame. An elementary school in Las Vegas and an activities center at Clark County's Child Haven home for displaced children bear her name.

Ruthe DESKIN was an award-winning chronicler of life in Las Vegas and assistant to the publisher of the Las Vegas Sun for 50 Years.

In her column that ran for a half-century, Mrs. DESKIN championed the arts, care for abused and neglected children, treatment for drug addicts, hospice for seniors, and homes for abandoned animals.

"Ruthe DESKIN" represented not only the conscience of the Las Vegas Sun but, for 50 years, the conscience of Las Vegas," said Sun Editor and President Brian GREENSPUN.

"No on will ever replace Ruthe in the Sun newsroom" said Gov. Kenny GUINN. "She touched countless lives during her journalism career."

Ruthe V. (GOLDSWORTHY) DESKIN, 87, of Las Vegas, passed away Feb. 14, 2004. Ruthe is survived by her daughters, Terry Jane GIALKETSIS (m. 9/23/1969 Samuel J) and Nancy CUMMINGS, both of Las Vegas; her stepson, Jack of Apple Valley, Calif.; her brother Myron GOLDSWORTHY; her sister, Eleanor GOTTSCHALK, both of Lovelock; two grandchildren; and four greatgrandchildren.

She was buried Thursday, 19 February 2004, at Palm Memorial Park, Las Vegas, Clark County, Nevada (NV).

Birth Records, Old and New

George G. MORGAN

Birth records can be a source of tremendous information for family historians. However, locating the records can often be an exercise in frustration. First of all, we have to look in the right location. However, even if we have the right location, there may be political road-blocks before us. For instance, some states will not allow anyone to obtain a copy of a birth certificate unless they are A) the actual person, B) the parent or legal guardian of the person, or C) the proven descendent of the person. There are many places where evidence of a person's birth can be found.

Getting Started

Whenever I begin the process of locating evidence of birth for an individual in the U.S., I begin with what I know. Where were they born? If I know the answer to this question, then it is important to determine what geopolitical entity had jurisdiction over the area at the time. In other words, in what state and county or parish did the event occur? Often this entails working with current maps and then with maps of the time of the event. When I've figured out the correct county or parish, I consult "Ancestry's Red Book." In this essential reference, I can check the state table, by county, of when birth (and other) records began being kept. I also read the text there indicating when full compliance by all counties was reached for birth record keeping was met and where birth records are typically found. Depending on the state and/or county, originals or copies may be in the county in the office of the recorder of deeds, the county clerk, in the vital records office or at the health department. They may have been provided to the state government's department of vital statistics or other office. In any case, it is important to check on this because it is possible that copies of records missing at the county level may possibly be found at the state level.

If I learn from "Ancestry's Red Book" that governmental birth records were not created and kept at the time in question, I immediately know to save time and look elsewhere for records.

Certificates of Live Birth

If you are fortunate enough to locate a copy of a birth certificate, you should find information including the name of the person, the date of birth, the county and township of birth, the hospital or other place of birth, the name of the mother and father, the parents' address(es), the ages and races of the parents, the name of the attending physician, date of registration, and the volume and page of registration by the county. In addition, you may find information about other children born to this mother, including those stillborn and/or previously born but deceased at the time of this birth.

Certificates for Stillborn Children

Certificates for stillborn children may be more problematic for your research. Because of fraudulent use of information about stillborn children, some states have sealed records of stillborn children and allow no access to the records. Others have held the records for a specific period and then destroyed them. In any event, records about stillborn children are nearly impossible to obtain. You most frequently must rely on medical records, newspaper notices such as obituaries, funeral home records, etc., to locate information about stillbirths.

Medical Records

ISSN: 1085-3707

In some cases, with sufficient proof of your identity or direct relationship to the person you are researching, you may be able to obtain a letter from a physician or from a hospital confirming the date and details of a birth. Because of the possibility of potential fraud and the requirement of maintaining confidentiality of patient information, be prepared for your inquiry to be closely scrutinized.

Religious Records

Church records can provide important evidence of birth. If you can determine the name and location of the person's religious institution, you may find records of birth, christening, confirmation, bar mitzvah or bat mitzvah, and other records that reference the individual's birth.

Delayed Birth Certificates

Children born outside a hospital, perhaps at home with the services of a relative or midwife, may not have been issued a birth certificate. Others whose births occurred before the time when the recording of births was mandated by state law also lacked natal documentation. In these cases, they may have required that a Delayed Certificate of Birth be issued in order to obtain a passport, to apply for Social Security benefits, to enlist in a branch of the service or for some other purpose.

In 1971, for example, as my father prepared to apply to collect Social Security retirement benefits, he applied in the State of North Carolina for a delayed birth certificate. The process entailed obtaining at least three pieces of evidence to confirm his date of birth. In his case, his delayed birth certificate indicated that he provided the following pieces of evidence and the dates of the documents:

- * Family Bible that was in his possession (and his address) in which the copyright date of the bible and the detailed birth entry were
- * A life insurance policy issued by a specific company, the issuer's address, the policy number, and the issue date of 6/11/1940 (The state presumed that the insurance company had previously verified the date of birth of the insured.)
- * Copy of the 1920 Federal census record issued to my father by the U.S. Department of Commerce, Washington, D.C., indicating my father's age in years at the time of the census.

The delayed birth certificate application was processed in Alamance County, NC, the county of his birth, and the Office of Vital Statistics in Raleigh signed off that no prior birth certificate was on file in their office. The application was approved and a certificate was issued.

In another instance, my maternal grandmother's eldest sister provided similar evidence for her in 1951 in the form of a sworn affidavit stating the date of my grandmother's birth.

Seeking Alternative Evidence

The point of sharing this with you is to tell you to consider the possibility that there may be other evidence of birth other than a birth certificate created at the time of the birth. As my father proved, he could locate at least three alternative forms of evidence of his birth. If you look for these alternative research paths, the chances are that you can find other information sources too.

Did Grandma Marry in the Dairy State?

Family Tree Magazine Email Update; Thu, 11 May 2006

The Wisconsin Historical Society has followed through on its vow to add a marriage database to its online pre-1907 vital-records indexes. Visit http://www.wisconsinhistory.org/vitalrecords to search more than 1 million marriages between 1836 and Sept. 30, 1907, by last name plus optional first name, county and date. You also can search on just a county and year. Most marriages are indexed by both bride and groom.

Besides marriages, the index also lists birth and death records dated between 1852 and 1907. Click Details for more information on a match, then Buy to order a copy of the record for $15.

- Q: WHY DO GENEALOGISTS DIE WITH SMILES ON THEIR FACES?
- A: 'CAUSE THEY KNOW THEY'RE ABOUT TO GET ONE MORE DATE ON THEIR PEDIGREE CHART!!

Ancestry Weekly Journal (28 May 2006) - Your Quick Tips Check Under Middle Names

Recently in looking for another non-related family in the 1910 census, I finally found my grandparents, father, and uncles! No wonder I hadn't been able to find them initially. The family was listed under my grandfather's middle name. There they were the whole family with the last name ELWOOD instead of REITENBAUGH! I can hear the census taker asking my grandfather what his name was and the reply being "Joseph ELWOOD." Any dummy knew that the census taker had stopped at the REITENBAUGH household. Wasn't that obvious? This is probably only one story out of thousands about the 'hazards' of finding our ancestors in the census records. I have done the same detail as you suggested for finding family in the 1840 and prior census records. It is tricky to say the least and too often there is more than one household that seems to be a match. I guess that's what makes genealogy fascinating-the mystery, the search, and the discovery. Doris WILLS

Extra People in the Household in Pre-1850 Censuses

When researching in pre-1850 censuses, don't forget that sometimes those "extra males" were hired help. Even youngsters 12-16 often lived with someone else to help bring home money or food in exchange for their labor.

Wedding Witness Romances

Don't dismiss wedding witnesses lightly. They may have been either engaged friends, or at least courting, and could be found married later.

Comments

I had a set of great-great-great grandparents that I could not find in any of the 1900 census indices. His name was enumerated backwards, as Hunt ELSTON, rather than Elston HUNT. Try every permutation!

Comment by Sara GREDLER — 29 May 2006

I found my great-grandfather in the 1900 census, but then heseemed to disappear. I couldn't find him in any other census. So I went back to the 1900 page and noted the names of the families who were enumerated on the same page. When I looked for one of these families the 1910 census, sure enough—there was my ancestor, still living next door. His name had been so badly misspelled that it did not show up in the index.

Comment by Mary Lou TOWNSEND — 30 May 2006

There may also be extra females in those earlier census counts too. Often a young couple would have a 'girl' to help with housework especially if there were very young children. It may have been a relative or a neighbors child. So when looking for Aunt Bea, Uncle Andy and newborn Opie - There might just be a teenager of either sex living in the household - life was much more labor intensive then. Comment by Judy NEILSON — 31~May~2006

German or Early names: starting with Anna Marie dropped the first name and went with the Middle name Marie

Johann Frederick went by Frederick

My Father Frank Melvin MARKLEY, went all of his life by Melvin, My Mother Mildred Lucile (CUNNINGHAM) MARKLEY went all of her life with Lucile.

I have to figure they did know why they went by their Middle name, just continuing a trait.

Genealogical Peripheral Vision

By Erin RIGBY

A few weeks ago a friend of mine was showing me her recent research. She had a breakthrough on a difficult line by researching a witness to a marriage who turned out to be important to her family line. She had the document for some time, but hadn't thought to research that person before. This got me thinking. How many times do we overlook those people and miss critical information?

I have heard many genealogical breakthrough stories that involve looking at the next census sheet, researching a person on a document that didn't seem to be directly related, or looking in a county that the family didn't live in. These bits of information are found by doing searches that are seemingly outside the focus of the research. I like to call this "genealogical peripheral vision." Hopefully by using your genealogical peripheral vision, breakthroughs can be more deliberate.

In many of the documents a genealogist uses, there are periphery people. If you find a name on a record related to your family, and you aren't sure who that person is, it is a good idea to find out how they relate to the document and your family. Witnesses to marriages and wills are good places to start, but be creative. Periphery people can be found in other places as well. It may sound like extra work, but researching these people may lead you to the answers you have been looking for.

Because many families lived near each other, look at a few pages before and after the page where your family is found on the census. I have seen many people find a family in the census they had been unable to find before because of a horribly misspelled last name.

While researching, keep in mind families that you aren't focused on but who lived in the same area. Keeping these other families in mind can help you spot them as you sift through information and may indirectly benefit you.

Another place to use your genealogical peripheral vision is in neighboring counties and states, especially when your family lived near a border. With the constantly fluctuating counties in the United States, this can solve many problems. For example, I found birth and death dates for an entire family when I looked in a cemetery book of the neighboring county.

Honing your genealogical peripheral vision can help you find information you weren't necessarily looking for but that is pertinent to your family line.

Tips from the Pros:

Easily Record Source Information on Copies from George G. MORGAN

When you make a photocopy of a page from a pertinent book at a library or archive, make a note of the publication information for your source citation. Include:

- · Author's name(s)
- · Title
- · City and state (and country if foreign) of publication
- · Name of publisher
- · Year of publication
- Other appropriate information (volume number, edition, etc.)
- · Repository where you located the material
- · The date you accessed the material

When you return home, you can type this information in your word processor in a bibliographic citation format. Feed the photocopies through your printer so that the citation will be neatly printed on the back of the photocopies you made from that source.

CUT THROUGH THE RED TAPE

Solicitors kept their clients papers in a file folder tied with red ribbon to prevent the papers from falling out. Of course, when they wanted to get at the papers, they would have to cut through the red tape.

Note from Glenn BARRY: I read that "red tape" came from the Indian Administrative Service practice of tying files with tape, these were moved by "Peons" by hand from office to office. No senior person would move a file no matter how important because of the caste system. Thus the uneducated lower caste would slow down the movement of files, thus the files were tied up with red tape, having been to India in recent times and seen this still the case I can understand where it came from.

One official I went to see had the file we were talking about on the bench behind him but rang his bell for the peon to come, which took some minutes, and then asked him to get the file! This took .2 of a second.

SHARING FAMILY STORIES

Each generation creates lifetime stories that should be shared with the next generation. With families spread across the world we seldom take time to convey the stories that conned us with our past and future generations.

Memoir writing is one way to ensure that your children and grandchildren have a link to their family's past. It's a process of capturing stories you remember being told as a child, as well as the ones you create in your own life, and putting them in an enduring format. These are your stories, which can be read and appreciated for years to come. Use photographer where available, to enhance your story and add a family tree in the beginning of your book to show the connection between the people in the stories.

Make this a fun project for everyone in the family. Get them to write a memoir, compile them into a "Family Stories" book. Copies of the book distributed at a family reunion is a real big hit!

CHECK FOR CORNER MARKERS

Cheryl JORDAN

When visiting cemeteries in search of long-lost relatives, check to see if the particular cemetery used corner markers to mark the lots of families. Local cemeteries in some areas of southwestern Ohio have lots marked at the four corners with the initials of the primary owner. Sometimes you may discover a "new" family member buried within the lot alongside more familiar names.

Education and Genealogy

By Erin RIGBY

As genealogy grows in popularity as a hobby and profession, so does interest in genealogical education. There are an expanding number of institutions that have programs or classes in genealogy. Some offer degrees and others grant certificates. There are programs that require attendance at a university; others are exclusively online. There are a variety of educational opportunities out there and hopefully this introduction to them will inspire you to continue learning.

Brigham Young University (BYU) in Provo, Utah has a wide range of different programs in family history. Its undergraduate program includes source classes, writing family histories, methodology, history, paleography and more. Those classes can culminate in a bachelor's degree in Family History/Genealogy. For those who don't have the opportunity to attend BYU, there is a certificate program available through the university's independent study program available on the Internet. In addition, BYU offers free genealogy courses on the Internet for those not interested in earning the certificate.

Many other schools offer certificates in genealogy. The University of Washington in Seattle offers a certificate through its Outreach Program. Canada's National Institute for Genealogical Studies teamed up with the University of Toronto to put together a certificate program completely online. There are also schools that have genealogy certificates in conjunction with library science programs, like Monterey Peninsula College and Hartnell College. Each has classes that cover the basics of genealogy. Some of them delve deeper and have regional source, methodology, as well as Internet classes. For more ideas, Cyndi's List www.cyndislist.com has an entire section on education that includes links to several programs.

These programs provide you with a good base of knowledge.

However, there are always new sources, programs and methods to learn about in genealogy. Attending conferences, subscribing to journals like the National Genealogical Society Quarterly, and attending classes that may be provided by local libraries and genealogical or historical societies are good ways to keep current with new developments.

Whether you are a beginner or an expert there are always new things to learn. There are so many different programs and classes available that there is something for everyone. Now go out and learn something new!

7 Oct 2006 - Henderson Convention Ctr - $45 at Door START PLANNING YOUR 2007 REUNION NOW!!

by Helen L. SMITH

You just finished your summer vacation and are just settling into the routine that comes with the kids going back to school.

This is the time to start planning your 2007 Family Reunion. Actually, many books say you should start planning a Family Reunion two years in advance.

If you and your relatives are going to hold a Family Reunion next summer (or the following summer), it is time to start the planning process. There are many books, magazines articles, and on-line sites which give excellent guidelines on how to plan a successful Family Reunion.

After you decide whom your reunion committee is going to be, it is time to go to your library or bookstore to gather resources to assist you in planning a great reunion.

Don't wait! Time will go quickly as you go through the planning and notification process. Remember, if you want a successful reunion, you need to notify family members well in advance of the date so that they have time to make arrangements to join you in the fun.

STARTNOW, PLANEARLY, NOTIFY RELATIVES EARLY, THEN SIT BACK AND ENJOY THE FRUITS OF YOUR LABOR!

Saving Graves

How to Interpret Gravestone Motifs

These are a few of the many motifs that are found on gravestones along with some of the more commonly held interpretations of their symbolism.

- Skull Mortality. Because it is what survives of the living once the body is destroyed, it is also used to represent life and thought, especially in alchemy, where it is the receptacle used in transmutation processes. In Christianity, a skull wearing a crown of thorns means eternal damnation.
- Stag Life, Wisdom, Regeneration and Growth, Virility. Because its antlers resemble branches, the stag has been associated with the Tree of Life and because of the way it renews its antlers, it's been used as a symbol of regeneration. In the West during the Middle Ages, the stag was often shown with a crucifix between its horns where, in Christianity, it represents purity and solitude and was the enemy of Satan, the serpent. The Celts believed the stag led souls through the darkness. The stag also was associated with warriors and hunting in Celtic culture and in Greco-Roman mythology where it was an animal sacred to Artemis. In Buddhism, the golden stag represents knowledge. The Chinese regard it as a symbol of virility and happiness.
- Star The Spirit, Divine Presence, Enlightenment, Wisdom, Human Aspiration. Represents light struggling against darkness. The Babylonian goddess Ishtar's emblem was an eight-pointed star and females such as Astarte, Isis, and the Virgin Mary are often pictured with a crown of stars. Stars are sometimes believed to be the souls of the dead with comets being seen as foretellers of doom and a sign of the anger of the sun god. Stars often take on additional meaning depending on their color, shape, number of points and arrangement. The most common, the five pointed star, comes from Egyptian hieroglyphics where it meant "rising upwards toward the point of origin" and formed part of words such as "to bring up," "to educate," "the teacher".
- Star of David Symbol of Judaism and the State of Israel. This star, comprised of an overlapping upright and an inverted triangle, is associated with David because he carried a hexagrammic shield against Goliath. The interlocking triangles represent the union of opposites. The Kabbalists believed this emblem had protective power and magical properties. It is also called the Creator's Star with each point representing the days of the week and the hexagram representing the Sabbath.
- Stars & Stripes Around Eagle Eternal Vigilance, Liberty
- Steps A common symbol used around the world, steps generally mean Ascension, Stages or Levels. The number of steps brings the meaning of numbers into the interpretation as does the symbolism of any objects that surround or are a part of the steps. In Romanesque art, steps represent the relationship between worlds. In many religions steps, or a ladder, are seen as the path to god. For alchemists of the Middle Ages, steps were associated with the transmutation process.

She has also been the subject of extensive news articles in the Des Moines Register, The San Jose [California] Mercury-News, and others.

TOPICS:

Court Records: The System and Its Records

This lecture includes an overview of the court system and the records it generates. Specific examples explain how to locate and use these valuable documents. Differs from the Courthouse lecture.

"Solving" the Problem Onsite in 25 Hours or Less!

This lecture is one of the favorites. Strategies are presented to maximize onsite research, with a case study to illustrate it. The same strategies can be used even when not onsite.

Using Little Known and Neglected Sources: A Potpourri

In this lecture a variety of records are discussed, from land to federal to court and military. The examples presented will open many doors to the researchers who think they've examined everything.

Avoid the Crooked Path! Genealogical Problem Solving

Demonstrates with overheads and case studies how to zero in on the goal, reduce the problem, and stay on the path to solve it. A great motivational talk.

Massachusetts Death Index is now Online

Posted by Dick EASTMAN on September 13, 2006

The Massachusetts Archives has created a FREE online index for all recorded deaths in the state from 1841 through 1910. If you are looking for information about a Massachusetts ancestor, this can be a great resource.

I used the online database and found it to be super simple to use. You can search by first and last names, year, and city or town. You may also specify a start year and end year for your search. You simply enter whatever information you have, leave the unknown fields empty and then click SEARCH. A second or two later, all records that match your search parameters are displayed on your screen.

The only anomaly I found is that there is a check box labeled "Death" that has a default setting of unchecked. It is the only selection available but if you do not check it you receive an error of "A Type must be selected." That seems strange when there is only one type of record available but perhaps they are planning a future expansion. In any case, don't forget to check the entry for DEATH.

Here is a result of typical search:

Last Name	First Name	Town	Years	Volume	Page	Type
Eastman	George C.	Lowell	1884	356	112	Death

As you can see, the information provided is strictly an index; it does not contain the details. You must contact the Massachusetts State Archives to obtain a copy of the original information which usually specifies the exact date of death and often also lists date of birth, surviving next of kin, cause of death, residence and more. In the above case, you would need to order the record for George C. EASTMAN as listed in volume 356, page 112. You will be charged a small fee for the copy.

The same records have been microfilmed and are available through an LDS Family History Centers near you. Images of the original records with full details are also available on a members-only section of the New England Historic Genealogical Society's web site.

This is a great resource: free genealogy information available to you in the privacy of your home, any time, day or night.

To view the Massachusetts Death Index for the years 1841 through 1910, go to http://www.sec.state.ma.us/vitalrecordssearch/ VitalRecordsSearch.aspx

My thanks to Susan DAILY for telling me about this valuable new online database.

TOPICS:

1) Court Records: The System and Its Records

This lecture includes an overview of the court system and the records it generates. Specific examples explain how to locate and use these valuable documents.

- 2) "Solving" the Problem Onsite in 25 Hours or Less! This lecture is one of the favorites. Strategies are presented to maximize onsite research, with a case study to illustrate it. The same strategies can be used even when not onsite.
- 3) Using Little Known and Neglected Sources: A Potpourri

In this lecture a variety of records are discussed, from land to federal to court and military. The examples presented will open many doors to the researchers who think they've examined everything.

4) Avoid the Crooked Path! Genealogical Problem Solving Demonstrates with overheads and case studies how to zero in on the goal, reduce the problem, and stay on the path to solve it. A great motivational talk.
